Victor in California Primary Will Fly to White House.

President Willing To Talk With Him

Politics Are Tabooed by Chief Executive, However.

High lights in Tuesday's primaries:

Upton Sinclair, former Socialist pamphleteer, blanketed his opponents for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in California.

Senator Hubert Stephens and former Gov. Theodore Bilbo will enter a run-off to decide their Democratic Senatorial candidacy in Mississippi.

South Carolina voted wet in an advisory referendum. Olin D. Johnston led Cole Blease by more than 16,000 votes in the race for the Democratic nomination for governor.

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—Upton Sinclair, after one of the greatest upsets in California political history, tonight made plans to go immediately to Washington by airplane, and place before the White House his "EPIC Plan" to end poverty if he is elected Governor on the Democratic ticket.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 29.—President Roosevelt is willing to meet Upton Sinclair, victor in the California Democratic gubernatorial primary yesterday, providing politics is tabooed.

This decision was proclaimed at Summer White House headquarters today coincident with the receipt of a telegram from the author and Socialist, seeking an appointemnt.

Under Mr. Roosevelt's direction, a reply was sent informing Mr. Sinclair that the Chief Executive would be glad to see him if the importance of his visit warranted it, but on no condition would be discuss the political situation in California.

The President's attitude, it was declared, was not to be interpreted as a rebuff to Mr. Sinclair, it was said, the same policy will be applied to other cases, even as to such stalwart partisans as Joseph Guffey, who is running for Senator in Pennsylvania.

Heretofore, the White House has often professed its neutrality in respect to Democratic primaries. But today's action extends the same policy to cover all regular elections—Senatorial and gubernatorial as well.

Regardless of party affiliation, the President will reject interviews with all candidates who seek to discuss politics, it was asserted emphatically. And no longer will party leaders be welcome at the White House, it was said, unless their mission concerns other matters.

This was affirmed despite the frequency with which both candidates and politicians have appeared on the White House appointment list. In one quarter it was explained the President was faced with the problem of receiving all comers, or none. Neither course is practical, it was said, so he decided to rule out politics as a topic of conversation.

In the case of Mr. Sinclair, the President was believed to be par-

Mercury Hits 56; Fair, Warm Today

Sudden Drop Brings Out Fall Wardrobes.

A minimum temperature of 56 at 6 a. m. yesterday ushered in Washington's coolest day in three months. The mercury rose gradually throughout the day as tweeds and blues replaced linens and seersuckers, reaching its maximum of 72 at 3:30 p. m.

On May 29 a reading of 55 was recorded by the Weather Bureau. Yesterday's coolness was due to continued bursts of polar air, traveling northeast from the Great Lakes regions, the Weather Bureau said.

Today will be fair and somewhat warmer, the Weather Bureau predicted last night. Officials saw no immediate prospects of a return of soaring temperatures.

Tropical Storm Danger Still Feared Along Gulf

Houston, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP).—Moving freakishly, the tropical storm which glanced off the south Texas coast near Freeport Monday night was still centered in the Gulf today.

To protect Gulf Coast residents against surprise, the United States Weather Bureau warned inhabitants of extreme eastern Texas and western Louisiana to be on the alert and to watch for later advices.

Epidemic Closes Schools.

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 29 (AP).—An order delaying indefinitely the opening of all Spokane public and private schools because of the prevalency of infantile paralysis was issued today by Dr. Ralph Hendricks, city health officer.

'Revolt' of Johnson Spurred by Girl Aid

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and Miss Frances Robinson.

Two of the NRA high command have tendered their resignations to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, it was learned yesterday, as Miss Frances Robinson, the testy general's aid and adviser, was revealed as a factor in the dispute within the Recovery Administration.

Miss Robinson is understood to have urged the general to walk out on NRA. Her advice has been to make a "dramatic exit." In support of her recommendation it has been urged that if Johnson angrily stamped out of the New Deal, industry would rally to his standard and his prestige as a National figure would swell.

The resignations of Blackwell Smith, acting chief of the legal division, and Leon Henderson, Re-

Sinclair Vote Points to Test For New Deal

Roosevelt Support for Candidate May Bring Cry of 'Socialism.'

By Elliott Thurston.

By his smashing victory in capturing the Democratic nomination for Governor in California, Upton Sinclair, life-long Socialist, sharply accentuated political and economic dilemmas confronting President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Politically, the spectacular emergence of an avowed Marxian in the cloak of a New Dealer means that if President Roosevelt and the New Deal support him they are supporting Socialism, against which revolt is rapidly rising within, as well as outside, Democratic ranks as is attested by the formation of the American Liberty League.

Economically, Sinclair's EPIC campaign to "End Poverty in California" spells an end of capitalism and the profit motive; New Deal support of such a program would be bound to intensify apprehensiveness and prostration of business throughout the Nation.

Faced by these considerations, Democratic and New Deal reaction was mixed.

Will See Roosevelt.

To Sinclair's wire asking for an immediate appointment—Sinclair planned to come East by airplane—President Roosevelt replied from Hyde Park granting an appointment, but Marvin McIntyre, Presidential secretary, informed the press that the appointment was made with the distinct understanding that the President was keeping out of State political campaigns.

The idea that Mr. Roosevelt meant to keep out of campaigns in which Democratic nominees are pitted against Republican nominees came as a complete surprise to political Washington. This attitude was at once construed as a sign of Mr. Roosevelt's uneasiness about aligning himself with the erstwhile Socialist who has embraced the New Deal—indeed, engulfed it in California.

Postmaster General "Jim" Farley, still Democratic National chairman and political general for the New Deal, cautiously remarked that he had never yet "run out" on any candidate of the Democratic party.

Sabath Supported For Speaker Post

Friends Say He Will Be Candidate.

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Persistent rumors that Representative J. Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, will be a candidate for Speaker of the House to succeed the late Henry T. Rainey were circulated today by close friends of Sabath.

The Representative, who has served 28 years, refused either to affirm or ney the rumors.

Sabath, who became dean of the lower House upon Rainey's death, was born in Czechoslovakia and emigrated to this country in 1881. Friends of Sabath said his candidacy would be advanced by Northern Democrats against Representative Bankhead, of Alabama, and Byrnes, of Tennessee, who aspire to the post.

Virginia Hails Ritchie, Home, As Native Son

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Richmond, Aug. 29.—Virginia, the State of his birth, today gave Gov. Albert Cabell Ritchie, of Maryland, a warm reception on his return from a six weeks' vacation in Europe. It was the Governor's fifty-eighth birthday.

Leaving the Baltimore Mail liner in Norfolk this morning, Gov. Ritchie was entertained at luncheon in that city, and continued to the State capital to spend the night. He was officially received by Gov. George C. Peery, of Virginia, while guns of the Richmond Howitzers boomed out a 17-gun salute.

The Governor's reception in Virginia, however, was preliminary to a mammoth greeting planned for him in Baltimore on his arrival there late tomorrow afternoon. According to reports, the Ritchie wings of the militant Baltimore Democracy plan a demonstration that will not only show their affection for the Governor, but also his strength in the coming primary and general elections.

Will Leave Today.

Gov. Ritchie will leave Richmond shortly after noon tomorrow and will leave Washington via Baltimore & Ohio Railroad at 4 p. m. His reception will take place in the Mount Royal Station Bowl in Baltimore.

Bronzed by the sun and winds of the north coast of France, where he spent the first vacation he has taken since becoming Governor, almost 15 years ago, Mr. Ritchie, as he stepped from the transatlantic liner this morning, looked better than he has in years. His eyes sparkled as friends greeted him. Fatigued when he left Baltimore early in July, the Governor said he felt "great."

He said he stayed at Coburg, on the Normandy coast, and did not concern himself with European affairs. He added, however, that the tension overhanging Europe was apparent in the conversations of many Europeans with whom he talked. Several times during his

Three Die as Train Smashes Into Auto

Bellingham, Mass., Aug. 29 (AP).—A father, his 13-year-old daughter and her 10-year-old girl chum were killed by a railroad train in Bellingham today while returning home by automobile from an early morning visit to their farm.

The victims were Wilfred Beauregard, of Woonsocket, R. I.; his daughter, Lucille, 13, and Doris Blais, 10, daughter of a neighbor.

Post Plans Hop Today For Altitude Record

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Wiley Post, round-the-world flier, tonight awaited favorable weather to take off in his famous craft, the Winnie Mae, on a projected flight into the stratosphere.

Indications were that the veteran aviator would take off tomorrow. Post hopes to go 50,000 feet into the upper reaches to better the present heavier-than-air-craft record of 47,000 feet.

Tense Vienna Awaits Start Of Civil War

Austrians Feel Nation May Be European Battle Ground.

Austria looks to the immediate future with grave apprehension, almost sure it is on the brink of new catastrophies. The effect of uprisings and constant alarms, which have turned a light-hearted nation into a gloomy, hopeless state, are described in a series of three articles, the first of which is presented here.

By James A. Mills.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

Vienna, Aug. 29.—Austria was appalled today by a new fear that her pleasant countryside, already scarred by revolutions, may be a central battlefield of the next European war.

The fears sprang from purported revelations of the semiofficial Reichspost, which stated that it had evidence of plots to extend Nazi rule over much of Europe. Revolutions, the Reichspost said, were to be started not only in Austria, but in Tripoli, Algeria, Switzerland and Ireland.

It was alleged by the newspaper that an alliance between Germany and Yugoslavia is in the process of formation, that Austrian territory is to be dismembered and that out of another upset of the continent Germany hopes to obtain a southern port—Triest.

Expect Almost Anything.

From Yugoslavian official sources came denials of the existence of any secret understanding with Germany, but apprehensive Austria, its nerves shattered by months of bloody turmoil, felt little reassurance. Its despairing people expect almost anything to happen.

Vienna is like a city under siege. Martial law prevails, and the city of song has been converted into a city of gloom. Music and gayety have fled. The people have ceased to smile, and the tense atmosphere of uncertainty never relents.

The apparently hopeless dissensions among Austria's own politicians and military organizations contribute to the uncertainty about everything. There is nothing substantial or trustworthy to which the people may attach their hopes.

Two-thirds of the theaters of Vienna are closed. Hotels and restaurants are almost deserted. Americans and other foreigners are ap-

Industrial Loan Rise Is Forecast

Fall Trade Revival Seen by U. S. Officials.

A sizable jump in direct Federal loans to industries—now lagging far below expectations—was forecast yesterday by Government officials as an accompaniment of an anticipated fall business upturn, the Associated Press reported.

Under their analysis, the desire of business men to profit by the generally predicted autumn upturn would create a demand for capital which would be reflected also in an increased total of bank loans.

Gas Price Up To 15 Today; Truce Nears

Independents to Make First Move to End War in District.

Major Companies May Follow Suit With Cent Higher.

Gasoline prices among independent dealers are due to go to 15.8 cents at noon today, it was learned from an authoritative source last night.

If a sufficient number of independents restore prices to this level, the major companies have agreed to follow by posting a price of 16.8 by midnight, the same source declared.

Agreement to restore prices was said to have been reached at a closed meeting of independent and major dealers yesterday, two weeks after the war began that has seen gasoline prices here at the lowest levels in years.

In some quarters, however, the ability of the dealers to reach an agreement and the consequent likelihood of a large group of independents returning prices to prewar levels was doubted. These sources said the war would continue for several days more, with prices remaining at 10 and 12 cents.

The peacemakers were said to have agreed upon a separation of branded and unbranded dealers, the former selling only the branded gasolines distributed by the major companies, the latter only unbranded fuels. This, it was said, was designed to preclude mixing of branded gasoline, on which a margin of profit is guaranteed, with unbranded fuel, one of the practices which has blocked settlement of the war.

In return, the major companies were said to have agreed to discontinue selling gasoline to the taxicab associations at discounts, which previously have prevented independents from competing.

The war began two weeks ago when the majority of the major companies cut prices to 13 cents, to meet a previous cut by independents. The independents made the next move, lowering prices to 10 cents, and the larger operators followed.

Roscoe Ates Charges Wife With Nagging

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (AP).—Roscoe Ates, stuttering film comedian, today filed answer to his wife's suit for separate maintenance, charging she continually nagged him and was jealous without reason.

The answer, however, admitted Mrs. Clara Ates' allegations that Ates once told her he no longer loved her and that it would be better for both if they lived separately.

$25,000 in Diamonds Stolen in Denver Cab

Denver, Aug. 29 (AP).—Leo Cahn, salesman for a New York jewelry firm, reported today thieves stole a trunk containing $25,000 worth of diamonds as it was being transferred from a hotel to the Denver Union Station by a Denver cab firm.

Capt. of Detectives William J. Armstrong said another trunk was substituted for Cahn's apparently after it was transferred from the hotel to the cab.

Dionne Quintuplets Fed Rum at Birth

Doctor's Report Bares Struggle to Keep Canadian Girls Alive; Father Absent From Epic Event, He Says.

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Medical science today had its first official story of the birth and infancy of quintuplets, a dramatic but simple account by the country doctor who was both obstetrician and parish priest to the five daughters of Mrs. Elzire Dionne on their birth last May 28.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, of Callander, Ont., wrote his report, unique in medical annals, for this week's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Unreal and dreamlike," Dr. Dafoe described the scene to which he was called at 4 a. m., still sleepy from another obstetric visit.

Things were scarcely ready for multiple arrivals in that home.

"I arrived," the physician related, "to find the home in confusion, no preparation made for confinement except a tea-kettle boiling on the stove. Two babies had already been born."

Father Was Absent.

The father was absent, but two neighbor women were rustling up wrappings for the babies and building the fire. Dr. Dafoe took charge of the last three arrivals, the smaller ones. As for the order of precedence, he said, Marie, Emelie, Cecile, Annette and Yvonne will have to agree among themselves, for in the exigency no one tagged the baby sisters as they were born, and "the exact order of birth sequence is not known."

The physician had attended Mrs. Dionne at the birth of three of her five previous children, and had been watching her condition just 16 days before the quintuplets made their debut, but had not suspected multiple births, he said. A few days before their birth she had complained of blurred vision and nausea, and finding her in a serious condition with blood pressure above 200, Dr. Dafoe had ordered her to bed on a fluid diet.

After delivering the quintuplets he was called upon for heroic measures to save the mother's life.

"All of the babies," he related, "were crying fairly vigorously for their size. I didn't see how all of the babies could possibly live, so I baptized them separately. They were then wrapped in the only covering available, which proved to be remnants of cotton sheetings and old napkins, and then laid on the corner of the bed and covered with a heated blanket."

Feared Mother Would Die.

Then his attention was centered on Mrs. Dionne, the 25-year-old mother.

"She suddenly went into a con-

Fliers Cheat Death In Plunge Into Lake

Pilot "Pancakes" Plane to Water at Lakeland, Md., as Motor Dies at Altitude of 100 Feet; Cut Forehead Is Only Injury.

Two aviators escaped possible death last night when their plane made a spectacular forced landing in a lake at Lakeland, Md., soon after they took off from the College Park airport.

Spectators at the field said the plane had reached an altitude of about 100 feet, when suddenly the motor sputtered a few times and then stopped.

"There was nothing to do but pancake into the lake," Coppage said.

When the motor died, the plane was only a few hundred yards from the airport, but Coppage had not gained enough altitude to permit him to bank and make a landing at the field.

He glided the open-cockpit biplane toward the largest of the lakes, and "pancaked" into the water about 100 yards from shore.

The aviators suffered a bad drenching. Coppage was cut on the forehead. They waded ashore and enlisted the aid of a number of men from a nearby colored settlement, and towed the plane to shore. Except for water, the plane was undamaged.

Friends at the airport who had seen what they believed to be an inevitable serious crash had called rescue squads from surrounding communities, but the airmen had brought their plane to shore when help arrived.

Officials at the airport expressed the belief the motor was too cold when the take-off was made. In their opinion, the engine should have been run for a longer period before the departure was attempted.

The ship is owned jointly by Curtis and his brother Fred, both of whom are engaged in the trucking business.

Rowe Routed By A's, 10-3, In Record Bid

By Alan Gould.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29 (AP).—The sensational winning streak of Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, Detroit's giant 22-year-old pitching ace, was abruptly halted today by a resounding bombardment of Philadelphia bats, wielded with crushing power in the presence of 33,718 yelling fans, the greatest crowd in the history of Shibe Park.

Thousands of others, eager to see the "boy wonder" seek his seventeenth consecutive victory, were turned away, but no one knows better than the schoolboy himself tonight what it means to be frustrated. On the threshold of an achievement which would have wiped out the American League record he now must share with such illustrious predecessors as Joe Wood, Walter Johnson and Lefty Grove, Rowe suddenly lost the magic spell he has been weaving with his long right arm and was knocked out of the box in the seventh inning.

Two lethal blows in the fifth inning, the first, a booming double by the veteran Bing Miller with the bases full, and the other a home run by "Pinky" Higgins, wrote "finis" to Rowe's streak. They accounted for five runs, gave the Athletics a decisive margin and led to Rowe's retirement, under continued fire, two innings later. Before being relieved by Vic Sorrell, Rowe yielded a dozen hits and 10 runs.

The Athletics' final margin of victory was 13 to 5. It gave the Mackmen an even break in the day's double-header. The Tigers did most of their slugging in the first game, which they won, 12 to 7. Thus, Detroit increased its margin to five games over the New York Yankees, who lost.

The conqueror of Rowe was another young speed-ball right-hander, Johnny Marcum, who went into the fray with a fair-sized winning streak of his own, and emerged with his sixth consecutive victory to give the home folks back in Eminence, Ky., something more to cheer about. Johnny collected three hits, too, in the course of a big afternoon.

Marcum spotted his rival two runs in the first inning and then proceeded to outpitch him the rest of the way. The Tigers, heaviest hitting array in either league, didn't score again until after the Athletics had taken a six-run lead in as many innings.

The first of Bing Miller's three doubles helped the Athletics tie the

"Rain Bomb" Explodes, Sets Plane on Fire

Waxahachie, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP).—A bomb tossed over the side of a plane into clouds in an effort to produce rain exploded prematurely today, setting the ship afire. Lou Footen, pilot, hastily made a forced landing and the four occupants scrambled out of the ship before it was destroyed.

James Boze, who has been conducting the experiments, said he had released a bomb and that it exploded a few feet from the machine. Three other bombs in the ship exploded and a side of the cockpit was blown away.

Farm Relief Plans Flayed By Dickinson

'Quack Cure' Proves 'Flop' G.O.P. Keynoter Tells 40,000 at Picnic.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 29 (AP).—Before the "world's largest farm picnic," the chief of the Republican party's campaign speaking bureau declared today that the Roosevelt program for agriculture was only a "quack remedy" and had proved to be "a flop."

The speaker was Senator L. J. Dickinson, keynoter of the 1932 Republican convention, Western chairman of the party's senatorial campaign committee and one of the G. O. P. leaders appointed to win back the farm vote for the November congressional elections.

"A friend of mine just received a Government check for $1,000 for not raising hogs this year," Dickinson told the crowd at the Trask Bridge picnic, an annual outing on the Pecatonica River attended by 40,000 persons.

Says "Life Wasted."

"He had been raising hogs 40 years, and the most he ever made was $400. Too bad he wasted his life raising hogs when he could have made so much more if he had known how not to raise hogs."

Dickinson, calling the Administration's crop reduction and allotment plans "the dreams of impractical theorists," recited a jingle in which a farmer who had signed Government contracts to keep production to his quota found that the contract had three parties.

"There's Uncle Sam, and me, then God; and God controls the rain,
And that we didn't count God in, is now so very plain
That I'd not be surprised at all if when we take our crop
We'd find a shortage in our food and the AAA a flop."

The Iowan declared that the processing tax, by which funds are raised for crop control benefits, was unconstitutional, and contended that

Father Held in Death Of 'Faith Healing' Babe

Longview, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP).—William Arrington was indicted by the grand jury today on a charge of negligent homicide in connection with the death of Juanita Arrington, his 4-year-old daughter.

The Gladewater man's arrest and subsequent indictment grew out of his resisting medical authorities who attempted to treat the child. He preferred to hold religious rites, with the aid of other members of the cult to which he belonged, in the belief they would cure her. She died August 18.

Youth, 12, Smothered Under Tons of Wheat

Waynesboro, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.)—John Nicholas Coiner, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Coiner, of near Waynesboro, was smothered to death under hundreds of bushels of wheat late this afternoon.

The lad was killed in the grain elevator of the Coiner Mill, one of the oldest flour establishments in the valley, which is owned by his father, when the grain was poured into the elevator by an operator who did not know the boy was there.

Move by Roosevelt Is Conceded Sole Hope of Peace.

Leader Tells Men To Await Orders

Sloan Says Strike Will Substitute Force for Law.

A strike of 600,000 or more textile workers either tomorrow or Tuesday appeared inevitable last night as employers rejected peace overtures.

Officials conceded that intervention by President Roosevelt constituted the only remaining possibility of averting the tie-up. So far, however, the President has shown no indication of an intention to act.

Hints of violence increased over a wide area. National Guardsmen were dispatched to a mill in Seneca, S. C., where a walkout already has begun.

Asked to comment on reports that troops would be needed to put down disorders in other sections, Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the National Labor Relations Board, countered: "No, thanks."

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, declared his organization was prepared against "trickery," but would refrain from violence unless mill owners attack the strikers.

"We are still getting reports from the field," he charged, "about fortification of mills with guns and tear gas. Private detectives also are as thick as vultures in some towns. The employers have put them on the pay roll, of course."

Sloan Wires Refusal.

Peace negotiations, sponsored by the labor board, collapsed unexpectedly when George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute and chairman of the industry's code authority, telegraphed Garrison from New York that the employers would not attend a round-table conference of both sides, called for today. The union previously had agreed to be represented.

Garrison seemed chagrined over the message from Sloan and unimpressed by a counter-proposal that the employers confer with the Labor Board separately. He telegraphed Sloan:

"We shall, of course, be glad to meet you at any time, but you appreciate our view that any such meeting can not be a substitute for the conference we propose.

"It is not our function to debate the issues which you have raised concerning the strike. We regret that the institute is not willing to attend the conference proposed by us, the sole purpose of which was to explore the possibilities of averting the strike upon some just basis and in the public interest."

Observers regarded the Garrison reply as evidence that the board had lost hope of blocking the strike.

"The Government, the public and the industry," Mr. Sloan wired, "are now confronted with the threat that unless the law is changed and changed immediately the industry will be closed by strike and be

Broker's Paris Home Robbed

Norman Whitehouse, of New York, Suffers Loss of Thousands.

Paris, Aug. 29 (AP).—The Paris home of Norman Whitehouse, New York broker, was robbed of thousands of dollars worth of jewels, money, furs and clothing while Whitehouse was absent in Austria, police were advised today.

A maid who reported the robbery said burglars entered the Whitehouse home, situated in a fashionable district of Paris, and escaped with the valuables.

Whitehouse, brother of Sheldon Whitehouse, who is United States Minister to Colombia, and his wife, the former Princess Bagration of Russia, were both away from home, the maid said; the former in Austria and the latter at Vichy.

Reykjavik, Iceland, Aug. 29 (AP).—Prof. Richard Light, of Yale, flying from America with Robert F. Wilson, of New Rochelle, N. Y., was reported at 5:10 p. m. local time today 10 miles off the coast of Greenland.

It was believed the fliers would stay at Angmagsalik overnight.

Sinclair Victory Viewed as End Of Party Lines

San Francisco, Aug. 29 (AP).—Upton Sinclair's nomination for Governor on the Democratic ticket in California shook party lines and brought forth varying reactions today.

Maurice E. Harrison, chairman of the Democratic State central committee, declined to comment.

John B. Elliott, vice chairman of the committee, issued a statement saying "party lines now mean nothing." He hinted that difficulties would arise in the approaching Democratic State convention in which an organization platform is to be drawn.

George Creel, war-time American director of propaganda and one of the five active opponents of Sinclair for the nomination, wired Sinclair "congratulations on your remarkable victory."

A Creel lieutenant added cryptically:

"The way we look at it, we'll have to do what is best for the State and best for the party. Sometimes it takes a lot of thought to decide what that is."

Will Take His Choice.

Elliott flatly announced he would support in November the candidates he thought "best qualified for public service, regardless of party ticket."

"Party rule," he said, "has passed, at least temporarily, or until existing political parties can realign and adopt some new statement of fixed party principles."

The vice chairman said he would give "a lot of serious and sober thought" and would seek "advice" before taking any definite stand as between Sinclair and Raymond L. Haight, self-styled "middle of the road" candidate running on the Commonwealth and Progressive tickets.

"Imagine," said Elliott, "the sweet time those in California who still designate themselves as Representative Democrats will have when they assemble in State convention at Sacramento a few days from now to proclaim a State platform of alleged Democratic party principles for submission to the voters, and on which platform the candidates nominated Tuesday shall be expected to stand like a rock, or something.

"Who shall say just what are 'Democratic principles' and just who are 'regular' Democratic nominees?"

310,951 for Sinclair.

In 7,045 precincts, complete and incomplete, out of 10,703 Sinclair polled 310,951 votes to 181,188 for George Creel, writer and supporter of the Rooseveltian New Deal. Justus S. Wardell, conservative Democrat, polled 28,220 and Milton K. Young, the 1930 nominee, received 16,952.

Sinlcair announced he had received congratulations from Col. E. M. House, adviser of the late President Wilson, and pledges of support from Dr. Z. T. Malaby, Forrest Dowey and Milton K. Young, three of his opponents for the nomination.

Answering criticism of his recent affiliation with the Democratic party, Sinclair said he changed his registration from Socialist last September because he believed "in the determination of President Roosevelt to make the New Deal a reality."

Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam, Republican gubernatorial nominee, received 300,053 in 9,044 precincts out of 10,703. C. C. Young, former Governor, got 167,938; John R. Quinn, former National commander of the American Legion, 106,450, and Haight, as a Republican, 93,179.

Sheridan Downey, Sinclair's running mate, won an easy victory in the nine-pointed race for the Democratic nomination for Lieutenant Governor. His vote in 6,970 complete and incomplete precincts, was 186,582. Martin I. Welsh received 59,320 and William Jennings Bryan, jr., 37,871. The other six lagged far behind.

Hatfield Victor.

Merriam's running mate will be George H. Hatfield, former United States attorney here. Hatfield polled 169,762 votes in 4,805 complete and incomplete precincts. Rex B. Goodcell got 48,159 and Edward F. Treadwell, 29,004.

United States Senator Hiram Johnson won both the Republican and Democratic nominations to succeed himself without having made a campaign speech or issuing a statement. The independent Republican, who joined the Roosevelt cause in 1932, polled 159,982 votes in 3,346 complete precincts to 65,192 for Richmond A. Rust. On the Democratic ticket Johnson in 3,318 precincts got 206,922; Carl A. Johnson, 15,421 and Clarence A. Henning, 15,302.

Congressional returns were slow, but victory was indicated for the 11 incumbents seeking renomination. These included Representative Clarence F. Lea (Democrat), of Santa Rosa, mentioned as a possible choice for Speaker of the House. All 20 Congressional seats will be filled in the November election.

Developments within regular Democratic ranks as well as the outcome of the voting threw into the limelight several matters anticipated by Sinclair.

Prediction Recalled.

One of these was the prediction he made months ago in writing the "history" of his political venture. He wrote this as a history of the future and then set out to make it come true.

In this "history" he foresaw the extension of his plan throughout the Nation. At another point a pre-election statement anticipating reaction in the regular Democratic ranks was recalled.

In this statement, issued Monday night, Sinclair said:

"I appreciate the position of the older statesmen of the Democratic party. They have stood by when the party was hardly anybody but themselves. * * * It is only human that they should resent the sudden intrusion of a stranger contesting for leadership of the party and advocating new, untried economics and political doctrines.

"Personally I am not the elbowing sort of person, and only in a time of desperate crisis would I have thought of acting as I have.

Some Leaders Disagreed.

"There are some of the older Democratic leaders who do not think the crisis as severe as I do; nor do they think my remedies are best.

"These matters will be decided at the primary election by the Democratic voters of our State. They will give the orders, and it is my hope that all Democrats will accept their direction and unite in working for the common cause, as I intend to do * * * whatever the result of the primary may be.

"No one knows how many voters have changed their party affiliation at our suggestion, but the number must be high up in the six figures. Ordinarily the bringing of that many new recruits into the party would be credited as a great party service.

"If the Democrats of California now vote to make the E. P. I. C. plan their party program, no one can refuse to accept their decision and at the same time continue to call himself a Democrat."

Sinclair Vote Held New Deal Test; Socialism Issue Looms

But, so far as could be learned, he sent no telegram of congratulation to Sinclair such as he has hastened to forward to all other Democratic primary victors, including those not preferred by the New Deal as nominees. He flatly refused to discuss the California predicament, as did Secretary of Interior Ickes, who advocates old party realignments into conservatives versus New Dealers.

Hopkins Hails Sinclair.

However, Harry L. Hopkins, the New Deal's Relief Administrator, hailed Sinclair's nomination as "great business;" said parts of Sinclair's EPIC program appeared "very good," and added, according to the Associated Press, "I certainly do want to see Sinclair elected."

He was also quoted as saying that Sinclair is "on our side," but when asked if he meant the Democratic side, he declined to specify. Then, asked if he did not consider Sinclair an outright Socialist, he replied, "No—he's a good Democrat."

Republican spokesmen lost no time in stamping both Sinclair and the New Deal as socialistic. Senator Hastings, as cochairman of the Republican Senatorial-Congressional campaign committee, predicted a bolt of the conservative Democrats in California that would insure Republican success on election day in winning the Governorship as well as House seats. That such a bolt, previously predicted, is in fact underway was clear from the announcement of John B. Elliott, vice chairman of the California Democratic central committee and manager of Senator McAdoo's last campaign for the Senate.

Deserts Party Labels.

"Party labels now mean nothing," he was quoted by the Associated Press as saying in Los Angeles. "I will support candidates best qualified for public service regardless of the party ticket on which they may be listed."

Revulsion in old-line Democratic ranks all through the country is threatened—to say nothing of the effect upon business confidence—unless the New Deal actually disavows Sinclair and Socialism. But to do this places all the other Democratic nominees in California in jeopardy. What the Farley command would like is to be able to avoid Sinclair without harming the rest of the Democratic ticket. But this is impossible. The Sinclair nomination precipitates an issue which has been long smouldering. It may prove to be the event that forces an already overdue showdown on the New Deal's meaning and purpose.

In one high quarter of the New Deal it was remarked yesterday that Sinclair probably would be beaten by the bolt of old-line Democrats to the Republican nominee for Governor—and that such a defeat might mark the high tide of "radicalism" in this country. Some observers, however, are by no means sure that Sinclair will be defeated—not unless the New Deal throws its weight against him. The hour for New Deal intervention in California is felt by many to have past. That is, a widely prevailing view here is that had Mr. Roosevelt come out for George Creel, his friend of war-time days in the Wilson regime, on the ground that Sinclair was a Socialist interloper, the present enigmas would have been avoided, and possibly Creel might have won.

Statement by Hastings.

That the brand of Socialism is going to be applied to the New Deal more vigorously then ever, unless Sinclair is repudiated, is evident from Senator Hastings' statement which said:

"The New Deal 'victory' in the California primaries has elements of public interest quite aside from the fact that it assures the Republican party of great gains in the November elections.

"A Socialist running on a Socialist platform and heartily indorsing the New Deal defeated a Democrat for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, although the Democrat also was an ardent supporter of New Deal policies.

"At last we are beginning to get things straight. The people who labored under the misapprehension that this is a Democratic administration are given another opportunity to see their mistake.

"Some of us recall that Mr. Roosevelt indorsed a platform drafted by the Democratic party in the summer of 1932. The platform was last seen about March, 1933. Since then there hasn't been much evidence of the party itself.

Appeals to Conservatives.

"Many prominent Democrats have had difficulty recognizing their old political faith since it has been transmuted by the sweet alchemy of the New Deal. Perhaps the nomination of Mr. Upton Sinclair under the Democratic standards will help them to resolve their doubts. It shows where the Democratic party is being led. I don't believe conservative Democrats will follow this sort of thing.

"Sooner or later there will have to be some clarification of political terminology. Many people feel that the President, or possibly Mr. Tugwell, should issue a statement informing the country what the term New Deal means now that it is no longer identified with the political theory of the Democratic party. It is probable that Thomas Jefferson's political sagacity would have enabled him to classify the New Deal, but it is certain that he would have been careful to avoid it.

"Mr. Sinclair not only recognizes it and classifies it, he indorses it. And Mr. Sinclair is a Socialist and a disciple of Karl Marx. Mr. George Creel, the defeated candidate for the nomination, is a Democrat."

Byrns Ignores Senate Race.

Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, Democratic Congressional campaign chairman, floor leader and aspirant for the Speakership, kept his eyes firmly, and hopefully, fixed upon the nominees for Congress—and averted his gaze from the painful aspects of the Sinclair candidacy. He said in a statement:

"I know nothing of any issue between the Democratic candidates in the primary, but I fail to see how the result can possibly affect the Democratic nominees for Congress who are basing their claims for support on the New Deal and their aid to President Roosevelt in completing his recovery program in the next two years.

"Reports to the committee indicate that all Democratic members of the House from California, will be returned and there may be some gain."

Senator Pope's Comment.

As for Senator Pope, Idaho Democrat, he found comfort in reflecting that Sinclair's socialistic "experiment" would be confined to California. He said:

"The nomination of Upton Sinclair for Governor of California by the Democratic party is in keeping with American traditions, and should call for no objection whatsoever from the remainder of the Nation. He has presented a definite program, which is novel in many respects, but if it meets with the approval of the people of California, it will be an interesting experiment.

"Justice Holmes once announced from the bench of the Supreme Court that States of the Union should be considered as laboratories for experiments in government. If Sinclair is elected, the United States can observe with interest, and perhaps profit from the workings of his program. If he is successful, the remainder of the Nation can profit from the lesson. If he fails, the failure will be confined to California, and other States will in no way suffer."

Britten Sees Coalition

According to Representative Britten, Illinois Republican, Sinclair will drive Democrats out of their own party and into a coalition with the Republicans that will mean a Republican sweep in November

Nobody doubts that the California outcome is a boon to the Republicans not only in aiding them in California but in sharpening the issue Nationally over the New Deal's economic as well as political drift.

In his campaign book, which sold well and raised much cash for his campaign, Sinclair, writing prophetically under the title, "I, Governor of California," predicted he would win the Democratic nomination by 25,000 plurality. His victory was far greater—nearly four times that. He made clear that he was embracing the New Deal as a forerunner of Socialism and wrote of President Roosevelt in this book:

"He has barely got started on his journey, but he is headed in the right direction, toward Government control of business and industry—and I am shoving."

Was Feature of Primary.

Sinclair's remarkable triumph overshadowed all other primary results. That Senator Hiram Johnson would be easily renominated was a foregone conclusion. With New Deal blessings, the former Republican Progressive took the Democratic, Republican, Commonwealth party and Progressive nominations.

It was the New Deal's decision to back Johnson which set in motion the chain of events by which, in hoping to absorb the Republican Progressives, the New Deal now has the Socialist Sinclair thrust upon it.

Sinclair will be pitted against Gov. Frank F. Merriam in the governorship race this fall. Merriam captured the Republican nomination partly because of his law-and-order stand during the general strike in San Francisco, Sinclair versus Merriam means a straight-out battle between socialism and conservatism, though the Socialists nominated Miles C. Dempster, while the Communists nominated Sam Darcy.

See Stephens' Victory.

The prophets in Washington hold that Senator Hubert D. Stephens will be reelected in a run-off primary, September 18, against former Gov. Bilbo, who ran second in Mississippi's Senatorial primary. Representative Ross A. Collins, who gave up a sure seat in the House to get into the contest, ran third. That leaves him out—and in line for a New Deal appointment.

South Carolina exhibited unexpected wetness in an "advisory vote" on retention of the State prohibition law, but since the vote is only advisory to the Legislature it is not considered highly significant. In the governorship primary, Olin D. Johnston, lawyer and dry, of Spartanburg, ran well ahead, but must fight it out in a second primary on September 11 with former Senator Cole Blease.

However, to the Capital, the shadow which Sinclair cast across the political-economic horizon all but obscured the heavens. The next chapters in Sinclair's prophetic EPIC are now of absorbing political interest.

Kitchens Tops Parks In Seventh Arkansas

Little Rock, Ark., Aug. 29 (AP). With a bare seven precincts missing from yesterday's Democratic primary run-off, Representative Tillman B. Parks, of Camden, trailed Wade Kitchens, of Magnolia, former State representative, by more than 400 votes in the race for nomination in the Seventh Arkansas District.

Stephens, Bilbo Enter Run-Off In Senate Race

Incumbent and Old Rival Neck-and-Neck, With Collins Beaten.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 29 (AP).—Theodore G. Bilbo, the "stormy petrel" of Mississippi politics, today had started on the comeback trail.

Repudiated three years ago by an overwhelming majority, the fiery little south Mississippian, who twice has occupied the governorship, won his way into a run-off contest with Senator Hubert D. Stephens, veteran lawmaker, in yesterday's Democratic senatorial primary.

Far outdistancing two opponents, Stephens and Bilbo were running neck and neck for top position, with the incumbent holding a slight lead on the face of near-complete unofficial returns tonight.

Collins Poor Third.

Trailing far behind was Ross A. Collins, who surrendered his Fifth District congressional seat to make the senatorial race. However, he mustered enough votes to throw the leaders in a second primary, which will be held September 18.

State Senator Frank H. Harper, of Hattiesburg, got only a negligible vote.

With slightly more than 200 of the State's 1,611 precincts missing, the vote in the senatorial race stood:

Stephens, 59,004; Bilbo, 56,832; Collins, 38,969; Harper, 1,357.

The State's Democracy also balloted on Congressional candidates in yesterday's primary, and all incumbents seeking reelection were running well ahead of their opponents.

Three Retain Seats.

Three of the delegation were assured of retaining their seats, John Rankin in the First District, Wall Doxey in the Second, and Will Whittington in the Third. Whittington won the nomination without a contest, while Rankin and Doxey both received far more than a majority.

Representative Jeff Busby had a 400 majority over the combined vote of his two opponents.

Representative Will Comer, in the Sixth, and Representative Russell Ellzey, in the Seventh, led large fields, but did not receive majorities.

Sinclair Plans To See President

ticularly anxious to shield the White House prestige from the possible political consequences involved in the victory of a Socialist running on the Democratic ticket. Apparently he is desirous that the New Deal be not confused with the Socialist's "epic" platform.

Besides relieving him of the necessity of taking a stand in California, the President's policy apparently will keep him equally aloof from the campaigns of the Progressives. Senator Hiram Johnson, already blessed by the New Deal, has no opposition in California, but both Senators Robert M. La Follette and Bronson Cutting face opponents.

Byrd's Return to Base Set for Near Future

Little America, Antarctic, Aug. 28 (delayed) (AP) (via Mackay Radio.—A radio report today from the advance weather base said Admiral Richard E. Byrd had made considerable progress in recovery and would possibly be able to return to Little America early in September.

It was five months ago today that Admiral Byrd commenced his isolated vigil at the world's southernmost habitation. Yesterday he saw the sun for the first time in more than four months.

Girl Fliers Start Today On New Endurance Test

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—Undaunted by two unsuccessful attempts, a pair of Texas girl fliers today accepted a third assault on the endurance flight record to be started tomorrow.

The fliers, Jean La Rene and Mary Owens, planned to take off late in the afternoon after repairs have been completed on the plane, in which they were forced down Tuesday after 106 hours in the air. Refueling trouble ended their first attempt after only a few hours.

Glacier Park Rangers Seeking Ohio Doctor

Glacier National Park, Mont., Aug. 29 (AP).—Glacier National Park officials said today a search is being made for Dr. F. H. Lumley, of Columbus, Ohio, whose unclaimed baggage recently was found at Many Glacier Hotel.

Lumley was last heard from August 13 at Goathaunt Camp at the head of Warterton Lake when he left there with Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Owen, of Cambridge, Mass., on a planned hike to Crossley Lake Camp 17 miles distant.

"Famous Five" Given Liquor By Physician

Struggle to Save Lives of Dionne Quintuplets Is Revealed.

dition of shock," said Dr. Dafoe. "The patient was cold, and the radial pulse had disappeared * * * Solutions of pituitary and ergot were given. In a short time the pulse picked up a little but was still fast and weak. Slight color appeared in her face."

Dr. Dafoe still feared she would not live.

"In spite of more pituitary and ergot, she presented the appearance of a dying woman. The husband was still missing, and it was my duty to get the priest, as no one else was available with a car. Reluctantly leaving the midwife, I hurried away to bring the priest, a distance of two and a half miles.

"On returning, I found the mother's condition improving * * * two hours later she was definitely out of danger."

Blankets Were Heated.

Then the busy doctor had more time for the babies. Blankets were heated in the oven, wrapped around the babies and changed often; some one brought a butcher's meat basket from a neighbor's. Three hours later the infants took turns on a warm blanket, having a rubdown with warm olive oil.

For 24 hours the babies were fed nothing but a few drops of warm water from an eye dropper every two hours. Then "a few drops of corn syrup mixture, together with from one to two drops of rum." A meager supply of mothers' milk was obtained around the neighborhood and added to the infants' beverage. When four days had passed an ample supply of mothers' milk began coming regularly. It was sent by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, of the Chicago Health Department, and full strength mothers' milk has been used regularly since, some from Toronto and Montreal.

Latterly, the babes having "celebrated their third month of life Tuesday, a bit of tomato juice has been added to the diet—besides the oxygen, given regularly at first and later in emergencies when the infants seemed sinking.

Dr. Dafoe said there were no accurate scales handy at the time of birth, but on the second day the combined weight was 13 pounds 6 ounces. The combined weight last Monday was 29 pounds 8¼ ounces.

First Week Was Nightmare.

"The first week," Dr. Dafoe recalled, "was a nightmare with the frequent alarms and innumerable trips sandwiched between my other calls." (His medical "parish" covers about 400 square miles around Callander, on the east shore of Lake Nipissing, peopled by a rugged French Canadian stock. "Race suicide is nonexistent," said the doctor. "It is not unusual to find families of 15 to 20.")

"The babies needed constant supervision and frequent stimulation to arouse them out of their attacks of cyanosis. On the fifth day the three smaller ones were markedly distended and looked worse than usual. . . . I gave them all a saline enema with a fine catheter and a hypodermic syringe. They seemed to pick up after this and took their food better. Within a week, cylinders of 95 per cent oxygen and 5 per cent carbon dioxide were obtained, with a reducing valve and ordinary inhalator. This gas then replaced all other methods of stimulation and the rum rations were seldom issued."

Dr. Dafoe related the details of organizing the care, obtaining aid from the Red Cross, women's organizations, the Ontario government, from doctors, newspapers and commercial organizations.

The attendant publicity at first annoyed the physician, but he became grateful for the aid of the newspapers.

"At first I resented what I felt was an intrusion into my private and professional affairs. Then I came to realize that I had no right to object to what had become a matter of continent-wide interest. I have been increasingly grateful to the newspapers for the invaluable supplies and equipment which from the beginning came as a result of this publicity."

Since the first days, he said the babies have "had their ups and downs, but they are progressing favorably in health and gaining steadily in weight. . . . with . . . cooperation we hope the babies will continue to thrive and will be a credit to their family and to their country."

Wounded Thug Flees Under Sheriff's Eyes

Denver, Aug. 29 (AP).—Deputy Sheriff E. W. Widner sat up all night to guard John Garcia, wounded former convict, who was chained to a hospital cot. At 5:30 a. m. today Widner decided the prisoner had been unusually still for hours. He found a roll of blankets under the bedclothes.

Garcia apparently escaped with a key which fitted the lock to his chains while the deputy was at supper.

Virginia Welcomes Ritchie, Home Again, as Native Son

stay the Maryland executive went to Deauville races.

Gov. Ritchie refused to discuss the Maryland political situation, explaining he had not kept in close touch with recent developments. The accuracy of the latter statement became apparent a moment later when he expressed surprise when told that his chief opponent for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination—Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore—withdrew several weeks ago. The Governor said he was "pleasantly surprised."

Asks About League.

Ship reporters at Norfolk asked Gov. Ritchie his attitude toward the newly created American Liberty League. He said he had seen only a line or two about the organization and asked what it was.

"It is an organization of the Democratic section of the Democratic party," one of the Norfolk reporters replied.

"I'll have to look into it," said Gov. Ritchie, laughing heartily.

The Governor told several anecdotes of incidents which happened on the trip, making his traveling companion, Col. Stuart S. Janney, chairman of the Maryland Welfare Board, the chief figure in each story. Mr. Janney and Gov. Ritchie have been close friends since they were small boys in Baltimore.

One anecdote had the Governor and Mr. Janney on their way to catch their boat at Havre, pursued by a Coburg hotel proprietor because Mr. Janney failed to make arrangements for the payment of their bill. The two Marylanders, soon after leaving Coburg, two hours by motor from Havre, remembered the unpaid hotel bill. They decided, however, if they turned back they might miss their boat.

They decided to telephone the hotel from Havre and make arrangements for payment of the bill. Shortly afterward they heard the roar of a speeding automobile and soon a motor bearing the hotel proprietor pulled alongside and waved to them to stop.

Guest of Consolvo.

"I guess he thought we were trying to beat our bill," the Governor laughingly said in telling the story to Col. Charles H. Consolvo, owner of hotels in Norfolk, Richmond and Baltimore. Col. Consolvo entertained Gov. Ritchie at luncheon in Norfolk.

"My principal observation on the European economic situation is that our dollar does not buy as many francs as it should," the Governor said.

Col. Janney did not leave the ship, but continued on to Baltimore. Aboard also were Dr. Albert S. Cook, State superintendent of education in Maryland, and Mrs. Cook. They were not with the Governor in France.

Meeting the Governor at the Norfolk pier were David C. Winebrenner 3d, Maryland secretary of State; Harold E. West, chairman of the Maryland Public Service Commission; Ira J. McCurdy, of Frederick, a friend of the Governor, and a party of Virginians headed by Col. Consolvo. Escorted by motorcycle police, the party went to the Monticello Hotel, where a number of persons from Norfolk called on Mr. Ritchie.

Gov. Ritchie, in Gov. Peery's personal car, with the latter's flag flying from the front, headed a procession through the business section of Richmond to the Capitol. On the way many persons attracted by the police sirens waved greetings to the Marylander. Gov. Peery first formally received Gov. Ritchie with his staff present, and later the two executives chatted privately for about ten minutes.

The Governor is a guest tonight at the home of his uncle, Henry L. Cabell. He was entertained at a small dinner by his first cousin, Robert Gambrill Cabell 3d and Mrs. Cabell.

It was exactly 58 years ago today that the Governor's mother, Elizabeth Cabell, famed as one of the three most beautiful women in the South during the Civil War, came home for the birth of her baby in a house nearby where the Maryland executive slept tonight.

Elizabeth Cabell married Judge Albert Ritchie, of Baltimore, and went to that city to live. But because her father was a physician she decided to go to the paternal home for the baby's birth. Traveling by boat from Baltimore, Mrs. Ritchie was delayed and soon after her arrival in Richmond the baby, who now has served longer continuously as the Governor of an American State than any other man, was born.

Virginia always has claimed Gov. Ritchie as one of her native sons. Gov. Peery today led the Marylander to the Hall of Statues of Native Virginians who have been Presidents of the United States. Gov. Peery pointed out that all the niches had been filled except one, temporarily holding a bust of the Marquis de LaFayette. Gov. Peery said Virginia was reserving that space for Gov. Ritchie.

South Carolina Votes Wet and Picks Bone-Dry

Johnson and Blease to Enter Run-Off for Governorship.

Columbia, S. C., Aug. 29 (AP).—South Carolina, one of the two States to reject repeal last fall, today had voted wet in an advisory referendum and at the same time had given the only bone-dry candidate in the race a substantial lead for the nomination as Governor, on the face of incomplete returns from yesterday's Democratic primary.

As returns slowly increased the margin of the wet vote and established that Olin D. Johnston, lifelong prohibitionist, and the veteran Cole L. Blease would enter a second primary September 11 for the nomination, signs of a realignment of 40-year-old political lines were observed.

Notified that the Governorship nomination, equivalent to election, lay between Johnston and Blease, Senator E. D. Smith, who defeated Blease twice and served one term as his Senatorial colleague, announced he would vote for Blease.

In the referendum, which was ordered as a "straw vote" to be observed by the next Legislature only in the lawmakers' desire, 114,046 voters said they wanted liquor legalized, while 95,358 spoke for retention of the law which prohibits the manufacture and sale of the beverage but allows the importation of a quart a month, theoretically for medicinal purposes.

Johnson had 85,027 votes and Blease, 68,905. With regard to liquor, he promised to be guided by the outcome of the referendum, but did not announce how he voted.

Wyndham M. Manning, Sumter farmer, was third with 43,563 votes.

Farm Prices Up But Debt Gains, Richberg Finds

32 Per Cent Boost Noted by NRA Counsel in Report to Roosevelt.

Rising farm prices, greatly curtailed surpluses, and a farm debt, 25 per cent financed by the Federal Government, are highlights of the second of a series of reports on New Deal achievements, laid before President Roosevelt yesterday by Donald R. Richberg, secretary of the Executive Council.

Including about $311,000,000 of Federal rental and benefit payments in his picture of expanded farm income, Mr. Richberg reported a 32 per cent increase in returns to farmers from August, 1933, to June, 1934, over the corresponding previous period.

Climbing farm prices, which the NRA counsel and National Emergency Council head estimated within 5 per cent of prewar parity, as well as dwindling surpluses, were attributed in part to the Nation's worst drought. And so the President's lieutenant urged continuance of the program of Federal farm control methods, guarding against postdrought overproduction.

Dovetailing with his report on the agricultural phase of the New Deal recovery program, the Bureau of Agricultural Economics yesterday reported an increase from 80 to 87 in the index of prices received by farmers for the month ended August 15.

This was declared the largest monthly increase since the early summer of 1933, placing the index 15 points higher than a year earlier, and at the highest level recorded since April, 1931.

Better Revival Urged.

Mr. Richberg linked his second report with his earlier appraisal of industrial advances by stating that it is "essential that there be more of a revival in industrial production and more extensive reemployment" if farms are to fully recover.

His first report, made public last Sunday, claimed broad strides in industrial production as the direct and indirect result of NRA and AAA programs. He claimed the reemployment of some 4,120,000 persons. Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican National committee challenged the accuracy of his comparisons.

The second Richberg report which, with the first and the five more that are to come, will be used widely by Democrats in the approaching campaign, disclosed farmers have borrowed nearly $2,000,000,000 through Government enterprises. He said Federal agencies now hold 25 per cent of the farm debt, as against 12.1 per cent at the beginning of 1930.

Surpluses Attacked.

Pointing out that agricultural surpluses have been "among the principal price depressing influences," and that in March, 1933, seven basic commodity prices were 51 per cent of their 1910-1914 level, he noted:

"Prices of seven commodities originally designated as basic have risen from 51 per cent of the 1910-1914 relationship to 95 per cent, exclusive of benefit payments.

"Including benefit payments, the farm price of these seven commodities was, in August, 1934, about 116 per cent of prewar. On August 6 prices paid by farmers for the things they bought were estimated to be 122 per cent of the prewar prices, which would mean that for the portion of domestic consumption the farm price of these 7 basic commodities plus benefit payments had risen to 95 per cent of their prewar 'parity.'"

Income Far Below Normal.

Farm income, Mr. Richberg stressed, is still far below predepression levels, but he estimated this year it will exceed 1933 by approximately 19 per cent. He said farm income totaled $5,083,000,000 for 1933-34, compared with $3,881,000,000 for 1932-33, an increase of $1,202,000,000.

While the hot drought sun played its part in cutting farm surpluses to nearly normal, according to the Administration's official reporter, he warned that at the same time it "laid the basis for new surpluses." For this reason, he said, crop control must continue. He pointed out that the drought did not eliminate 40,000,000 acres which have been producing farm surpluses since the war.

"It is apparent that the mechanism of adjustment must be utilized to * * * balance production," he said. "Because of the increase in prices of some commodities and the scarcity, it is quite certain that in the absence of stabilizing control, farmers would again produce more than the markets can absorb at a fair price during the succeeding year."

He estimated 213,000 farmers through Government refinancing loans scaled down their indebtedness about $52,789,000, or 26 per cent, saving on interest alone $15,719,000, or 24 per cent.

Government farm loans were made principally through the Farm Credit Administration, which extended $1,626,468,000 from June 1, 1933, to July 31, 1934.

search and planning division chief, are on Johnson's desk.

Smith figuratively waved his resignation in Johnson's face last week when the general in a stormy meeting with the NRA policy board charged Donald R. Richberg, former legal division chief, with disloyalty.

Also Offered Resignation.

Richberg and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins are backing an NRA reorganization plan to which Johnson objects. The former has not actually retired from NRA, but has been detached for duty as secretary of the President's executive council. Richberg's resignation also has been offered, but not accepted.

Johnson was angered at the White House ten days ago when Richberg offered a reorganization plan which would supplant Johnson's one-man control with a board. Miss Perkins is reported to have backed Richberg.

Following the White House conference, Johnson, meeting with his policy board, is said to have described Richberg as "playing fast and loose." Accusing Richberg of disloyalty, Johnson demanded in vigorous terms full loyalty of his staff. "That means you, too," he said, pointing to Smith.

"My resignation has been before you for some time and you can accept it now if you wish," Smith replied.

As the meeting ended, Johnson in more jovial vein, asked Henderson when he would resign. Henderson also advised the general that his resignation was in Johnson's office and could be accepted whenever desired. Johnson assured both men of his confidence in their loyalty and value to the organization, which apparently ended that incident.

Tendered Repeatedly.

Richberg's resignation from the NRA post has been offered to Johnson repeatedly since the President gave Richberg the more important job of coordinating emergency agencies and heading the executive council.

Richberg's departure from NRA early in July was believed by officials to be a permanent move and the matter of his resignation a mere formality. The clash between Richberg and Johnson appeared, in reviewing the incident involved, as more of a conflict of personalities and governed by a widely different approach to Government problems.

Johnson has used the NRA and his job as administrator in the light of his "big business" and military background. Richberg has brought a background of wide legal experience and extensive activities with railway labor cases.

Both agree basically on self-government of industry, although Richberg's theories are believed to take more account of protecting the consumer from price combines, and the little business man from annihilation.

Painting by Destitute Artist Lampoons Roosevelt Regime

Mural of "Jere Miah 2d" Displayed Near Summer Home of President.

Tarrytown, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—Fifty miles from the summer White House, scores of persons paid 25 cents each today to see the lampoon in oils an anonymous and destitute artist on PWA relief has done of the Roosevelt Administration.

Identity of the artist, who signed himself "Jere Miah II," was still a closely guarded secret of officials of the Westchester galleries, where the mural will be part of a permanent exhibit.

President Roosevelt, central figure in the canvas, was depicted holding a microphone in his left hand, and with his right hand grasping a fishing rod, from which dangles a fish. On his head is a small crown.

The galleries announced that a good share of the receipts would be turned over to the artist. They said he was young, married and that sometime since 1929 he had lost his home and had found himself unable to support his wife.

Sponsors of the artist said he fears to make his name known because he still is on the relief pay roll, and believes he might be the victim of a retaliatory move.

They also said he is planning a second mural to be titled, "America, 1934."

kept closed until these changes are made.

"The character of such a strike is clear," he said. "If it is to be an approved and successful weapon for changing the code or enforcing governmental action it will set a precedent for strikes in every other industry. It will put a premium on force and violence as instruments of law making instead of the orderly processes of the National industrial recovery act. * * * In view of this situation we are unable to enter into conference with the group threatening the strike."

Earlier, W. D. Anderson, president of the American Cotton Manufacturers Association, representing Southern mill owners, declined an invitation to participate in the labor board conference.

Gorman Accuses Owners.

"Now the air is clear," Gorman observed. "There seemingly are no more subterfuges to which the employers can resort and so they stand at last out in the open, unwilling to enter into a conference that might result in negotiations in which they would be defenseless. For the cotton textile mill owners simply can not stand up against our charges, and they know it.

"Added to that is their age-long refusal to deal with organized labor as such and their hope that somehow they can continue in that ancient manner. I honestly think there are some mill owners who do not know the recovery act is a law and I am very certain that a good many of them do not know the language of section 7(a) (the collective bargaining guarantee). They are due for some instructions shortly."

Gorman predicted the employers would learn they could not "pick out" the laws they wished to obey. "The strike will come," he added. "I caution our members everywhere, however, not to walk out until the appointed hour. Every local union will get telegraphic orders and those orders will fix the hour at which the mills are to be closed. "I ask the workers everywhere to remain at work until they are notified of the hour to stop and I urge, in the interest of good faith and union discipline, that they do not walk out until the hour set for all to stop. Let us give a magnificent demonstration of united, concerted action. In unity they will be invincible.

"The word now is, close the ranks, maintain discipline, follow your instructions to the letter, stand ready. The hour is at hand."

Some Mills Already Closed.

Union officials will meet here today to set the exact hour of the strike. Indications were that the workers would be told to leave their looms and spindles at the close of work tomorrow. Such an order, however, would mean that the effect of the strike would not be felt until Tuesday, as the industry is on a five-day week, which prevents the mills from opening Saturday and Labor Day will be observed Monday. Some employers already have begun to close their plants as a countermove. Such shut-downs occurred yesterday in Alabama and New Hampshire, the Associated Press reported.

Garrison indicated the Labor Board would continue its mediation efforts even if the strike materialized. He hinted the board would appoint a committee of three to conduct the negotiations. The Labor Board, the Labor Department and the NRA probably would be represented.

Pay envelopes of workers in Southern mills were produced by Gorman in an effort to prove employers had violated NRA wage provisions. The envelopes ranged from $5.06 to $12.90 a week. Gorman said the wages in those instances should have been at least $30.

Unionists said a silk banner would be awarded to the first local union to report 100 per cent cooperation.

producers pay "70 to 80 per cent of it."

Sees Socialized Era.

Dickinson claimed to see in writings or remarks of President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and others, grounds for fears that the country is head "for a socialized era," and said of the "brain trusters:"

"Most of them should be given a permanent leave of absence without salary."

He called it the "philosophy of the New Deal" that "those that have must give to those who do not earn; * * * that the thrifty shall take care of the shiftless." As for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's recent suggestion that a National economic council might be useful to coordinate economic activities, Dickinson declared:

"When you want to plant your corn or sell your hogs, you will have to get the consent of this supreme court."

St. Marys 4-H Club Wins Fair Prizes

Upper Marlboro, Md., Aug. 29 (AP). A 4-H Club team from St. Marys County won the poultry-judging prize and a team from Calvert County won the tobacco-judging contest at the annual Marlboro Fair today.

Prince Georges and Charles Counties were second and third, respectively, in the poultry judging. In the tobacco contest, Charles was second and Prince Georges third.

Members of the winning poultry team were Dorothy Milburn, Hilda Fish and Charles Birch. The team was coached by Miss Ethel Jay, home demonstration agent at Leonardtown.

Individual winners were Dorothy Milburn, St. Marys County, first; Charles Birch, St. Marys County, second; Carlton Thorne, Prince Georges County, third; Bobbie Grey, Charles County, fourth; Hilda Fish, St. Marys County, fifth.

Members of the winning tobacco-judging team were Willard Sherbert, Royce Watson and Lester King. The team members, in order, also won first, second and third individual prizes. Marburry Linton, of Charles County, was fourth. John Morsell, Calvert County agent, coached the winning team.

Peace Parley On Aluminum Strikes Hitch

"Last Couple of Hurdles" Block Settlement of Strike.

(Associated Press.)

Negotiations for a settlement of the aluminum strike reached at least a temparary impasse last night just as the Aluminum Co. of America and representatives of the Aluminum Workers Council appeared on the brink of reaching an agreement.

When unable to cross what a company spokesman described as the "last couple of hurdles" in the way of a settlement, representatives of the Aluminus Co. of America and the union carried the situation to Lloyd Garrison, chairman of the Labor Relations Board.

If Garrison is unable to arrange a settlement, the company spokesman said, the representatives of the Mellon interests would return tonight to Pittsburgh. About 10,000 employes in four of the largest plants of the company are affected by the walkout, now in its third week.

When it called the strike, the union demanded a written labor contract, collection of union dues by the company and a universal wage scale. The company declined to meet any of these demands, saying they refused to operate a shop closed to any but union workmen.

What concessions have been made by either side in their joint conferences at the Labor Department have not been disclosed. The company spokesman said final agreement on any single point depended on final agreement covering all the issues.

Block Predicts Early Downfall for Hitler

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Paul Block, newspaper publisher, returned from Europe today with a prediction that Adolf Hitler would remain the ruler of Germany not longer than two more years.

Though everybody was talking about war, Block said he did not believe there would be war "unless Hitler starts to fall." Then, to save himself, he may start a war to get his people back of him again."

Hurley Labels Liberty League 'A 'Smear-Gang'

Former War Secretary in First G. O. P. Attack on Project.

(Associated Press.)

Cleavage over the American Liberty League, already manifest among Democrats, became evident yesterday in the Republican regular ranks as well.

Despite one of its organizers being a potential G. O. P. Presidential contender in 1936, former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley labeled the league "a smear gang," trying to impose "minority rule."

Learning of the statement at Cape Cod, Mass., President Jouett Shouse telephoned A. L. L. headquarters here that he had no immediate comment.

His assistants were busily sorting the latest letters asking membership and information. Enrollment applications were being made ready for National distribution.

White House correspondence, meanwhile, was said to pertain little, if at all, to the new nonpartisan organization.

Showdown Seems Likely.

There were renewed signs that the Administration plans to press the contention that the New Deal emphasizes "the average man" and "the common man" as coming ahead of "property." Past differences between President Roosevelt and Alfred E. Smith over the soundest way to do that appeared likely to make something of a showdown inevitable.

Mr. Roosevelt, it was recalled, used no names in inferring that the league's purposes overlooked "thy neighbor."

He was on record, however, as complimenting Mr. Smith in 1932: "My old friend Al's great contribution lay in what he has accomplished (for charity) over this long period in making us socialminded, in giving us a clearer concept of the command, 'Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.'"

Senatorial reactions to the league continued to be scrutinized, including that by Senator McGill (Democrat), Kansas: "A useless, worthless organization of radical reactionaries."

Cooperation Doubted.

A statement by the National Economy League, about desirability of a balanced Federal buget beginning next July, gave rise to queries whether it would cooperate with the Liberty League. This was considered unlikely at its office.

Whether Representative James W. Wadsworth (Republican), New York, would answer the Hurley attack was among the many conjectures. He had been widely mentioned as a possible leader of the anti-New Deal sentiment two years from now.

Hurley was known to be reflecting opinions harbored by some other Republican leaders. Significance was attributed to his statement, inasmuch as it was the first of the kind. It said the league "is financed by the same people and led by the same man that led the smear-Hoover campaign," and expressed regrets that "such splendid statesmen" as Wadsworth, Smith and John W. Davis would be "taken in by the old smearbrigade."

Early Ruling On McCracken Case Is Sought

Imprisonment Legality Up to Supreme Court; House Interested.

(Associated Press.)

The Supreme Court will be asked in a few days to determine whether the Senate has the authority, in judging a person to be in contempt, to have him imprisoned.

The issue will be brought up in the famous contempt case involving William P. MacCracken, jr., former assistant secretary of Commerce for Aviation. He was charged by the Senate Air Mail Investigating Committee with destroying certain documents subpenaed in the inquiry.

MacCracken was found guilty by the Senate of "wilfully destroying certain documents." He took the case to the District of Columbia Supreme Court after a sortie with Chesley W. Jurney, Senate sergeant at arms, which involved a week-end of amusing developments last spring.

At first, MacCracken played hide and seek with Jurney. Then he forced himself to be placed in custody by making the sergeant at arms his unwilling host over a week-end.

The lower court ruled the Senate had no authority to sentence MacCracken and the Senate has directed that an appeal be taken.

With the aid of Representative Hatton Sumners (Democrat), Texas, chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, Leslie C. Garnett, United States District Attorney, has prepared a petition to file with the Supreme Court asking for a ruling.

Before he died, Speaker Henry T. Rainey asked Sumners to "protect the interests of the House" in the case.

The petition says:

"It is of tremendous importance to Congress, as well as to those citizens affected by investigations of the kind herein involved, to have this court definitely determine whether the act of the recusant witness in destroying documents under subpona by Congress nullifies the power of punishment essential to its self-preservation and inherent in it, and thus effectually annihilates its power to require the production of documents."

'Invaders' Make Inroads in New Jersey Area

By Harris B. Hull.

The "invaders" of the Eastern Coast of the United States have succeeded in pushing their lines inland from 10 to 30 miles in New Jersey, it was learned at general headquarters at the War Department here yesterday.

This not only gives the "enemy," in the mythical war now being conducted, the tactical advantage of having captured considerable area, but it will allow the unmolested landing of a large expeditionary force in the Atlantic City-Barnegat Bay region.

From the best information available here it is estimated this enemy force immediately available consists of 15 infantry divisions, 2 cavalry divisions, an air force of at least 750 planes and miscellaneous troops.

Situation Outlined.

The situation in the war games was described as follows:

The lines of the enemy extend between Toms River, Bamber, Cedar Bridge, Cedar Grove, Port Republic and Mays Landing. In the Cape May area the Black forces have reached a line between Mays Landing, Millville and Bridgeton. The forces in the eastern Delaware sector are between Little Creek and Dover.

During their advance the enemy has taken possession of considerable equipment, such as motor transportation and general supplies.

High-ranking tacticians of the American general staff last night said four general courses of action seem to be open to the enemy. These are;

1. An advance toward the north to secure the New York area.

2. An advance west and northwest to secure the Philadelphia and Wilmington area.

3. An advance north and northwest to secure the New York, Philadelphia and Wilmington areas.

4. Extensive landing operations of additional troops in the Narragansett Bay, Boston area, opening up this sector as a theater of operations. At least two leading generals of the American Army said that in their opinion the enemy would not start important operations in the Boston region, preferring to concentrate their forces in one theater.

Defensive Position Described.

The situation in the war games as it existed yesterday is shown by this map. It outlines the present enemy lines and the possible avenues of tactical approach to Wilmington, Philadelphia and New York.

General headquarters will be established at Raritan Arsenal, N. J. Headquarters of the First Army will base at Camp Dix and the Second Army at Fort Monmouth. The General Headquarters Air Force will be stationed at Raritan Arsenal.

At present the General Headquarters Air Force is being assembled in the Los Angeles-San Diego district preparatory to a quick transcontinental flight.

The First and Second Army being engaged in the New Jersey area, the Third and Fourth Armies are continuing their concentration for defense of any additional moves against the Pacific coastal frontier.

Intimation of the future plans of the major American defensive action was gained last night when it was learned Gen. MacArthur had issued the following instructions:

1. The First and Second Armies, general headquarters reserve units and the General Headquarters Air Force will concentrate in the North Atlantic theater and defeat Black landing operations.

2. The First Army will concentrate and establish lines in the vicinity of Camp Dix, Berlin, Pitman, Pennsgrove, Wilmington and Quarryville. Upon arrival of the advance forces of the Second Army, the First Army will cover the right of the concentration.

3. The Second Army will concentrate and establish lines in the vicinity of Keyport, Freehold, New Egypt, Trenton and Delaware River. Upon arrival of advance forces, this force will cover the left of the concentration.

4. The General Headquarters Air Force will concentrate at airports suitable for supporting operations of the First and Second Armies. The selection of the airports has been left to the commanding officer of the G. H. Q. Air Force, Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover.

5. A general reserve consisting of three Infantry division, two Cavalry divisions, one Cavalry brigade, mechanized, and the remaining G. H. Q. Reserve units will be placed into action and employed by the commanding generals of the First and Second Armies and specifically at West Chester, Pa., and Lambertville, N. J.

6. The Ninety-third Infantry Brigade, National Guard, will concentrate in the Narragansett Bay, Boston area, and will replace the Eighteenth Brigade as sector troops in the New England area.

It also was learned other forces will be distributed in the Long Island coast and the Norfolk and Newport News sector.

Firemen Push Parade Plans At Alexandria

Vanguard of Visitors Is Expected to Arrive There Tomorrow.

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 523.

The vanguard of the fire companies which will participate in the Labor Day parade of the National Firemen's Association in Alexandria will arrive tomorrow, Chairman James M. Duncan, jr., of the convention committee, having been advised that the Pioneer Hose Company of Brackenridge, Pa., will reach here on that day and be quartered in Portner's Arena. Ansonia, Conn., will be the second to be represented by a large company, bringing 136 men. The Ebenezer Fire Company, of New York, will bring 65 members, 30 members of the ladies' auxiliary and a drum corps.

The location of the reviewing stand has been changed from Washington and Princess streets to Washington and Queen. It will accommodate 277 persons, and work on it will be started immediately. The work of erecting 7,000 circus seats on Washington street is well under way.

Many stores and private homes are being decorated, and talks will be delivered twice daily over the Columbia Broadcasting System advertising the parade.

A large number of Alexandria volunteer firemen will act as special police the day of the parade, and will receive special instructions at headquarters tomorrow night.

46 Trophies Offered.

There are 46 trophies and cups to be awarded as prizes, and $1,070 has been contributed for the cash prizes.

Members of the Alexandria City Council, chairmen of various convention committees and officers from the three Government vessels which will be in Alexandria during the convention will be tendered a dinner in the George Mason Hotel at 7 p. m. Monday. Dan S. Hollengs, business manager of the chamber of commerce, is in charge of arrangements.

F. S. Cronin, of the Ethyl Gasoline Corporation, will be guest speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Alexandria Kiwanis Club today in the George Mason Hotel, his topic being "The Importance in our present-day lives of the automobile and the progress in modern motor fuels." Tom Jones, president of the club, will be in charge of the program.

The club and ladies of their families have been invited to attend the meeting of the Prince Georges Kiwanis Club, at the Beaver Dam Country Club, which will be designated as "Golden Rule Night," when the Annapolis Club will present the Capital District golden rule to the Prince Georges Club.

William L. Schwartz, 114 South Fayette street, and John C. Shaw, 1022 King street, have been appointed members of the Alexandria police force to fill existing vacancies, and will assume their new duties today. The appointment was announced by Police Capt. John S. Arnold. The personnel of the department now numbers 32 men.

A moonlight excursion 40 miles down the Potomac will be given Sunday night, leaving Alexandria firemen's committee to aid in defraying the expenses of the convention of the National Firemen's Association. The steamer Potomac will leave from the Prince street wharf.

Women's Apparel 'Awful,' Says Man Regaining Sight

Tyler, Tex., Aug. 29 (AP).—The light that failed C. E. Morgan back in 1918 returned today to give him dim but startling visions of changes in this ever changing world, particularly in women's dresses.

"The way women wear clothes now is something awful," proclaimed Morgan, who for many years has made his living as a peanut peddler.

Feeling the way along the street here today, the blind man said he suddenly began to make out light, objects, people and the sky. He became so excited he snatched his hat from his head and ran four blocks before realizing what he was doing.

Official Cash Rule Faces Court Test

Roanoke Seeks Decision for Audit.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—A court test of an opinion by the Attorney General of Virginia, which held that local officials can not be required to show they have sufficient cash on hand to offset their official accountability is contemplated by Roanoke city authorities in the event they are unable otherwise to obtain a thorough audit of the local voting list for 1932 and 1933 and a further audit of the office of City Sergt. M. E. Mayhew.

An audit of the police and firemen's pension system also is plannned by council.

The city takes the position that if the recent opinion of the attorney general hampers the audits, an appeal will be made to the Governor to secure a court decision on the validity of the opinion, and failing in that move, the city itself would institute court proceedings to obtain an interpretation of existing statutes.

Textile Tie-up Is Justified, Green States

Labor Chief Says Code Failed to Raise Pay or Employment.

(Associated Press.)

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, last night approved the projected strike by the Nation's cotton textile workers, saying it was justified because the cotton textile code failed to realize for labor the purposes of the National recovery act.

In behalf of the textile workers, Green said in a radio address that the code not only had failed to raise wages, but had failed to increase employment. He added: "We are facing this issue, Shall guidance of future developments remain in the hands of industry under the National Recovery Administration or shall it be transferred to the Relief Administration?"

Speaking on the same program, Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, exhorted the cotton workers to "beware of disruptive elements; as you walk out be orderly, and remain orderly, always." Gorman summarized the grievances of the workers and as a final warning told them:

"Particularly beware of Communist intrigue. Keep your ranks free from Communism and Communist trickery. Stamp it out wherever it raises its head. Be stern about this."

Green asserted that while the cotton textile code, the first to be adopted under the NRA, was being drawn, mills were working overtime to lay up large stores of reserves.

"In the public hearing," he said, "there was a sharp contrast between the industry's desire to operate profitably in the interest of owners and security holders and its efforts to force mill operatives to work at the very lowest profit to themselves."

He said the stretch-out had been employed by manufacturers to reduce the income of workers. "With the limitation of machine hours prescribed by the code," he said, "came demand for increase in output per hour. Men who in 1929 were operating from 18 to 20 looms are now in some cases operating 44 to 56 looms of the same type; battery hands who before the code were operating 24 batteries now operate 42 * * *. All these cases of stretch-out mean less employment.

"For those still employed, the pace at which they must work is so great that they are speedily worn out. The unions are in receipt of hundreds of letters from men and women who after years of work are discharged because they can not keep up with the constantly increasing speed."

Green said the textile workers were protesting against low wages, insecurity of employment and denial of the right to organize and bargain collectively.

Girl Beach "Squatter" Given Aid by County

San Mateo, Calif., Aug. 29 (AP). Betty Wendt, 19, who lived nearly a month in a crudely built shelter on a beach near here and subsisted on picnic scraps and what she could beg at homes, was at the county detention home today.

Convicts Give to Hospital.

Springfield, Mass. (U.P.).—Inmates of Connecticut State Prison sent a half ton of tinfoil to the Shriners' Hospital for Crippled Children here. The Shriners, in a campaign for money, have been collecting tinfoil. It is melted and sold, the proceeds going for the benefit of the hospital.

Fairbanks-Pickford Reunion Starts New Hollywood Rumor

Mary Refuses to Deny Marital Differences Are Settled.

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 29 (AP). Mary Pickford's remark "I won't deny it," when asked whether she and Douglas Fairbanks had composed their marital differences, started a new series of rumors in filmdom today.

Friends of the couple insisted Miss Pickford would drop her divorce suit in the next few days.

They said they understood Fairbanks was about to move back to Pickfair, the palatial home built by the couple in the first year of their romance. Miss Pickford has been living there since their estrangement.

"I won't deny it. I hope it's true. I can't discuss it now," said Miss Pickford late last night in answer to a question about whether she and Fairbanks had made up.

Neither Doug nor Mary could be reached today for amplification of Miss Pickford's statement.

Fairbanks was at Pickfair until late last night. He had dinner with Mary, and afterward they sat in the private projection room and saw a new film, "The Affairs of Cellini." Whether Fairbanks left Pickfair later was not ascertained.

Miss Pickford confirmed the fact that Fairbanks was with her. She looked toward the drawing room and a reporter saw "Doug." The actor appeared startled and darted down a corridor.

One of their friends said Miss Pickford had finally acceded to Fairbanks' desire to travel. This supposedly was a factor in their separation. Miss Pickford liked to stay at home and Doug wanted to travel.

Human Rights Efforts Lauded By Gov. Brough

Fairfax Democrats Told Real Ideal Today Is Service.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The efforts of President Roosevelt in the protection of human rights as against property rights were lauded by former Gov. Charles H. Brough of Arkansas, chairman of the Virginia-District of Columbia Boundary Line Commission, in an address before the Young Democratic Club of Fairfax Tuesday night. He declared that the real ideal of this age is service.

He told the club that the President believes in equality of opportunity as opposed to the equality of property. Only through the application of service, he declared, can future peace and prosperity be realized.

Gov. Brough said that the foreign trade of this country has been greatly increased because of the recent reciprocal tariff policy and a brighter future for the export trade of the country is at hand as the result of the latest monetary policy of the Administration.

The club adopted a resolution indorsing the candidacy of Senator Harry F. Byrd and Representative Howard W. Smith for reelection in the coming election.

McLean Plans Fete.

The McLean Volunteer Fire Depratment will hold its annual harvest home fried chicken dinner in the engine house September 29. The department will be assisted by the Women's Auxiliary.

Floyd Gantt was appointed to direct the department's annual sale of coal. The department decided not to participate in Labor Day parades this year, either in Alexandria or Washington.

Gross receipts from McLean Day were announced as $3,300. The fire fighters' unit presented the department with a check for $100 from profits on an oyster roast, lawn party and supper. The department has reduced its bank indebtedness during the past year from $1,200 to $500.

The Vienna Fire Department will send a truck and group of firemen to the Labor Day parade in Alexandria.

The treasurer reported that $415 has been donated to date during the tag drive, with additional funds still being received. The Auxiliary cleared $70 Friday at a dinner served in the town hall to employes of the Farm Credit Administration of Washington.

The Women's Auxiliary of the Falls Church Fire Department will enter a float in the Labor Day parade in Alexandria. Members will meet in the engine house Friday night to trim the float. Plans are in charge of Miss Pauline Royston.

The Auxiliary cleared $175 at the lunch counter it operated during the Falls Church firemen's carnival.

James R. Thomas, 80, Is Dead at Cambridge

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). James R. Thomas, 80, died Monday night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Joseph Brocato. He was a native of Rhodesdale, but had lived in Cambridge more than 60 years.

In addition to Mrs. Brocato, he leaves a daughter, Mrs. J. Edward Reid, and a son, James Gordy Thomas, of Baltimore. Funeral services were held today.

Beat Her on Holidays.

Bridgeport, Ohio (U.P.).—Married in 1930, George F. Koch observed Labor Day the next year and New Year's of 1933 by beating his wife, Sadie, she charged in a divorce petition.

A special meeting will be held next week to plan for participation in the Arlington-Fairfax firemen's carnival in Ballston, September 12 and 13.

Piedmont Chapter Meets.

Piedmont Chapter, American War Mothers, meeting at the home of Mrs. N. C. Pattie, in Falls Church, decided that it will be necessary to change the date of the State convention, which is to be held in Falls Church this year, from October to November, due to conflict with the National convention of the American Legion Auxiliary, which is to be held in Miami, Fla., in October. Mrs. J. Oliver Frank, of Ballston, chairman of entertainment and program, reported difficulty in obtaining the desired speakers in October as many persons prominent in legion and war mothers' activities are planning to go to Miami. Decision on postponing the convention is subject to confirmation by State president, Mrs. Thrift, of Portsmouth, Va.

Mrs. Sarah J. Sisson, chairman of child welfare, reported of welfare work costing over $200. A letter of appreciation was read from the children of a war veteran who were sent to a 4-H Club summer camp by Piedmont Chapter. Mrs. W. L. Turner reported haspitalization work done during the summer. Plans were made for a box picnic in September at the home of the president, Mrs. T. T. Taylor, in Dunn Loring.

The annual carnival conducted last week by the Vienna Council, Order of Fraternal Americans and Betsy Ross Council, Daughters of America, for the benefit of the council's charity fund, grossed $700. Howland Kenyon was chairman. Prizes were awarded to J. H. Beattie, of McLean, who received a radio, and to Miss Helen Kenyon, of Vienna, a ton of coal.

30 Merchants In Trade Show

Annapolis Dealers Revive Exposition Under C. of C. Auspices.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Thirty Annapolis merchants are participating in the trades exposition, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, which opened tonight for a four-night stand in the gymnasium of St. John's College.

It is the fourth affair fo the kind ever held here. The custom was inaugurated in 1929, but has not been held the last few years due to the depression. This year business men rallied to the suggestion for a resumption, with the result that the exhibition is more extensive in every way than previous undertakings. The show is intended to acquaint county residents with the wares handled by local merchants.

Tonight's attendance indicated records of past years would be surpassed.

There are 67 booths in the show, all elaborately decorated, presenting a festive scene. Special entertainment is provided, with a show for children planned Saturday on the lawn about the gym.

Gov. Ritchie has indicated he may attend the exposition Friday.

Among the exhibit booths not strictly along the line of local merchandising was that of The Washington Post.

Young Democrats to Meet.

The Young Democratic Club of southern Maryland will hold a rally September 7 in Miller's Hall, Clinton, Md. Candidates for county offices will be introduced.

Gold Profits Are 'Nest Egg,' Says Roosevelt

President Hears European Conditions Outlined by Norman H. Davis.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 29.—Characterizing the $2,800,000,000 profit from devaluation of the dollar in terms of gold as a "nest egg" for the future, President Roosevelt declared today that no early action is contemplated to disturb this fund now under lock and key in the Treasury.

In making known his position, the President subscribed to a policy outlined in an address by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., who pointed out that "ultimately" the profit would be used in balancing the budget and reducing the National debt.

In describing the profit as a "nest egg," Mr. Roosevelt explained that one "ultimately uses" a nest egg.

Meanwhile, the President turned his attention to European affairs in a long discussion with Ambassador Norman H. Davis, and welcomed Prof. Felix Frankfurter, whose Harvard Law School has contributed many a smart young lawyer to the New Deal as an overnight guest.

Mr. Davis reported to the President on both the troubled status of the world disarmanent conference at Geneva and the preliminary naval conversations at London. He left Hyde Park prepared to embark late in September to continue his discussions with the British on the subject of the scheduled 1935 naval conference.

Accompanied by Mrs. Frankfurter, the Harvard law professor arrived at the President's home late in the day. Inasmuch as he has spent most of the year abroad, lecturing at Oxford, Mr. Roosevelt said they would probably devote much of their talks to conditions in Europe. It will be their first meeting since Prof. Frankfurter visited Hype Park last September.

Questioned at his first press conference in the "Summer White House," Mr. Roosevelt had no comment on either the strike scheduled for September 4 in the cotton textile industry or the defiant refusal of the cotton garment industry to accept his recent order reducing hours. It was indicated, however, that he had no intention of relaxing the terms of the order.

With a wave of his hand, the President, seated in his tiny library office, likewise passed over questions regarding the resignation of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson last week. The resignation was withdrawn at the President is said to have appealed to the recovery administrator to continue at his post.

Concerning his vacation, the President was enthusiastic. He further said that, if conditions permit, he hopes to board Vincent Astor's yacht Nourmahal about September 14 to view the America Cap races off Newport, R. I. A yachting enthusiast, he hasn't missed an international race in years.

Lily Damita Will Marry Young English Millionaire

But Wedding Must Wait Until Work Is Done, Says Film Star.

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Lily Damita took time off from filming a picture here today to announce her engagement to marry millions.

The petite French motion picture player admitted she was engaged to Hugo Brassey, young English millionaire now at his family's ranch in Deaudesert, Queenland, but said "there can be no marriage until I finish my work." She revealed she had been secretly engaged for five months and said they would be married in Hollywood in October or November.

Miss Damita said she would return to Hollywood after finishing her work here September 25.

"I expect Mr. Brassey will sail shortly for California," she said, adding that she expected to see him in America soon.

"I think it's a good match," the Frenchwoman said, "but why don't you ask Mr. Brassey?"

Her fiance she described as "handsome."

The actress said she had visited Brassey's family homes in London and Scotland.

Retracting an earlier statement that her engagement was "unofficial," she explained that she had not planned to announce it until after her return to America.

The French actress discussed her previous engagements to Prince Louis Ferdinand, son of the former Crown Prince of Germany, and later to William K. Vanderbilt, killed in an automobile accident, adding, "I hope the saying that the third time is lucky will prove true in my case."

Security Plan Is Certain Soon, Hopkins Says

Expects Old-Age Pension, Jobless Insurance Program for U. S.

(Associated Press.)

Possible paths to greater social security were outlined yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, the relief administrator. Hopkins said it was a safe bet that the President's committee on social security would recommend some form of unemployment insurance, old age pensions and public works.

He sketched this in meager details, and then packed his bags for a trip to New York and a visit of several days at the Hyde Park summer White House.

Hopkins, a member of the social security committee, said unemployment insurance should be made compulsory, even if it is financed by contributions and not by taxation.

Tells of European Plan.

The $8 a week benefits provided for the unemployed by insurance systems abroad would be "pretty small" for this country, he added. He explained insured workers in England receive benefits for 26 weeks of unemployment, then 20 on relief.

"I wouldn't say success of unemployment insurance necessarily requires taxes," the administrator continued, "but there is substantial evidence that it is a better plan with the Government contributing something."

He mentioned some unemployment insurance that follows a three-way plan, with contributions by industry, employes and the Government.

Asked what opposition he expected to the social security program, Hopkins barked:

"Any program to do anything for the people meets tremendous opposition in America.

Expects Industrial Support.

"How will industry stand? I think the industrial interests will be with us on this."

He expressed belief that England was making a mistake in turning from unemployment insurance to a relief system similar to this country's.

Hopkins issued a prepared statement to correct what he called a "widespread misapprehension" about the Relief Administration's policy toward strikers.

"There has been no evidence that the policy on relief to strikers has either prolonged a strike or encouraged a new one," the statement said. "Indeed, I am convinced that our policy has been a direct and important factor in the maintenance of law and order."

O'Connor Here, Talks to Byrns Of Speakership

Shrewd Sectional Deals, Staged Behind Scenes, May Decide Fight.

By Robert C. Albright.

Shrewd sectional deals for key positions in the next House organization were in the making yesterday as the Speakership contest narrowed down to a battle of wits that may go to the best horse trader.

Significantly, Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, one of Tammany's finest, and a contender in the 1932 Speakership race, slipped into town and slipped out again, without making any commitments.

But for a considerable time, Representative O'Connor was closeted with Representative Joseph Wellington Byrns, House Democratic floor leader, announced aspirant for the gavel formerly flourished by the late Speaker Rainey.

Strategically Silent.

Representative O'Connor has put in no bid in the present Speakership preliminaries. In his behalf it was said "he has given no thought to the matter." But it is known the Speakership was discussed at yesterday's conference, and there is cogent reason why it should have been.

Representative O'Connor conducted a lone-wolf campaign in the 1932 race. He lacked the support of Tammany, which subsequently, through a last-minute trade with Rainey and Byrns, captured the assistant floor leadership for its House chieftain, Thomas H. Cullen.

Nevertheless, Mr. O'Connor is not to be considered apart from the House Tammany delegation, which ususally acts and votes as a unit.

High on Rules Committee.

His silence on the Speakership may be prompted by any one of a number of things, not the least of which is his present ranking position on the powerful Rules Committee, which puts him in line for the chairmanship, should the present chairman, Representative William Bankhead, of Alabama, one of the principal contenders for the gavel, become Speaker or floor leader.

And current talk has it, Mr. O'Connor would be entirely satisfied with the rules chairmanship. It remains a question whether Tammany would be.

Speculation revolved around whether Tammany would do its talking on this score with Representative Byrns or Representative Bankhead. Although the Alabaman has been mentioned as a possible running mate for floor leader on a ticket with Byrns as Speaker, more frequently suggested for second place on the Byrns slate has been Representative James M. Mead, of New York, and Representative William W. Arnold, of Illinois. Even Mr. O'Connor has been mentioned in this connection.

Field Wide Open.

Then, too, Mr. Bankhead, who thinks he has an excellent chance for the Speakership, might have some views of his own about second place on anybody's ticket.

With four months to go, the field yesterday still was wide open, with other entries at any time likely to upset the present balance of chances between Representatives Byrns, Bankhead, Rayburn, of Texas, and Rankin, of Mississippi.

Meanwhile, Postmaster General Farley's statement that the Administration has no horse in the race, had a clarifying effect on the issues. There has been a strong feeling among members right along that the White House has no business dabbling in Congressional organization problems, but the possibility of a "kind word" from the President loomed as a tempting morsel for which all candidates might play.

All Anti-Gaggers.

Reports that Representative Byrns' declaration for repeal of the "discharge rule," whereby 145 members might force a vote on any bill, had split the Tennesseean's backing, were received without apparent concern in the floor leader's camp.

There it was pointed out that all of the major contenders for the Speakership favored repeal of the rule, and that Representative McDuffie, of Alabama, principal prop of Representative Bankhead, moved to throw the rule out of the window before the last adjournment.

Notary Convicted On Fraud Charges

Ottobine Garage Man to Take Appeal.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.). P. M. McInturff, 30, Ottobine garage operator and notary public, who is accused of assisting a hundred or more of his friends and neighbors in filling out their applications for automobile driving permits and then failing to send to the State Division of Motor Vehicles the 50 cents each deposited, was found guilty of embezzlement yesterday by Trial Justice Hamilton Haas and sentenced to eight months in jail.

His attorney noted an appeal to Rockingham Circuit Court and McInturff is at liberty on $500 bond. He claims that he sent the money to Richmond by mail and that it never reached the State Motor Vehicle Division.

Treasury Hails Firm Position Of U. S. Bonds

Reaction to Morgenthau Review Held Aid to New Financing.

(Associated Press.)

Treasury officials last night expressed gratification at the first day's reaction to Secretary Morgenthau's announcement that the Government's gold profits would be used ultimately to reduce the National debt.

They were especially pleased with the strength of Government bonds, a circumstance which they saw as a good augury for the $1,700,000,000 of financing that will be undertaken little more than a fortnight hence.

Meanwhile, it was estimated the gold and silver programs in combination held possibilities of an eventual inflation to the extent of $3,590,000,000, or even more if, as many believe likely, the silver dollar is devalued sooner or later.

This arises from a $2,800,000,000 profit realized by the Treasury on its gold stocks when the gold value of the dollar was cut and $790,000,000 estimated as the maximum seigniorage on silver.

Depends on Silver Price.

The latter figure would be reduced should the Government find it necessary to pay more than 50 cents an ounce for the bulk of silver it purchases, and increased if the silver equivalent of the dollar were raised above its present $1.29 an ounce level.

The "seigniorage" is the difference between purchase price and the statutory value of the silver. As currency is issued against the metal this profit is credited to the general receipts of the Government.

Secretary Morgenthau's statement that in arriving at the cost of the New Deal the increase in the Treasury's cash balance, the gold profit and the rise in value of assets of Government-financed agencies should be deducted from the rise in the National debt received close study.

His inference that the cost of the New Deal was but a little more than $500,000 promised to become the target of some political sharpshooting. Republicans smiled and statements will follow.

Curran Hits Expenses.

The only assertion on the subject came from Henry H. Curran, director of the National Economy League. He said Mr. Morgenthau had "done a great service in making clear some of the aspects of the financial Chinese puzzle into which the fiscal affairs of the Federal Government have developed in the eyes of the ordinary observer."

He called for a reduction in Government expenditures and a balanced budget at the earliest possible time if a perilous situation is to be avoided.

"The present danger lies in the difficulty of radically reducing the present rate of Government expenditures," he said. "There will have to be deep cuts in many of the alphabetical agencies which spend the most emergency money. I know a bit about government and I know that nobody cuts just for the fun of it. They have to be told to do it and the American people must tell them."

New Division To Press Code Reduction Plan

Coonley Will Administere Textile, Apparel, Fur, Leather Pacts.

Another step in the NRA reorganization plan was taken yesterday with creation of a new division to administer textile, apparel, leather and fur codes.

Officials described the move as an important phase of the plan to group allied industries under 22 sections. The new division will include two sections and more than 100 of nearly 700 existing pacts.

Prentiss Coonley, formerly a deputy administrator in charge of textile codes, was named acting divisional administrator.

"In the transfers," an official announcement explained, "personnel was left intact Thus the men with the most experience in these particular lines remain available to the industries with which they have been dealing right along; there is to be no interruption or delay in handling code questions.

"The grouping of this division * * * is regarded as typical of the new structure being erected. Here, under a single central supervision, are assembled all the codes that bear upon the production of clothing and other coverings. * * *

"Side by side are codes for shoe manufacturers, saddlers, luggage and handbag makers, fur trapping contractors and dealers in skins, fur dressers and dyers, fur manufacturers."

One Gang Girl Calls Another Liar at Trial

Marie McKeever Charges Leonora Fontaine Shot Herself.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Testifying in the murder trial of her friend, Robert Mais, Marie McKeever said today that Mrs. Leonora Fontaine, star prosecution witness, had not told the truth when she said she was shot by Mais in an Upper Darby, Pa., apartment. Mais is charged with murder in the holdup of a Federal Reserve bank truck here March 8 and the slaying of the driver, E. M. Huband.

Miss McKeever said the shot was fired by Mrs. Fontaine, who previously had said she wanted to die. She testified that Mrs. Fontaine was despondent over the death of "Big George" Phillips, leader of the tri-State gang, and had on several occasions mentioned a suicide pact into which she had entered with Phillips.

The prosecution rested at 12:45 p. m. today after Mrs. Fontaine had testified that Mais shot her.

Mrs. Fontaine said she had overheard Mais describe the get-away from Richmond on the night of the holdup to Marie McKeever, in their Washington apartment, where she was staying after Phillips was shot by Washington police. She said she later went to Upper Darby and there she was shot by Mais. Previously she had told police she was shot because she "knew too much" about the gang's activities.

The prosecution rested after calling to the stand Detective Sergt. Trustcott, of the Washington police force, and Postal Inspector Leo Dewaard. These men accompanied Arthur (Dutch) Misunas, admitted gangster and principal State's witness, back to Washington after his arrest in San Francisco. Under vigorous cross-examination, Trustcott repeatedly denied that Misunas had been promised any leniency for his decision to testify for the prosecution.

Women Will Join In Frederick Fair

Frederick, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—A meeting of fair chairmen of the Frederick County Federation of Rural Women's Clubs will be held at the Y. M. C. A. here September 4, when plans for an exhibit at the annual Frederick Fair will be discussed.

Mrs. Charles E. Main and Miss Helen Pearson, home demonstration agent, are preparing for the exhibit. The Federation exhibit for some years has been one of the main indoor attractions.

The fair chairmen are: Mrs. Helen Safrit, Adamstown; Mrs. Thomas P. Culler, Ballenger; Mrs. Charles Klein, Braddock; Mrs. D. T. McKinney, Buckeystown; Mrs. Edwin Chrismer, Emmitsburg; Miss Helen Witter, Harmony Grove; Mrs. C. W. Smith, Ijamsville; Mrs. Keedy Shaff, Jefferson; Mrs. Clarence Stitely, Johnsville; Miss Floy Hiteshew, Jug Bridge; Miss Lillye Williams, Kemptown; Mrs. Clifford Kelly, Lewistown; Mrs. John Joy, Libertytown; Mrs. George Chick, Maryland Tract; Mrs. Charles Remsberg, Middletown; Mrs. E. W. McDevitt, Mount Pleasant; Mrs. Clara M. Mentzer, Mrs. John C. McKee and Mrs. John W. Eldridge, Myersville; Mrs. John Umberger, New Market; Mrs. C. V. Biser, Pleasant Grove; Miss Ocale Wright, Point of Rocks; Mrs. Irving Joy, Unionville; Mrs. Edward Windsor, Urbana; Mrs. Franklin Cramer, Walkersville, and Mrs. Owen Dorsey, Woodsboro.

Result of $1,066,000 PWA Grant to College.

Blacksburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Students of Virginia Polytechnic Institute who return to their studies September 20 will find many changes on the V. P. I. campus. A faculty apartment house, a utilities building and a student dormitory are under construction on the campus as a part of the $1,066,000 PWA grant to the institute.

New roads and new walks also have been built, and five faculty houses have been moved. The college book store has been improved and nearly $2,000 worth of equipment added.

Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of the institute, says enrollment now is 38 per cent greater than at the same time last summer and is larger than it was in the peak summer of 1929.

Falling Man Lands On 2d-Story Roof

Suffers Only Minor Hurts in Baltimore Accident.

Baltimore, Aug. 29 (AP).—Bannon D. May, 29, of Bristol, Va., stopping here overnight on his way to New York to accept a new job, fell early today from the fourth-floor window of his hotel 30 feet to a second-story roof. At the hospital he was said to have suffered only cuts and bruises.

Three hours after they retired, Mrs. May discovered her husband was missing. She found him on the roof beneath the window.

Mr. and Mrs. May were accompanied by his employer, August Rock, and two friends, James M. Trouham and Clyde L. Sanders, all of Bristol.

Front Royal Council Again Names Dutrow

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—L. B. Dutrow, town manager for the past four years, was reelected Monday night by the town council for another term of two years, beginning September 1.

Promoted by Teachers College

Promotions in the State Teachers College at Fredericksburg, Va., announced yesterday by Dr. Morgan L. Combs, president, will make Mrs. Nannie Morris Mae Williams, right above, and Miss Bertha M. Kirk, chief registrar and head of the department of physical and health education, respectively. Miss Kirk was an associate professor of physical education. She succeeds Miss Katherine Watson, who resigned to pursue studies in education. Mrs. Williams has served during the summer as acting registrar. She will also hold the position of secretary to the president.

Virginia Lists Orators

Notable Public Addresses by State's Sons in Past 260 Years Compiled by University Men; Wide Range in Topics.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Notable public addresses made by famous Virginians covering a span of 260 years are recorded in a volume entitled: "Virginia Oratory," recently compiled by Dr. William Royall Smithey and Dr. Calvin Hall Phippins, of the University of Virginia faculty, and just published by the Historical Publishing Co. here.

In addition to collecting many well-known public utterances under one title, the authors have attempted to project the historical background and the spirit of the times in the various stages of Virginia history. The orations range from the appeal of Chief Logan of the Mingo Indians, before Lord Dunmore, Colonial Governor, in which the Indian sought to justify his bloody attack on the whites in 1774, down to a Nation-wide radio speech in March, 1934, by Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction.

While the book is designed primarily for library reference and use in high schools and colleges, it is expected that it will be of special value to all interested in Virginia history.

Revolutionary period orators included are George Washington, Patrick Henry, Richard Henry Lee, Thomas Jefferson, John Hurt, George Mason, Edmund Pendleton, Edmund Randolph, James Madison, John Marshall, James Monroe, John Dawson and Hugh Blair Grigsby.

Those connected with the First National period are John Thomson, William Henry Harrison, John Tyler, John Randolph, John Holt Rice, Benjamin Watkins Lee, Lucian Minor, Thomas Dew, William Maxwell, Armistead C. Gordon, James McDowell, Henry A. Wise, William H. MacFarland, Matthew Fontaine Maury, R. M. T. Hunter, Zachary Taylor and Henry Clay.

Pity the Swift! No More Privacy Under U. S. Order

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—At the request of the Federal Biological Survey, I. H. Johnston, West Virginia State ornithologist, has begun the job of finding and catching 10,000 chimney swifts before the end of September and banding their legs in an effort to learn their winter habitat.

The chimney swift, which flies all day long, is the only native bird whose winter home the Federal Biological Survey has not yet located. It has been supposed the bird winters in South America but no definite proof of the fact has even been found. It is for this reason that the Federal Biological Survey has sent 10,000 narrow aluminum bands and other equipment to Johnston with instructions to band all the chimney swifts he can find.

Boy Scouts are aiding in trapping the birds, which are among the swiftest known. Johnston has already captured 700 or 800 and is prosecuting the work with vigor. The birds are captured in a special trap, the chief feature of which is a round pane of mica, which fools the birds into thinking it is an open hole. When a newspaper is rustled inside the top of a chimney, the birds fly up to see what it is all about, strike the mica pane and are "skidded" into a funnel leading to a receiving box.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Sixteen boys from Cambridge are enjoying camp near Williamsburg as guests of the Cambridge Rotary Club. The boys were selected by Miss Elizabeth Hirst and Miss Elizabeth Gore, public health nurses.

Crisfield Pageant Today Will Depict Historical Events

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Dating back to the time when the first white man came to this section of Maryland, a water pageant will be staged here tomorrow, celebrating Crisfield's annual homecoming event. The pageant will depict the growth of this section of Maryland.

Indian braves and squaws, who held possession of the land on which this community was built, will be depicted. The pioneer residents again will appear on the scene. Interesting historical episodes will be reproduced.

Hundreds of former residents and visitors from far and near are expected to attend the two-day festivities.

The city will be elaborately decorated for the celebration. Raymond K. Woodland, city councilman, is chairman of the celebration committee.

Court to Air Row Over Surety Bond

Richmond, Aug. 29 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples said today it would be necessary to carry into court the State's dispute with the American Surety Co. over the company's obligations under surety bonds of H. Stewart Jones, former Supreme Court of Appeals clerk.

Jones was charged with shortages of more than $80,000 over a period of three terms from 1918. The required bond was $10,000. The company admits liability for only $10,000, while the State contends the company should pay $30,000—$10,000 for each term in which the defalcation allegedly occurred.

New Virginia Curriculum Called Educational Venture

Chicago Specialist Says Tradition Must Be Left Behind.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Describing the new Virginia curriculum program as an experiment and an educational adventure, Dr. R. L. Lyman, of the University of Chicago, told the conference of State school officials and teachers in session here today at the University of Virginia that only through departure from traditional facts could real education be attained.

Offering an evaluation of the revised methods of instruction designed by the State Department of Education, Dr. Lyman said the keynote of the program was the opportunity for self-appraisal and training of students to judge themselves. "I have never seen a greater challenge to administrators and teachers to retain material of proven value, eliminating that which is faulty, and at the same time grasp a command of new and modified forms," he declared.

Stressing the problems confronting the installation in Virginia public schools of new subject matter, the Chicago curriculum specialist said that great difficulty would be experienced in removing the teachers habit of "doing the same thing he or she has been doing for years." He cited the need of broad understanding and sympathetic leadership, and the importance of making dignified the new subject matter.

Dr. Lyman pointed to the value of developing idealism in schools rather than continuing the process of piling up facts, and asserted that turning out successful work even in the slightest form is far more desirable than merely touching the surface of many subjects.

Guides in the use of subject matter in the Virginia curriculum program were suggested by Prof. J. Paul Leonard, of William and Mary College. Today's conferences were directed by Prof. W. R. Smithey, of the University of Virginia, and Dr. K. J. Hoke, dean of William and Mary College.

The entertainment feature on the program was a concert this evening by the Charlottesville Municipal Band.

St. Mary's Slate Completed by G.O.P. Leaders

A. Kingsley Love Running for Attorneyship; Democrats Split.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—St. Mary's County Republican leaders have filled in the vacancies on their ticket, which were State's attorney, House of Delegates and two county commissioners.

A. Kingsley Love, who had filed for the Maryland Senate, decided to run for the State's attorneyship, and Horace Bowling, of Mechanicsville, took his place as candidate for the State Senate. Windsor Palmer was selected as candidate for the House of Delegates and Paul Mosher, with Lawrence Hayden, are the two men running for the office of county commissioner.

The Republicans now go to the primaries September 12 with their ticket complete. On the other hand, the Democrats, who are divided into two camps, Ritchie and anti-Ritchie, are awaiting the outcome of the primaries, for then the question of the leadership of the Democratic party in the county may be settled definitely.

Philip H. Dorsey, strongly backed by Ritchie, if successful at the polls will fall heir to the mantle worn so long by George C. Peverly, who died last week. State Senator Allan Coad, who is running against Dorsey and who stated some months ago that he would be available in case the Democrats fell short of gubernatorial timber, is silent on the question of county leadership.

Louis Abell, believed to be the power behind the throne and contact man with Ritchie, has been quoted as saying the question is undecided.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Public schools throughout Anne Arundel County will reopen September 10, George Fox, county superintendent announced today. The annual teachers' institute will be held at Annapolis September 7.

Jury Dooms Man, Then Saves His Life

Peery Grants Clemency on Plea of Eight.

Richmond, Aug. 29 (AP).—Gov. Peery today commuted the death sentence of Clemon Dixon, colored, of Lynchburg, to life imprisonment. Dixon was to have been executed at the State Penitentiary here Friday for the murder of William Haas, Lynchburg merchant, slain in a holdup.

In giving Dixon the lesser sentence Gov. Peery explained that he acted after eight of the jurymen who found Dixon guilty had petitioned to save his life. The Governor said that of the five other men involved in the holdup, none had received sentences of more than 25 years, and two of them, John Moore and Robert Dixon, had been given only three years each.

Display of 4-H Club Features Keller Fair

Keller, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Keller's Fair, delayed one day by rain, opened yesterday. Girls and boys of the 4-H Club have filled an annex of the exhibition hall with a large display of farm produce, canned goods and demonstrations on conducting the farm and farm home.

Relief Worker Hit by Truck.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Ed Riffle, this city, a relief worker, was believed seriously injured this afternoon when hit by a Maryland licensed truck as he was walking along the highway to his work at Inwood, this county.

G. O. P. Drive In Washington County Opens

Hill Says Next Congress Will Decide Future of Nation.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Republican candidates for State offices converged upon Washington County this week, with Col. John Philip Hill, candidate for the United States Senate nomination, leading the movement.

Col. Hill, who has announced that he is supporting the candidacy of Senator Phillips Lee Goldsborough for Governor, criticized the Democratic Administration at Washington in a statement issued upon his visit here yesterday.

"Whether the 48 States of the United States will be reduced to provinces and governed directly from Washington will be decided by the Seventy-fourth Congress," Col. Hill said. "The new Congress will decide whether the emergency centralization of power in Washington shall be made permanent. Much was done along the lines of centralization under the guise of emergency."

He also attacked various authorities which were delegated to the Federal Government by the last Congress for regulation of business and industry.

"I am not prepared to say that certain so-called New Deal measures might not be made permanent, but fundamentally I am unalterably opposed to changing the United States of America into the United State of America."

Mr. Hill left today for Allegany and Garrett Counties, where he will campaign.

Harry W. Nice, Baltimore, seeking the Republican gubernatorial nomination, and other members of his ticket arrived here today. They were guests at the Shrine picnic and also at a summer Mardi Gras being held by a local volunteer fire company.

The Nice campaign for the county's delegates will be climaxed tomorrow night at a mass meeting to be held at the State armory, which will be addressed by the candidate, former Mayor William F. Broening, Baltimore; C. Wilbur Miller, seeking the United States Senate nomination, and Mayor Walter Quenstedt, Annapolis, who seeks the post of clerk of the Court of Appeals.

Roanoke Man Held On Murder Charge

Virginian Dies, Woman Is Hurt in Shooting.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Anthony E. Ward, 60, was arrested on charges of murder and felonious assault with intent to kill here today following the fatal shooting of Lewis Henry Custer, 37, on the back porch of the Ward residence this morning. Mrs. Minnie Dillon also was shot, in the chest and both arms.

Police were told that the trouble occurred when Mrs. Dillon, who occupied the upstairs flat of the Ward home, attacked Anna Ward, 18, after an argument, when Custer and Mrs. Dillon descended the back steps.

Youths Face Quiz In $427,000 Raid

Auto License Tags Traced by Frederick Police.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 29 (AP).—Questioning of two youths concerning the recent $427,000 holdup in Brooklyn, N. Y., was held in abeyance today pending a check of the license tags on the car they admitted was stolen.

Harold Bross, 21, insisted the tags were issued for the machine in which he and Bernard Moran, 20, were arrested yesterday but police believe the plates belong to another car.

Bross said the car was owned by his grandfather, Clarence Hill, of Brooklyn. It has New Jersey license tags.

$2,380 Fees Paid By 86 Candidates

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Washington County today received $2,380, representing fees of 86 Democratic and Republican candidates for primary nominations.

In turning over the fees to the county the board of election supervisors announced that 35,500 ballots would be printed for the primary election, 18,000 for the Democratic primary and 17,500 for the Republican. The Democratic ballot will contain 63 names and the Republican 53.

Republicans will vote for first and second choices for Governor and United States Senator. First and second choice boxes are necessary on the Republican ballots because there are more than two candidates for each post.

Personnel Selected For 2 Rum Stores

Richmond, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board today announced the personnel for liquor stores at Lawrenceville and Kenbridge.

L. A. Harris, jr., J. Austin Seward and William M. Sanford were appointed to the Lawrenceville store. The manager will be selected later, the announcement said. Frank R. Gee was named manager of the Kenbridge store and Davis S. Anderton, assistant manager.

Mrs. Taylor Buried at Danville.

Danville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services were held here today for Mrs. Marguerite Virginia Taylor, 21, who died at Memorial Hospital yesterday. Her widower, Leon Taylor, survives.

Virginia G. O. P. Girds For New Deal Battle

Republicans of Seventh District Meet Today in Harrisonburg to Select Candidate to Oppose Rep. Robertson.

By C. B. Carr.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 29.—With the New Deal looming as the bone of contention for the political battles of the Old Dominion this fall, the Republicans of the Seventh Congressional District will convene here tomorrow to select a candidate for the House of Representatives opposing A. Willis Robertson, Lexington, Democratic incumbent, standing for reelection.

Politics in Virginia thus far in the Congressional campaign have been the dullest in years. However, an encouraged Republican party, backed by a group of young militants under the banner of the Young Republican Club, is said to be planning an extensive campaign for the senatorial post and an equally extensive battle in at least five of the nine Congressional districts of the State, following the naming of a Seventh District standard-bearer here.

Hotbed of Revolt.

Right here in the Seventh District one is said to find what might be termed the hotbed of anti-New Dealism insofar as Virginia is concerned. The same sentiment is reported to exist to no small degree in the Eighth and First districts, but in the other six political divisions Roosevelt measures have strong support.

Two salient factors are said to be back of the anti-New Dealism in this district and Republican leaders declare that the existence of such factors will give them a running start toward defeating Representative Robertson this fall. In the first place, the district is the home of Senator Byrd, who has opposed several New Deal measures, and past elections have shown that the electorate was quick to support him for State Senator, Governor and finally United States Senator. A second factor entering into the local political situation is the general conservatism of the people.

The Seventh District has long been regarded by many politicians as the backbone of Virginia conservatism. It is pointed out that this conservatism still exists, examples of which are the refusal of Rockingham County people to set up a liquor dispensary as provided by State statute and the "serious consideration" which the people of Shenandoah County are giving the same subject.

Farmers Balk at AAA.

From a number of counties of the district have come reports that farmers this year, more than last, have demonstrated a general apathy toward signing AAA crop-reduction agreements.

Tomorrow's convention here is expected to place a keystone in the pillar of conservation insofar as the Republicans are concerned, the only question which appears in the minds of party leaders concerns the relative strength of the conservatives.

They declare the conservative element has has grown by leaps and bounds since last spring, and that if the tide of conservatism continues to rise until the November election the chances of victory for their candidate are good. Should the tide turn strongly in favor of the New Deal, many Republican leaders freely admit, the chances of the party for a victory in this district would be greatly lessened.

Hill's Full Name On Ballot Proves Costly to County

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—The decision of election authorities that John Philip Hill, seeking the Republican nomination for United States Senate, is sufficient on the primary ballots to identify him, instead of John Boynton Philip Clayton Hill, as he signed the certificate of nomination filed, is going to prove costly to the taxpayers of Washington County.

County election officials received word today to use only John Philip Hill after 2,000 of the ballots carrying John Boynton Philip Clayton Hill had been printed.

When Hill filed a month ago under the elaborate appellation, election officials grinned, but the grins turned to frowns when it was discovered that the long name added half an inch to the width of the Republican ballot, making it clumsy in folding and handling. It was feared the ballot would be so wide that it would be difficult to slip into the slots of the ballot boxes.

Virginia National Guard Battery Passes to U.S.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Transfer of Battery F, 111th Field Artillery of the Virginia National Guard, to the United States National Guard was effected at the unit's weekly drill Monday.

In addition to being subject to call of the Governor for State militia activities, the unit may be summoned for duty by the President of the United States.

Posts in Councils Will Be Vacated

Petersburg Men Act to Keep Bank Jobs.

Petersburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—City Councilman William A. Bond, receiver for the closed First National Bank & Trust Co., and Everett Mann, an employe of the receiver and member of the Colonial Heights town council, will resign their council positions because they are in the employ of the United States Treasury Department, it was learned today.

Neither of the men has as yet tendered his resignation, but it is expected that both will resign before or at the next meetings of the city and town governing bodies.

Under a recent ruling of the Treasury Department, it was said, employes of the department can not hold municipal positions.

Last Rites Tomorrow For M. J. Brumbaugh

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services will be held Friday for M. J. Brumbaugh, of Route 3, who died Tuesday in Washington, where he was for many years an employe of the Treasury Department, Division of Supplies. The services will be held at the home, near State Line.

Burgess Is Found By CCC Workers After Long Search

Eagle Rock, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Apparently in good physical condition despite his trying experience, M. F. Burgess, 77, lost in the mountains near here since Saturday morning, was found yesterday afternoon by a searching party from Company 1386 of the CCC at Camp Malone.

Thomas Guthrie, of Bedford County, recently transferred to the camp from Company 1337 at Manassas, was the first to come upon the missing man, who was lying on the ground on the north side of Rat Hole Mountain, less than half a mile from the highway.

Mr. Burgess was suffering from exposure and thirst and seemed dazed when found. He was taken to the home of his son, G. G. Burgess, of Eagle Rock, where his condition was pronounced satisfactory by the attending physician.

Study of Revenue For Martinsburg

Conference Is Called by City Council.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—City council here today made a public plea by resolution to business, service and other organizations to help find new means to raise revenue for what it considers essential projects during the coming year. A conference was scheduled for September 14 to discuss the matter.

The action was taken after the budget, in order to get State approval, had been reduced. It invited banks, building and loan associations, chamber of commerce, woman's club, underwriters association, Kiwanis, Rotary and Monarch clubs, medical association, ministerial association, bar association, manufacturers, American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and labor organizations to send delegations to the conference.

Firemen to Furnish Lewes Parade Music

Lewes, Del., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Firemen's bands from all over the Delmarva Peninsula will march in the grand parade of the Lewes Fire Department carnival on September 5, as the climax of the carnival celebrations which open in the Pennsylvania Park, Lewes, tomorrow.

Companies to participate include those from Frankford, Delmar, Selbyville, Milton, Ellendale, Rehoboth and Georgetown. Concerts by various bands will be given on the grounds every day of the carnival, which closes on Saturday night, September 8.

Danville to Arrest All Traffic Violators

Danville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—The police commission has ordered Chief of Police Hannibal Martin to see that the traffic laws are better enforced. Complaint centered chiefly on violating parking provisions and speeding through the residential section.

Officers have received instructions to bring all violators into court and to make no exceptions.

Politics in Pictures

Tonight the attention of Maryland's voters will be focused on one of the most significant events of the present political campaign . . . a huge reception in Baltimore honoring Gov. Ritchie, just back from Europe. Among those present will be alert Post cameramen . . . and tomorrow's Post will feature action photographs of this Democratic jamboree.

And don't forget . . . Franklyn Waltman, jr., political reporter extraordinary, will cover the primaries for Post readers. The first of his informative, coloful aticles, written as he tours the State, will appear in The Post next Monday.

Shiloh Unit Baptists Open 140th Session

Two-Day Meeting to Hear Temperance, Education Work Discussions.

Culpeper, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Baptists from six counties comprising the Shiloh association met at the church in Washington, Rappahannock County, today for the opening session of the two-day meeting of the 140th annual conference of that body.

Speakers were Dr. J. B. Hill, representing the Virginia Mission Board; F. T. Crump, treasurer, Baptist General Association, and Miss Sara Funderburk, returned missionary to the Chinese field.

The sermon was preached by the Rev. H. S. Cummins of Parksley, and special music was rendered by the Shiloh Gospel Trio—the Rev. Mr. Graham of Madison, the Rev. Mr. Hall of Ruckersville and the Rev. Mr. Coleman of Novum. A part of each day will be devoted to business of the church, Christian education and an open forum for the discussion of temperance.

B. F. Moomaw of Roanoke, president of the Baptist General Association, will address the morning session Thursday; sermon by Dr. J. T. Edwards, pastor of the Culpeper Baptist Church, and a reminiscent talk on "Twenty-five Years in Shiloh," by the Rev. C. C. Clement of Jeffersonton, who recently tendered his resignation after serving one charge for that period. Delegates from the Culpeper church, attending the association are Mrs. R. E. Miller, Mrs. P. M. Graves, Ara W. Smith, Robert F. Booton and T. E. Nalle.

Delegates Named To G. O. P. Outing

Warren Group Also Elects New County Officers.

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Warren County Republicans, at a mass meeting last night in the court house here, elected delegates and alternates to the Seventh Congressional District Republican convention in Harrisonburg tomorrow, and named officers of the county organization. R. R. Griffith was chairman and M. M. Martin, secretary.

The delegates are: C. W. Sedwick, R. G. Thomason, Wilson Grove, R. R. Griffith, J. E. Ritenour, Silas W. Laing and Oscar Miller; alternates, W. C. Deming, Mrs. Blanche Sedwick, Mrs. Gladys M. Deming, J. L. Dickinson, Mrs. Liona Griffith, Mrs. Jesse Borden and E. A. Gruver.

W. C. Deming was reelected county chairman, R. R. Griffith vice chairman and Thomas M. Kerns secretary and treasurer.

7 Churches Unite In Training School

Keller, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—The Central Sunday School Training School of the Methodist Episcopal Church will open Sunday in the Central High School Building near here. It will continue eight days.

The school is sponsored by seven churches. Belle Haven and Craddockville-Onley, Onancock, Andrews Chapel, Melfa, Locustville and Wachapreague.

The courses to be offered by four well-known professors include: "The Teaching of the Prophets," by Prof. George S. Tarry, Randolph-Macon College, Ashland; "Children's Work in the Small Churches," by Mrs. W. R. Reed, West Point, Va.; "Administration of Young People's Work in the Small Church," by the Rev. R. S. Vanderberry, Richmond, and "Administration of Christian Education in the Local Church," by I. L. Llewellyn, Cheriton.

Flower Show Planned Oct. 5 at Purcellville

Purcellville, Va., August 29 (Spl.).—The Purcellville Garden Club will hold its first annual flower show on Friday, Oct. 5, in the social hall of the Bethany Methodist Church, at Purcellville, it was decided this afternoon by a committee consisting of Mrs. Mabel McCray, Mrs. Howard Rogers, Mrs. J. S. Patterson, Mrs. O. L. Emerick, Mrs. Bentley Gregg, Mrs. Franklin Wilson and Mrs. Louise McGavack.

The following committee chairmen were named: Mrs. J. Lynn Cornwell, Miss Irene Wright, Mrs. Bentley Gregg, Mrs. J. S. Patterson, Mrs. Franklin Hartman Kenworthy, Mrs. C. L. Robey, Miss Mary Simpson, Mrs. Mabel McCray, Mrs. A. E. Lybolt, Mrs. J. S. Patterson and Mrs. Grace B. Popkins.

County to Pay $1,100 On Trial Justice Salary

Front Royal, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—The Warren County board of supervisors yesterday fixed $1,100 as the sum to be paid by the county on the salary of the trial justice, making the total $2,000 per annum, as heretofore, the town contributes $500 annually, and the State appropriation amounts to $400.

The office of the trial justice has installed a new accounting system, and the supervisors authorized appointment of a clerk at the expense of the trial justice until some provision is made for a salary under the new Act of the Virginia Assembly governing trial justice courts.

Maryland Lutherans To Convene Saturday

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Several hundred delegates will gather in the Lutheran church here Saturday for a 3-day convention of the Maryland Synod Luther League.

The peak of the convention will be reached Monday with the installation of officers and addresses by the Rev. John B. Rupley, Baltimore, and the Rev. Oscar F. Blackwelder, Washington.

Vienna, Tense, Waiting Start Of New Revolt

The "Christian authoritative Government" now in power apparently has striven to establish an efficient and honest government. But it seems to be unappealing to the masses. The people are burdened by unemployment, rising prices, increased taxation and ruinous civil strife.

The press is muzzled. Newspapers which are not for the government are suppressed. It is dangerous to insist on free speech, even on the street.

A sinister system of espionage has developed. To have a man arrested it is only necessary to write to the police, charging him with having Nazi sympathies.

Austria fears another putsch is brewing. Authorities regard the danger of another insurrection so great that troops are stationed at all government buildings. Machine guns peer from the windows of police headquarters. Police and soldiers are stationed at strategic spots throughout the capital—waiting for something to happen and pretty sure it will happen soon.

Executive Offices Guarded.

The Ballhausplatz, headquarters of the cabinet, president and foreign office, resembles a fortress. Machine guns, bombs, hand grenades, rifles, bayonets and steel helmets are everywhere, symbols of these times in Vienna.

Telegraph and radio stations are especially well guarded. The building in which the Associated Press offices are located resembles a military headquarters, and no one is permitted to enter or leave without a military permit.

"Better keep some of the staff outside all the time, for sooner or later the Nazis will seize the building, and if you are all inside, no one will be free to cover the story," a high government official advised.

With its federal army of 30,000 supplemented by 100,000 Heimwehr (Home Defense League) soldiers, the government seems to be in control. But no one knows the secret strength of the Nazis, or if the troops will remain loyal.

(The second article of this series, outlining Austria's financial predicament, will be published tomorrow.)

Doctor's Son Is Hanged As Traitor to Austria

Franz Ebner, 32-year-old son of an Austrian physician, was hanged tonight.

Unlike all his Nazi predecessors who went to the gallows unflinchingly, Ebner broke down completely, refusing to be consoled even by his father.

Two of the 15 alleged putschists tried along with Ebner were sentenced to life imprisonment, 11 others drew terms ranging from 10 to 20 years, while two convicted of participating in the fighting but found not guilty of treason were sentenced to 2 years.

'Cult Boy' Recovering From Leg Infection

Fort Payne, Ala., Aug. 29 (AP).—Wallace Doyle Sharp, jr., the "Cult Boy," is recovering and his temperature has receded to normal or within a fraction of it, Dr. W. T. Miller, attending physician, said tonight.

Barring unforeseen complications from the operation necessary after a "faith cure" failed to heal a leg infection, the boy should continue to recover rapidly, local physicians agreed.

Scene of Argentina Oil Tank Blast

The peaceful village of Campana, Argentina, where 12 huge oil tanks exploded Tuesday, causing damage estimated at $5,000,000, killing four persons and injuring 284. Two others are missing.

Deaths Mount In Argentine Oil Explosions

Toll Now 5 as Firemen Battle to Keep Flames From Huge Tanks.

Campana, Argentina, Aug. 29 (AP). Three hundred weary, smoke-blackened firemen fought to save this town of 18,000 inhabitants from destruction tonight as changing winds swept flames from burning oil perilously close to storage tanks still standing.

With the death toll from yesterday's and last night's series of earth-shaking explosions at five, the injured numbered in the hundreds and damage estimated at around $5,000,000, the blazing lake of oil, three blocks square, continued to throw smoke and flame high into the air.

Residents of Campana who fled the town in terror while the oil tanks, property of Standard Oil Co's. affiliate, the National Oil Co., crept back home to find hardly one house undamaged.

Patrols of sailors guarding the virtually deserted town to prevent looting were reinforced as hundreds of curious, attracted by the bizarre spectacle, arrived from Buenos Aires, 40 miles away.

Chief task of the firefighters today, as yesterday, was to isolate unexploded tanks, numbering over 100, and safeguard particularly the giant tanks of the West India Oil Co., another Standard affiliate.

The position of these last was more perilous owing to the change in wind, but Standard Oil officials expressed confidence the West India receptacles would escape damage.

Buenos Aires provincial authorities began preparing relief measures to aid the 800 families whose heads were left without employ. Restoration of disrupted railway service helped somewhat, as rails ripped out by the blasts were replaced.

Eagle Restored To Motor Firm

Misunderstanding of Code Rules Cost Hyattsville Concern Insignia.

The right to display the Blue Eagle insignia was restored yesterday to the Lustine-Nicholson Motor Co., of Hyattsville. The insignia was removed by the NRA Compliance Board August 24.

In a telegram to Phillip Lustine, proprietor, signed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the company was declared innocent of violations of the motor vehicles retail code.

"Having been assured that you are complying with the code of fair competition for the motor vehicle retail trade," the telegram read, "I hereby return to you the right to display the Blue Eagle upon signing certificate of compliance with the code for your industry."

The insignia was withdrawn after an alleged violation of a clause in the code prohibiting dealers from selling new cars for resale to a concern not enfranchised to sell new machines.

Mr. Lustine described the incident as a misunderstanding of technical points in the code. The affair adjusted itself when it was pointed out by the board the ground on which the firm stood.

U. S. to Coordinate War on Smugglers

Coast Guard Captain to Direct Campaign.

A concerted drive to smash all forms of smuggling along the New England coast was announced by the Treasury Department last night.

Capt. C. M. Gabbett, commander of the Boston unit of the Coast Guard, will direct the campaign. He will consolidate efforts of the Coast Guard, the Narcotic Bureau, the Customs Service and the Revenue Bureau.

"Smuggling activities have been increasing steadily in the New England States," the Treasury said in announcing Gabbett's appointment.

U. S. Officials Doubt if Japan Will Demand Bigger Fleet

President Sends Norman H. Davis to London to Persuade Tokyo Envoys to Abide by Existing 5-5-3 Ratio.

(Associated Press.)

American officials think it is too early to discuss seriously reports that Japan will denounce the London Naval Treaty unless she is granted a bigger fleet.

"Premature" was the word they used yesterday in declining to comment on dispatches from Tokyo quoting a Japanese foreign office spokesman a ssaying that country's demands must be met in preliminary meetings next month in London.

At about the same time, President Roosevelt, at Hyde Park, N. Y., was instructing Norman H. Davis to return to London in an attempt to insure a successful naval limitations conference next year.

Mr. Davis' job apparently will be to convince the Japanese that they must agree to abide by the existing 5-5-3 fleet ratio between the United States, Great Britain and Japan. The Tokyo spokesman said that unless naval equality were accepted in London, Japan would abrogate the treaty on December 31, 1934, and withdraw from the scheduled conference next year.

It was said here that what Japan desires is substitution of geographical rather than numerical ratios. With Japan's assumption of "guardianship of peace in eastern Asia," with her long coast lines and protection of Korea, Formosa and Manchukuo, it was expected that she would insist upon a fleet big enough to patrol that area. Japan, it was asserted, would be satisfied with a total tonnage limitation provided she were allowed to build whatever types of ships she thought necessary.

With talk of naval limitation in the air, Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, expressed opposition to any sacrifice in power, utility and effectiveness of bigger ships, but added:

"With modern equipment and methods it might be possible to reduce the weight of battleships. How much of a reduction could be made I would not be able to say."

A little earlier the Navy had announced that on October 29 the fleet would start its long-scheduled movement from the Atlantic to the Pacific. It will arrive in the San Diego-San Pedro area on November 23, staging tactical exercises December 8 to December 18 with the airship Macon participating.

Donovan Starts Budget Work For City Today

Proposals Will Be Given to Press and Public for First Time.

The task of whipping the District's 1936 budget into shape will be started today by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, city auditor. Heads of the 40 or more departments in the local government already have submitted estimates of the amounts they will need for the fiscal year begining July 1 next and it is Donovan's job to mold these into one document.

This done, Maj. Donovan will prepare a memorandum for the Commissioners containing an outline of the budget.

For the first time since the District has had its present form of government, the Commissioners will publish the original estimates and hold public hearings on them.

Full Publicity Planned.

The memorandum which Maj. Donovan will begin preparing today will be given to the press and sent to the various citizens' associations.

Thereafter, hearings on various phases of the budget will be held in the board room of the District Building. All citizens will be welcomed.

The date set for these hearings is September 10, but inasmuch as hearings on street car rerouting plans are scheduled to start the same day, another date may have to be set.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen expressed the hope yesterday that the 1936 budget would carry funds to start work on the Municipal Center. This might be made possible, he said, by paring a little from sums asked by various departments.

Chances Are Not Good.

Unless the prospect for revenue is better than it has been in the last few years, however, the chances of sparing money for this project are poor.

Since the depression began, the various departments have had to get along on far less money than they really needed. Some of the reductions have been downright dangerous, as, for example, the one that has resulted in reducing street lighting a third.

However, there also is a great need for a start on the Municipal center The city already owns the four blocks on which this project is to be located, and has owned them for several years.

PWA Loan Refused.

It would cost about $5,500,000 to construct the first unit in the Municipal Center, the courts building. This would house the Police Court, the Municipal Court, the Juvenile Court and the office of the Recorder of Deeds.

The Commissioners asked the last Congress to authorize a PWA loan to start work on this building, but their request was denied.

Prince Georges Plans Work on Three Schools

Additions Proposed for Oxon Hill, Bradbury Heights and Laurel.

Bids for the construction of additions to the Oxon Hill (Md.) School, the Bradbury Heights School and the Laurel (Md.) Elementary School will be called for within a few days, Nicholas Orem, Prince Georges County school superintendent, said yesterday.

He also announced that land had been purchased in Colmar Manor and that plans had been completed for the construction of an elementary school there.

The completion of a school in Colmar Manor, Mr. Orem said, would insure the safety of approximately 150 pupils who are endangered by the heavy traffic of the Washington - Baltimore boulevard, which they must cross to reach Cottage City School.

The schools will be constructed with the aid of PWA funds. Three other school building additions, also being constructed through PWA funds, will be ready for occupancy at the opening of school, September 11, it was made known.

These will include the Marlboro High School, the Laurel High School and the Bowie High School. The Fairmount Heights School will be ready about one week after the opening date. None, however, will be completed for several weeks after the opening.

Mr. Orem said the Surrattsville High School (Clinton, Md.) will not be ready until the latter part of October. To meet the emergency, the auditorium will be partitioned off and part-time classes held. The elementary school will begin each day at 8:30 a. m. and continue until 12:30 p. m. The high school classes will begin at 12:30 p. m. and close at 4:30 p. m.

The preschool teachers' meeting has been called for September 10 at the Eastern High School, Washington.

Flagpole Sitter Routed By Police and Firemen

Union City, N. J., Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The combined efforts of the Union City police and fire departments were necessary today to remove John J. Kelly, flagpole sitter, from a pole on top of a theater building, that he might be placed under arrest on a charge of abandoning his wife.

Kelly, who is not to be confused with Alvin (Shipwreck) Kelly, would not come down, shouting angrily that he had a contract to stay atop the pole until 7 p. m. Friday.

Cornell Club to Hear Chalmers.

Henry Chalmers, chief of the Division of Foreign Tariffs of the Department of Commerice, will address the Cornell Club of Washington today at 12:30 p. m. on the reciprocal trade agreement program.

Reisch Church Seizes Power To Oust Jews

Adoption of New Law Said to Mean War on Non-Aryans.

Berlin, Aug. 29 (AP).—The ministry of the official German Protestant Church tonight framed into formal church law its heretofore temporary power to eliminate non-Ayran and opposition elements from the church.

Under the new law, increased emphasis is given to the power of the ministry, now controlled by German Christians, to remove "politically unreliable" officials and ministers.

Simultaneously Nazi Germany gave evidence that the revived paganist movement does not have entire official approval.

August Hoppe, Pagan leader, has been punished, an official announcement said, for his "heinous attacks on Christianity."

(Writing in the Nazi periodical Norland, Hoppe recently said "the time has come to take up the fight against Christianity" and urged Germans to "liberate yourselves from the culture of alien priests who want to make you the booty of the Jews.")

The official announcement said Hoppe had "falsely posed as the Hitler Youth Press chief," whereas he had been expelled from the organization some time before. The periodical Nordland was ordered to cease publication for one month.

The new church law drafted today provides for formal recognition of the church ministry's authority to proceed against non-Aryan pastors as well as Aryan ministers married to non-Aryans.

It was based on the temporary measure issued November 16, 1933, to insure Nazi majority in church affairs. The measure was restricted in scope under an order issued December 8, 1933, but was enforced again fully in April.

Opposition sources tonight saw in the formalizing of the ministry's power in this respect a direct development of the statement made by Reichsbishop Ludwig Mueller August 19 that the church would conduct vigorously an anti-Semitic campaign.

Second Reppin Trial Starts in Colorado

Colorado Springs, Aug. 29 (AP).—A jury heard the first testimony today in the retrial of Walter Reppin, Newark (N. J.) youth on a charge of slaying Vincent Regan, Colorado Springs taxi driver and college student.

The jury was completed after two panels totaling 85 persons had been summoned. A request to withdraw Reppin's plea of guilty was denied. The jury may decide on execution, life imprisonment or commitment to an insane asylum.

Wales May Act as Best Man At Brother's Royal Nuptials

Princess Marina, daughter of Prince Nicholas and Princess Helen, of Greece, whose engagement to Prince George, second son of King George V of England, was announced in London August 28.

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—When young Prince George strolls to the altar with his pretty princess, Marina of Greece, the Prince of Wales—that perennial bachelor—may be his best man.

Still agog over last night's surprise announcement of the youngest English prince's engagement to Marina, court circles today heard that Edward of Wales, heir to the British throne, might be present at the ceremony as his brother's second.

The close friendship known to exist between the two lent substance to the reports.

Wales, it was learned, was among the very first to share Prince George's romantic secret, revealed to the surprised but approving capital in last night's court circular.

As George and Marina left Salzburg, Austria, where they had been visiting secretly the past three days, to return to Yugoslavia, where their five years' friendship flowered into romance, the excited capital began discussing probable plans for the wedding.

It was assumed the Archbishop of Canterbury would conduct the ceremony, which, in all probability, will be held in Westminster Abbey.

The wedding may take place in November, it was indicated, although no date has yet been set.

A dukedom may be King George's wedding present to his youngest son, whose engagement he announced from Balmoral Castle in Scotland with all signs of paternal pride and joy.

At present not a peer of the realm, George, if given his dukedom, may become either Duke of Kent or Duke of Edinburgh.

10 Men Injured In Truck Crash

Driver Swerves to Avoid Running Into Auto.

Ten colored laborers were hurt slightly when a truck they were riding overturned at Thirteenth street and Kalmia road northwest early yesterday.

Police said the accident occurred when an automobile driven by William Brooks, colored, of the 2100 block of Newport place northwest, ran into the path of the truck, causing the driver to swerve.

Munitions Rule By U. S. Backed By Senators

Several on Committee Hope Probe Results in Government Control.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

A survey of the Senate Munitions Investigating Committee showed yesterday that a majority of its members favor complete Government control of all war materials manufactured in the United States.

Several Senators on the seven-man committee hold definite hope that evidence to be disclosed at hearings opening here next week—described by them as "Senatorial"—will so arouse public opinion as to bring about Government control.

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, a member of the group, actually sees such a possibility as a result of the committee's investigation. He declined, however, to make a prediction that such a move would be made.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, chairman of the committee, and Senator Bone (Democrat), Washington, both go further. They advocate complete Government operation of munitions plants as a move to lessen the possibility of international conflict by taking the "profits out of war."

Senator Clark (Democrat), Missouri, said such a move would be "very desirable" and a "great deal could be accomplished in that direction toward peace," but added that he wished to study the question more thoroughly before taking a positive stand.

The views of other committee members were not immediately obtainable.

Letts to Be Guest At Camp Banquet

Boys' Resort Closes Best Season in History.

The most successful season in its history will be terminated by Camp Leets with a banquet in the Y. M. C. A. tonight.

Guests of honor will include John C. Letts, retired merchant and chief benefactor of the Rhode River boys' camp, and Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Community Chest.

Highlight of tonight's program will be announcement of the boy chosen as the best all-season camper of 1934. He will receive a large silver cup, on which are engraved the names of the boys who have received the trophy in other years. The cup becomes the permanent possession of any boy who wins it thrice.

Five other cups will be awarded the youths for success in various fields. Press presentations will be made by James C. Ingram, camp director, assisted by staff counselors.

Upton Sinclair's Victory.

In his famous and fascinating pamphlet, "I, Governor of California," Upton Sinclair predicted his victory in the Democratic primary "by a plurality of some 25,000 votes." The actual returns give him five times that margin. If all his prophecies should prove equally conservative the State might as well proceed to change its name to Utopia. For as it is, Sinclair has promised "positively and without qualification" to "end poverty in California" within two years of achieving political power there.

Upton Sinclair is a crusading intellectual of a type of which America has all too few. It is difficult to dislike him personally and it is impossible honestly to impugn either his motives or his patriotism, if by that word is understood a sacrificial love of his country and his fellow-men. In the absorbing campaign now under way in California every attempt to question Sinclair's integrity will react upon its sponsors. He has given too many proofs not merely of idealism but also of absolute and unswerving loyalty to principle.

What Upton Sinclair has never proved is his ability to make constructively effective the sweeping reforms and changes which he desires in our social system. The chances are strong that with two years of uncontested power Sinclair would come much closer to ruining California irrevocably than to eliminating that poverty which he thinks can be exorcized by his private letter agencies:—the CAL, the CAP and the CAM.

It is for this reason that the capture of California's Democratic party by an out-and-out Socialist is causing great and legitimate anxiety in Administration circles. His farrago of reform is almost a subtle satire on much of the New Deal, tending to bring the latter in disrepute by following the same general principles and objectives, but carrying them so far that their obvious threat to any economic stability is clear to any balanced mind. It is not difficult for the discriminating to note where the E. P. I. C. plan oversteps the limitations drawn by the New Deal. But equally it will not be difficult to tell the undiscriminating that there is no essential difference between the two.

Within a few days the country has seen two striking indications of a political realignment dividing conservatives from radicals, rather than Republicans from Democrats. The American Liberty League did nothing to check Upton Sinclair's sweeping victory in the California primaries. And certainly the latter will not handicap the future of the league.

The Camden Horror.

There are several Camdens in the United States. Arkansas has a Camden. So have Georgia and Missouri. Maine's Camden is a delight. But none of these is to be confused with Camden, N. J.

Although Camden, N. J., was once famous as the residence of Walt Whitman, there has been nothing green about it since the Good Gray Poet wrote "Leaves of Grass." Immediately thereafter, it took on the Good Gray Poet's color. Gray it is today, and sometimes darker. For the benefit of the uninitiated we should mention that the city is situated on the Delaware River, opposite Philadelphia. But the canny Philadelphians, in train for Atlantic City, make a detour around it.

And now Camden has a kidnaping case—or the end of one. A New Yorker has appeared at the Camden police headquarters with the story that, until a $10,000 ransom had been paid, he was held by kidnapers in Camden, where nobody dreamed of seeking him.

Well, kidnaping, even of an adult, is a grave felony. The most serious of punishments seem not too severe for it. But precisely there lies the sociologist's dilemma in the present instance. If ordinary kidnaping merits death, what is the fitting penalty for kidnaping a New Yorker to Camden?

Only A First Step.

Removal of nine dangerous criminals from Lorton Reformatory to Alcatraz Prison in San Francisco Bay is a proper first step toward the preservation of order at the local institution. All of these men are recidivists who participated in the recent riot at Lorton, and some of them were leaders in the 1933 riot. Their exile to the lonely fortress which is being used exclusively to house unruly convicts should have a salutary influence upon the morale at Lorton.

Thirty other prisoners who have not learned to appreciate the comparative freedom allowed inmates of Lorton will be sent to walled prisons. If this segregation had been effected several months ago it is probable that no uprising would have been planned. With these agitators behind secure walls, tension at the local reformatory will be notably lessened, but its problems will by no means have been solved.

Lorton ought to be equipped to handle all long-term District prisoners without the aid of Federal penitentiaries. The need for a prison unit of the maximum security type has been recognized by the authorization and partial construction of a wall inclosing a new group of dormitories. But at present that need is flagrantly ignored. Work on the wall has been completely halted for want of funds. Lorton can not be expected to settle down to normal discipline until this fundamental part of practical prison equipment has been completed.

The Cost Of The New Deal.

Secretary Morgenthau's radio address was, unquestionably, meant to reassure the financial community. In its general aspects it has every earmark of being intended to do for investors in Government securities what the recent speeches of Secretary Roper and Assistant Secretary Dickinson were designed to do for the general run of business. Its delivery at this particular time, however, makes it rather difficult to disassociate the survey from the September financing program of the Treasury, which will necessitate an appeal to investors for close to $2,000,000,000.

The reassuring feature of the Secretary's statement lies not in his startling and somewhat dubious accounting of the Administration's financial stewardship. It emerges from the intimation that the Administration remains faithful to its determination, announced by President Roosevelt in his budget message last January, to keep the deficit for the 18 months from January, 1933, to June, 1935, within the limits of $8,000,000,000. In fact, the Secretary suggests that it may not even be necessary to reach the upper limit, in spite of the unpredictable supplemental expenditures required for drought relief.

Of course $8,000,000,000 is a stupendous sum to add, within 18 months, to the public debt of any country—even one so rich in wealth and resources as is the United States. But that figure loses some of its terrifying implications if there is reasonable assurance that it really represents the limit of public expenditure in excess of regular revenues. Unfortunately, the Secretary has not seen fit to reiterate the President's promise, made last January, to balance the budget in 1935-36.

In his presentation of the financial condition of the Treasury, up to the end of the last fiscal year, Secretary Morgenthau sought to leave his listeners with the impression that the cost of the New Deal, during the first 15 months of its operation, has been relatively trivial. He arrives at this quaint conclusion in the following ingenious manner: The increase in the public debt was, in round figures, $6,000,000,000. As against this, there was an expansion of cash balance by $1,500,000,000; a profit on the devaluation of the dollar amounting to $2,800,000,000; and an increase in the net assets of agencies wholly owned and financed by the Government of $1,095,000,000. The total of $5,495,000,000, according to the Secretary, represents an offset to the increase of the public debt, making the net growth of the liabilities of the Treasury only $505,000,000. If Government assets in agencies which it owns or finances only in part are included, one may argue that the New Deal has cost less than nothing.

This is the reductio ad absurdum of Mr. Morgenthau's argument. In fact, his whole calculation carries that deceptive note which is found in so many Administration statements designed for public consumption; a note which is not the less irritating because of the apparent belief that deception is immaterial so long as the public is gullible enough to believe in sleight of hand.

In the first place, the existence of a huge cash balance merely means that to date the Government has borrowed more than it required. It needs, therefore, to borrow during the current year a correspondingly smaller sum to meet further deficits. The cash balance does not make the total ultimate cost of the New Deal any smaller than is indicated by the total increase in the public debt as it will stand when the budget is finally balanced and extraordinary expenditures cease.

The profit on the revaluation of gold is a real offset to the public debt. But it is wholly erroneous to think that this vast sum has come out of thin air and will cost the taxpayer nothing. It is a disguised capital levy on the whole population. To intimate that the cost of reconstruction is lessened to the extent that individual wealth has been confiscated to pay for it, is carrying casuistry pretty far.

Finally, the net assets of special Government-owned and Government-financed agencies represent, so far, a mere bookkeeping item. The Secretary himself admits that substantial losses might affect it in the future. As an offset to increased borrowing, this item really belongs in the category of unhatched chickens.

In spite of these peculiarities of calculation, the Secretary's statement is welcome, as a form of inventory which will not deceive the initiated and in the periodic repetition of which there will be much scope for further analysis.

Three Times And Out?

Perhaps too much is being talked about divorce in general and not enough about divorces in particular. It is complained that there are always too many people getting divorced. Some thought should be given to the person who gets too many divorces. As a loose rule, these divorce addicts divorce several spouses each. But in extreme instances of the habit they will divorce the same spouses again and again.

The latest example comes from Fort Scott, Kans. There a woman who had divorced her first husband, on the ground of desertion, remarried him—and redivorced him on the ground that he redeserted. Then, shortly after matrimonial specialists had jubilantly dismissed the case as finally cured, she returned to her old tricks. The habitual divorcee once more married the habitual deserter. Now her insatiable appetite demands another divorce, just because she has been again deserted.

Speculation aroused by this record is infinite and interesting. One would like to know something about the chronic husband. One would like to see a photograph of the deserter.

Samuel Johnson remarked that any second marriage is a triumph of hope over experience. One is tempted to summon the spirit of Boswell from the vasty deep in order to get through him the great doctor's definition of a third marriage and a third divorce between the same indomitable parties.

Impartiality Essential.

All efforts to avert the threatened textile strike have thus far proved futile. On the one hand, the Cotton Textile Institute makes the questionable assertion that compromise under duress would imply "destruction of the code system." On the other hand the United Textile Workers, against the better judgment of some of their leaders, are forcing the issue with a pugnacity which is stronger than the economic reason behind their case.

Because of the slim financial reserves of the union, and the willingness of the employers to see the mills shut down while surplus stocks are consumed, it is apparent that the outcome of the strike, if called, will largely depend on the sticking qualities of the strikers. And it is equally obvious that the union expects to rely on Federal relief funds to maintain the men. The chairman of the strike committee is quoted as saying, with refreshing candor, that "it is entirely probable that in hundreds of cases Federal relief will be better than a job in the mills."

Harry Hopkins, whose position on this point is not crystal clear, would do well to weigh very carefully the implications of his policy before permitting FERA funds to be released to support those who have voluntarily abandoned paid employment. During his recent observations in Europe he must have noticed that no government there pays unemployment benefits to strikers, or furnishes strike breakers to end an industrial dispute. For a government to take sides either way is equally undesirable.

If the textile workers are being encouraged to believe that the Government will indirectly subsidize their strike, such encouragement should be promptly and unequivocally withdrawn. And if the textile employers believe that there is anything in the code system which prevents collective bargaining, before, during or after strikes, they too need official assurances to the contrary.

Not until the Government has been forced by recalcitrance of either party to declare one side in an industrial dispute at fault can it afford to diverge from the path of scrupulous impartiality. And a wise government will do everything in its power to avoid partisanship in strike problems where so much can be found to indict the policies of both sides.

From Oberammergau.

It is difficult to imagine a more impressive wedding than that which took place Tuesday at Oberammergau. The girl who has impersonated Mary Magdalene in the famous Passion Play was married to the son of the late Anton Lang, who lived the role of the Christus for more than three decades. Washingtonians found a special interest in the event because the bridegroom, Dr. Anton Lang, is a professor of German at Georgetown University.

Everything in Oberammergau is dominated by the influence of this classic miracle play. The 700 characters who portray the events of the closing chapter in Christ's life are not actors in the strict meaning of that word. They live their parts. Without resorting to artificial make-up, they train their hair and beards to resemble the Biblical characters whom they represent. Only natives of the village may participate, and they are chosen as much for unimpeachable moral character as for dramatic ability. Once the honor of playing a major role has been conferred on a villager, he enters into the part with deep religious fervor.

When Klara Mayr stepped out of the role of Magdalene to become the bride of Dr. Lang quaint Bavarian bells were chiming, the simple villagers of Oberammergau looked on and the ceremony seemed almost a fitting interlude to the Passion Play. But the new Mrs. Lang is coming to live in Washington and the play will go on with another Mary. One can not help wondering how the jangling hubbub of a modern American city will appeal to one whose life has been so closely attuned to the ancient tranquillity of Oberammergau.

Movie producers are trying to shift the blame for salacious pictures to authors who write books from which pictures are said to be taken. Their position would be more tenable if they could produce as Exhibit A a movie producer who has read a book.

Apropos of Upton Sinclair?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No two words in the English language are more responsible for the present condition of the United States than "Republican" and "Democratic" as applied to the political parties. In 1910, when the Democrats elected Speaker Champ Clark and the Ways and Means Committee was considering the Underwood tariff bill, the writer publicly pointed this out, and today we see the results of it.

At that time William Jennings Bryan came to town to discuss the tariff schedules with the Democratic members of the committee, especially Schedule K (the wool schedule). The writer was acting as his secretary. When the conference was over, Bryan, who had to keep an engagement, said to me: "I expect Senator La Follette. When he comes, hold him until I return."

Soon the Senator appeared, and I said to him: "Senator, you are a Bryan Democrat calling yourself a Progressive Republican. What is the difference? Why don't you join the Bryan Progressive Democratic party?"

"That's true," he replied, "but if I ran for the Senate in Wisconsin as a Democrat I'd never be elected. It's better to reform the party from within."

Now the reactionaries, rather the conservatives, in both parties have focused the attention of the country on what is called the American "Liberty" League, which offers absolutely nothing constructive to alleviate the depression which they brought about in the Coolidge and Hoover administrations.

The writer agrees that a new alignment of the parties ought to be formed of liberals and conservatives. There would be such past and present leaders as Abraham Lincoln, William Jennings Bryan, Theodore Roosevelt and the New Dealer, Franklin D. Roosevelt in the Liberal party. In the Conservative party there would be such past and present leaders as Harding, Taft, Coolidge, Hoover, Grover Cleveland, Smith, Morgan and Wall Street. This party would put "property rights" over "human rights," or the dollar above man. Thus the issue is simply defined to the Democrats of the South and the Republicans of the North and West.

The conservatives would want the retention of the fetish called the gold standard and the iniquitous banking and currency system, while the liberals would want world-wide bimetalism and a Government-owned central bank, which would lend money at nominal rates of interest. Take your choice.

We Believe in Free Speech.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with much interest the letter of Mrs. Marie Bonham, of Gordonsville, Va., and thank God for such women as she. Judging from the letters which have been printed since her letter, there are others that feel exactly as I do.

Every true liberty-loving American stands where Mrs. Bonham does and the American Legion under its capable commander. It is the kind of leadership that this official is exhibiting that has made America great. There is no place in America for communism, which is opposed to the home, school and church, and the sooner these parasites, who are accepting hospitality at the hands of a constitutional government, are exterminated the better off America will be and crime will immediately be reduced 50 per cent.

You are rendering a service to your readers in the impartial publication of letters such as appear in your daily columns.

I, for one, wish to join with Mrs. Bonham as a 100 per cent American. America first and last, with its fine constitutional government which is being put in disrepute by brainless brain trusters.

Read 'Em and Weep!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an astrologer for the past 30 years, predicting National and local events and elections, &c., for this country and others, I make the following statements according to astrological law for the period covered from the present time to the middle of October:

The immediate outlook is troublesome, from a financial point of view. There will be a shortage of money and too much expenditure, troubles about money and trade exchange with foreign countries. Crime will be dominant, due to the fact that no set of people has any moral or legal right to starve any other class of people, and then greater reaction will follow if the right to live and live well is not enjoyed by all, not the few. Expect crimes to follow crimes.

Price-fixing must go. Foodstuffs are to eat and must be let out at just and normal purchase prices by those who have gobbled the wares and stored them from the producers. Rents must likewise return to normal and fair prices so that people can be sheltered in homes and not jammed in rooms because of exploitations by those controlling and usurping properties all over the country.

Many of the Administration will give up, resign or die. Mr. Roosevelt may expect much firing upon his policies and much militancy. Woman's power will constructively be in the foreground, especially because of the need for fair and honest living in the land, and until justice and rights of mankind are restored the country will suffer through crimes forced upon lives by the millions of strikers—yes, plenty of them, uprisings, riots, violence and sickness of a spreading character. Labor organizations will make demands which must be met.

There will be a great flow of activity in connection with business in the industrial world in September. We will have a great stir in that line—both National and international—more than at any other time for the past several years. Labor will have a greater strength and this will be induced by organizations that control labor itself.

Particularistic!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Recently I picked up a book published in 1897 and written by a Frenchman which undoubtedly will be of interest to those who are for or against the New Deal. It ought to be especially interesting to the newly formed American Liberty League. The author, Edmond Demolins, attempts to prove that the Anglo-Saxon is fundamentally an individualist. The title of the book is "Anglo-Saxon Superiority: To What It Is Due."

I quote from the author's introduction to the English (1899), translated from the tenth French, edition:

"The Anglo-Saxon no longer belongs to the communistic formation, but to the particularistic formation, thus named because, instead of causing the community to predominate over the individual, the individual is made to prevail over the community, private life over public life, and in consequence the useful professions over the liberal and administrative professions."

I can commend the book to any one interested in world economics and politics. GROVER AYERS.

Speaking of Twaddle!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Japanese Government voted some millions of yen for propaganda in foreign countries. I keep wondering, as I see you keep giving them full-page publicity, what your share of the swag is. If it is anything small, you are certainly an easy mark. And if you actually pay for such pro-Japanese twaddle as Emory F. Ladd handed out last week, you are indeed a moron in financial affairs.

At that, perhaps he is a literary artist. Probably he has left many readers feeling that treaty-breaking, ruthless conquest and wholesale massacre are nothing that should put us on our guard against the government that orders them!

No More on This Subject!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since The Post has seen fit to headline the communication from Charles Williams with the caption, "Mr. Knott Is Duly Corrected on Hitler," may the "duly corrected" individual say a word? The German election just reported should be sufficient answer to Mr. Williams, though he had asserted beforehand that it would be "farcical."

I may add that I never write as a partisan. If I did, I could easily say that the repeal of the 18th amendment, which has been heralded as an "overwhelming defeat of the drys," was in no case other than a majority of the minority vote in the different States. And if the question of coercion or intimidation were raised, I could give some as startling figures as Mr. Williams gives on Hitler's election. But so far as we can judge, the 18th amendment was overwhemingly sent to limbo. And so far as we can judge, the German people overwhelmingly favor Hitler. J. O. KNOTT.

Outlook In California.

California has been shaken out of its complacency this year by the sudden snapping of tensions that had long existed and that four years of depression had seriously aggravated. Strikes on the San Francisco waterfront are an old story. And the State's migratory labor problem has a history punctuated by such bloody episodes. Nor is there anything very novel in the surging of discontent among wage earners, farmers, clerks and small business people in Southern California that gave Upton Sinclair's candidacy for the Democratic nomination for Governor such surprising strength.

The great strike is over, but a real solution of California's troubles must await an improved market for its huge output of fruits and vegetables and some solution of the problem of how to organize its migratory labor on a humane and stable basis. Some improvement has already taken place in the marketing situation, helped by Federal marketing agreements that limit the pack of canned fruits and vegetables and assure better prices. Exports of fresh and canned fruits and vegetables are increasing in spite of the opposite trend in other industries since 1929. No less than 12 foreign companies now operate fleets of fast motor ships through the Panama Canal to Europe. Most of them are equipped with refrigeration space and they have built up a large European market for fresh and canned California products. Many growers and packers see here a partial solution for overproduction. In a State where rigid protectionism has always been a religion, important groups of growers and packers have abandoned their extreme protectionist views and are supporting the President's reciprocal tariff policy. But there is unanimous agreement on the primary importance of the domestic market. California's hope, after all, lies in National recovery.

The Post Impressionist

Baltimore In California.

Postoffices, Thursday.

THE Democratic candidate for the office of Governor of California may have fewer friends in the Democratic Party than he had before he put that party where he put it with Tuesday's primaries, but he has lots of friends everywhere. For he has lived pretty much all over the map, and he has always been lovable.

Not many have agreed with him in the past—his views, like those of the railroad time-tables have been subject to change without notice. Yet nobody ever doubted that whatever Upton Sinclair said he believed and was ready—was generally anxious—to die for.

In the Socialist Party, he was at one time a non-conformist, at another more Socialist than Marx; but he kept the Socialist Party talking about him. In the Democratic Party, he already has all the members talking about him, and those who don't call him a non-conformist say he is more of a New Dealer than the man who deals the cards.

The Post-Impressionist is among the thousands who have known him personally and long. So we are among the nearly-thousands who, if they don't say "Yes" to all his shifting—but never shifty—politics, have nevertheless rarely been able to resist shouting: "Attaboy, Upton!"

Upton is misnamed: he never grew up. Fifty-five years, plus 11 months, young, he retains the boyhood in which he rioted at 46.

But he never grew down, either. If he has remained youthful, it is because he was born, on a fateful 20th of September, in Baltimore, to a sort of adolescent maturity. He has frequently lost his level-headedness; he has not once lost his head. Often bloody, it has remained unbowed.

And he is one of the bonniest fighters in American literature. You have to go back to James Fenimore Cooper to match Upton Sinclair.

Plenty of Socialists say they don't care anything about the lesser conventions; but they would expire were one of their shirt-studs to explode at a dinner in honor of the uninvited proletariat. Upton really doesn't care.

We used to know a girl who, when she was just old enough to go to one of Baltimore's Bachelor Cotillions, was asked to one by Upton. She was of those who didn't share his disregard for the minor amenities. "All afutter," as she would have described it, she was attired long ere the appointed hour. Tardy, as usual, her escort appeared at her parents' house.

She knew he was careless. So she looked at his shirt front: it was everything it should be. She looked at his evening blacks: so were they. But then she looked at his shoes and nearly (they did it in those days) fainted.

"Why, Upton!" she cried.

"What's the matter?"

"Your shoes."

"What about them?"

"They're tan!"

"Oh," he smiled, "I must have got hold of the wrong pair. Well, come along or we'll be late—"

We doubt if there is any writingman among all the often too rapid writers of today who can write so rapidly-well as Upton Sinclair.

He admits to about 25 novels, 4 volumes of plays and 10 purely polemical books. We say "purely polemical," because most of his fiction is more than partly polemical. He has written innumerable magazine articles, and how many pamphlets he has written heaven alone can tell—certainly Sinclair could not. Moreover, the figures we have suggested are based only on last year's reports. He turns all these things out at such a rate that a total can't be struck before there are "further returns" coming in.

Nevertheless, considering the literary worth of some of the printed material that has won the Nobel Prize, there was more sense than nonsense in the recent campaign to have Sinclair chosen for the literary award of that Swedish benefaction. Either he or one of his editors told us that Upton learned his speed in the days of his genuine youth: he was resolved to earn his living by his typewriter and, for some time, the only way he could do this was by grinding out anonymous thrillers, at a meagre price apiece, for the New York publishing firm which started the deluge of pulp periodicals.

He told something of his story in "The Journal of Arthur Stirling" (1903); it appeared as the genuine journal of a genius whom lack of recognition drove to self-destruction. Sinclair was rescued by Theodore Roosevelt's indorsement of the Chicago stockyard "Jungle"—just as he may, or may not, now be aided by another Roosevelt's political indorsement. And in his forgotten "Manassas," the first story of a never completed trilogy, Upton wrote a first-rate Civil War novel.

He abandoned other things in the same cavalier fashion. He secured hundreds of disciples for his vegetarian regime. We had just been studying it when we followed him as an unexpected guest at Gaylor Wilshire's London house. Wilshire said: "I hope two chickens will be enough for all of us. Upton alone ate a whole one last Sunday."

* * *

Yet Sinclair's only reason for abandoning any one of the many ships he has abandoned was a loss of faith in it. Whatever he has believed, he believed with his whole heart. Whatever he has doubted, he has ruthlessly abandoned.

It is this often admirable quality in him which will make us, for a long while to come, read the California news in The Post before we read anything else there. Has he become a Democrat forever? Or have the Democrats become forever Socialists? Or shall we wake up some morning to find that they have repudiated him? Or will Upton Sinclair some night waken us by telephone to tell us that he has repudiated them?

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

Free for What?

FREE CITY OF DANZIG—Dear Aleck: The question here is just what is free or for whom the city is free. Not for the Poles. The Versailles' treaty may call it a free city and unquestionably Polish traffic can go and come as it pleases. But the city is German, in administration, in culture, in everything. The Storm Troops are as much in evidence as they are in Germany.

BARGERON

At the time of this writing the city is in mourning for President von Hindenburg, and if there is a building in the city not flying at least two Hitler flags at half-mast I am yet to see it. The Poles say this is an example of what they are up against, that Von Hindenburg's death has simply been made the occasion for a gigantic Hitler demonstration. The city being "free," however, the people can demonstrate or mourn for whomever they want. This attitude of the people of Danzig is the primary reason for the Poles building their own port at Gdynia.

The Storm Troops, as I understand it, have no such authority as they have in Germany. They are simply an organization and supposed to be strictly local.

* * * *

Ordinarily there is quite a gayety here, but now all dances are taboo and the only music one hears is funereal. Church bells toll intermittently and this is several days after the death of the German president. The visitor is impressed by the belligerent nature of the place, the troops, the guns and the general atmosphere of espionage, with the Poles watching the Germans and the Germans watching the Poles—among the Germans, the Nazis watching the Socialists and the Socialists watching the Nazis, although the Nazis are the only ones of the two in evidence.

As in Germany, one sees little if any rouge or lipstick on the girls. In Germany Hitler has asked that they not be used and the loyal German girls here deny themselves, too.

* * * *

This is a part of the German national planning that I do not understand. This is not surprising, because I have considerable studying yet to do before I can lay claim to being a Grade I national planner, and I observed in Washington that the easiest way is not always the way of the national planner. If the profession of national planning is to be kept on a high plane and its ranks not overcrowded as are our medical and legal professions, then it must be made to appear very hard.

I got the impression while in Germany, however, that her problem was in a way, at least, similar to ours. That is, there is plenty to eat for everybody, but not enough work for those who do not want to farm. This being the case, it would seem that National Planner Hitler would want to encourage such industries as the lip-stick and rouge ones to give employment to those who do not want to work on a farm. And, after all, I don't suppose lip-stick or rouge hurts a girl.

* * * *

As I say, though, he undoubtedly has his good reason for this particular phase of his planning, something that is not apparent to one who is not versed in national planning, but to one who is, one who has graduated at a national planning school, then it would be as plain as day.

Now, you take the time when we were turning under the pigs. Having had no experience at all in national planning then, I could not possibly make out why they were turning under these pigs. There was a reason, of course. Looking back, now that I have been studying national planning, I can see that it was probably necessary to show activity. It was all right for Mr. Coolidge to be inactive, but if there is one thing a national planner must be, it is active.

Who knows but that National Planner Hitler's idea in forbidding lip-stick and rouge is to make the girls realize his authority. And you know, some authorities say that the meaner you treat a woman the better she likes you. Yours for getting at the bottom of things.

No Typhoid Cases In Cecil and Kent

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). No cases of typhoid have been reported in Cecil and Kent Counties this summer and the situation in Caroline and Talbot Counties is well under control, according to the office of Dr. Ralph Beachley, deputy State health officer here.

In Talbot County Dr. Louis S. Welty, of Caroline County, temporary health officer for Talbot and public health officer at Denton, issued a statement today to the effect that no cases have been reported in Talbot since early this month and that there are five scattered cases in Caroline.

There is no danger of an epidemic, Dr. Welty said, though he has inoculated between 800 and 900 persons with typhoid vaccine at Oxford, St. Michaels and Neavitt.

Bar Rallies to Rout 'Black Army' of Crime

Association Proposes State Justice Departments With Central Bureaus and Lawyer-Laymen Committees.

Milwaukee, Aug. 29 (AP).—The American Bar Association, warned that it must rid its ranks of undesirables and spurred by a Federal prosecutor's denunciation of public apathy toward lawlessness, considered plans today for leadership in a campaign to smash "the black army" of crime. Disregarding custom, the bar devoted all this afternoon's convention session to the subject.

It heard Charles H. Tuttle, former United States attorney in New York, declare that upon the bar the responsibility for suppression of the "black army" rests more heavily than upon any other public group. It heard Joseph B. Keenan, Assistant United States Attorney General, who led the fight on kidnapers, assail the public for making heroes of the Dillingers and the Capones.

Then the bar received a program for attacking the crime problem in all its intricacies. The joint work of the bar's executive committee and the section on criminal law, the plan proposes establishment of State departments of justice which would supervise every district attorney, sheriff, police department and coroner.

Central Bureaus Planned.

Each department would have a central bureau manned by trained investigators who would supplement local police units and also work independently. The bureaus would be equipped with records and a scientific laboratory.

The program also calls for appointment by Governors of lawyer-layman committees to improve and criticize law enforcement; for appointment by local and State bar associations of committees to improve and criticize police and prosecutions, and for appointment of committees to obtain the adoption of model criminal code.

The plan suggests that extra jurors be impaneled to avoid mistrials should a juror become incapacitated; that trial on information be permitted; that jury verdicts by less than unanimous vote except in major felonies be sanctioned; that the prosecutor be advised in advance of alibi and insanity pleas and that comment on the defendant's failure to testify be privileged.

Mr. Keenan paraded the specter of John Dillinger before the bar and declared that so long as the gunman can expect a cheer instead of a jeer from the public he will ply his deadly trade. He chided the public for glorifying criminals. He said he could not comprehend the applause with which a Washington theater audience greeted Dillinger's picture on the screen.

Chides Dillinger Applause.

"Applause, mind you," he said, "for a coward and a killer—applause for a man who had snuffed out the lives of husbands and fathers without the blinking of an eye—applause for one of the most loathsome creatures in the annals of crime.

"So long as the problems of crime and its repression are left to * * * social workers, policemen, prosecutors, judges and prison wardens—and so long as the great body of citizenry remains indifferent, hostile or ignorant, we can look for little improvement."

Mr. Tuttle said it was no longer news that the public is convinced that the bar has not discharged its full duty in suppressing crime. He contended the bar should accept the public's condemnation as a challenge. Like Mr. Keenan, he asked the aid of all good citizens. He added that much crime is the symptom of social maladjustments and injustices. He assailed "evil motion pictures" as aiding in its growth, and said "the useless vestiges of an earlier jurisprudence" are partly to blame for its continued existence.

U. S. Drops Plan For Lime Plant

Danville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.). The Federal Government has decided not to acquire the State lime-grinding plant in Pittsylvania County, near Sandy Level. It had been proposed as a project in connection with the Soil Erosion Service.

It was planned to establish a CCC camp at Sandy Level and to run the plant day and night to produce sufficient soil corrective to serve a larger area than at present.

Government engineers, however, found that the existing machinery could not produce ground lime in the quantity desired. The plant is in full operation under State auspices.

Confederate Daughters Are Invited to Hopewell

Hopewell, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—City Point Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has invited delegates to the State convention of the United Daughters in Petersburg in October to come to Hopewell for a tour of the historic places here. Miss Mary Eppes will open Appomattox Manor to the convention guests. The manor, as Grant's headquarters, is closely associated with the War Between the States. Included in the visit will be a trip to old Merchants Hope Church.

Forgery Is Charged To Piedmont Man

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—A warrant was issued by a United States Commissioner today for the removal of William E. Foster from Washington, where he was arrested, to this city for trial in Federal court at the September term.

Foster, whose home is in Piedmont, W. Va., is charged with forging and cashing a certificate issued by the Treasury to Robert E. Bowen, also of Piedmont, a CWA worker, for $33.

Virginia National Parks Will Get 3 New Bridges

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Three bridges will be constructed in the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania National Parks by the United States Bureau of Public Roads, the National Park service announced here yesterday.

Bids for the contracts have been asked by the bureau for September 10. The three bridges will be constructed as two projects. One will be a span over Wilderness Run and the other will comprise two structures over the Nye River at Chancellorsville.

Body of Luck M. Marks Taken to Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—The body of Luck M. Marks, 48, a former resident of Lynchburg who died yesterday in Washington, has been brought here for burial.

Mr. Luck was attached to the Government Bureau of Engraving and Printing. He is survived by a sister, Mrs. C. L. Probst, of this city, and a brother, T. J. Marks, of Washington.

Funeral Services Held for Mrs. Durst

Grantsville, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Annie M. Durst, 75, widow of Norman B. Durst, at the home of her grandson, Clifton Durst, Shade Mills.

The surviving children are Wilbur F. Durst and Mrs. Harry E. Poleman, of Garrett County, and Mrs. J. Taylor Grump and Mrs. Harrison E. Lammert, of Frostburg.

Miss Beck Resigns As Welfare Chief

Albemarle Official Held Triple Job Four Years.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Triple superintendency of the Albemarle-Charlottesville joint welfare department and the Albemarle chapter of the Red Cross was resigned today by Miss Dora Beck, who has held the position for the past four years. Her resignation is effective not later than October 15.

At the same time it was revealed that action is under way to separate city and county welfare work, which has been united in one department for the past 10 years.

The functions will be placed under the direction of the Albemarle supervisors and the Charlottesville commissioners, and the city welfare board will resign as soon as the municipal code can be rewritten to provide for the change.

Glenmore Hunt Club Elects Major Roller

Staunton, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Maj. Charles S. Roller, jr., last night was elected M. F. H. of the Glenmore Hunt Club. He will succeed Jack Todd, who has been master of the Glenmore hounds since the hunt's organization six years ago.

Other hunt leaders are: Ned Bush, Waynesboro, huntsman; Miss Agnes Sproul, Dr. Ralph Crosby, and Forrest Tayler, whips. Col. H. H. Wayt is president of the club.

World War Veteran Dies in Maryland

Westernport, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). William R. Myers, 38, World War veteran, died yesterday. Mr. Myers was employed at the plant of the West Virginia Pulp and Paper Co. He was a member of Kelly-Mansfield Post, No. 52, American Legion, and was connected with the drum corps. He also was a member of Black Hawk Tribe, No. 131, Improved Order of Red Men.

Surviving are his wife and one son, John William Myers. The funeral will be held tomorrow.

Prince Georges Police Equipping Radio Cars

Prince Georges County police expect to finish within a few days the installation of radios in each of the 11 county police cars and the two substations, it was announced yesterday. The radios were purchased through the aid of the Young Men's Democratic Club of the county.

Most Owners Willing To Donate Road Land

All but one property owner have signified their intentions to donate land for the construction of a road connecting the Lanham-Severn road with the Glenn Dale-Branchville road, in Prince Georges County, Md., it was announced yesterday.

If all property owners cooperate with the move, headed by Joseph Cipriano, the county commissioners will be asked to construct the road, a distance of 1¼ miles.

Contract Is Awarded For Bowie Rebuilding

The contract for rebuilding the stables and buildings at the Bowie race track, which burned last July 24, has been awarded C. W. Cox, of Cumbrilla, Md., it has been announced at Bowie.

The fire occurred shortly before midnight. The flames consumed three stables, two frame buildings, an oil house and a two-story feed store. Thirteen volunteer fire companies were called to the scene.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Garble Sisters.

"Well, I see where they exiled Mrs. Upton Sinclair from Germany."

"It's funny how Hitler is always making life hard for prominent musicians. What did he have against Mrs. Sinclair?"

"It was something about her flying over the Reichstag without a passport."

"She's the wife of that man who wrote 'Babbson,' ain't she?"

"Yeah. He's running for Governor of California now."

* * * *

"Speaking of politics, what do you think of that new Liberty League?"

"You mean the one Dizzy Dean tried to start?"

"No. I mean the one Jouett du Pont, Al Smith and some fellow named Weetamoe organized to repeal the New Deal and bring back that man who spent six months in complete isolation surrounded by ice and snow."

"Herbert Hoover?"

"No. What's the name of that man in Little America? He sailed into the ice pack more than a year ago and was lost from civilization until he was found by Homer Cummings, the Giant scout.

"Oh, you mean Jack Garner!"

"I guess so. But it's unimportant. What I'm getting at is that somebody's starting a new league and it would make a lot of trouble for Roosevelt if he didn't have Schoolboy Rowe to fall back on."

* * * *

"What do you think of those yacht races for the Walker cup?"

"The Shamrock, built by Norman Montagu and Lord Churchill to lift the cup, looks pretty good, but I think the Corsair is too good for it."

"Ely Culbertson?"

"Yes. Say, that was quite a fight Culbertson had with Frankie Frisch at Ocean Grove, wasn't it?"

"I didn't notice. I was busy watching the scrap between Gen. Johnson and that NRA clerk named Piccard."

"What was that about?"

"Piccard went up in a balloon without his Blue Eagle and Johnson fired him, but the American Federation of Labor had him reinstated."

"Was that the match Miss Perkins figured in?"

"Yeah. She nearly beat Helen Jacobs."

* * * *

"Did you see where Frank Buck went five miles below the level of the sea and brought back a bathysphere alive?"

"Yeah. It was too bad it didn't live long enough to see how it would act in captivity."

Canvassing the Possibilities.

The Administration is to cut the NRA codes from 682 to 250. Unless, of course, somebody digs up a code against code cutting.

"Do you mean to tell me there are only 682 codes?" demanded a business man this morning. "Why, it was my impression there were that many in my business alone."

Gen. Johnson denies he resigned and came back on the President's plea that he was the only man who could unscramble the Blue Eagle's eggs.

The killing of the NRA codes from 682 to 250 is going to be a hard blow at the manufacturers of fog-piercing devices.

Rev. J. P. Gibson's Rites at Chaptico

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 29. (Spl.). Funeral services were held today at Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, Chaptico, for the rector of the church, the Rev. Joseph Patterson Gibson, 64, who died Monday.

Dr. Gibson was a native of Howard County, Md., and since his ordination at the New York Theological Seminary in 1900 has served churches in this State.

He is survived by his widow; one son, the Rev. Robert Gibson, of Accokeek; three daughters—Miss Rose Gibson, of New York; Miss Catherine Gibson, of Washington; and Mrs. Jean Wainwright, of Chaptico. A sister, Miss Kate Gibson, of New York, also survives.

Bayliss Funeral Held in Maryland

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). The funeral of Charles E. Bayliss, 67, who died Monday night in the Cambridge-Maryland Hospital as the result of a self-inflicted wound, was held yesterday at his home at Toddville.

Mr. Bayliss had been in failing health for about five years, and recently had been a patient at Johns Hopkins and University Hospitals, Baltimore. Believing his health could not be restored, he slashed his throat with a razor Monday morning.

Surviving are his widow, one daughter, Mrs. Marie Robinson, of Bishop's Head, and three sons, Norman H., of Wilmington, and Bernard and Bertram Bayliss, of Toddville.

Famed Chesapeake Bay Canoes Art Subjects

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). Dr. Norman S. Essig, of Philadelphia, has done an oil painting of two noted Chesapeake Bay log sailing canoes, the Mary Rider, owned by Commodore William H. Green, of the Chesapeake Bay Log Sailing Canoe Association, and the Mayflower, owned by Howard B. Strong, of this town.

The painting of the two boats, owned by the St. Michaels and the local yachtsmen, has been on exhibition here at the Chester River Yacht Club, at the Maryland Yacht Club at Baltimore and at the Miles River Yacht Club at St. Michaels. It has been presented to Commodore Green.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"The Book of Culture."

This is a fat volume of 780 pages, written by Ethel Peyser; and its secondary title, which expresses its significance and its purpose, is "A Springboard to Learning." It is printed in good, clear type, on opaque paper, has a full index and many lists of reading, and is published by Esser-Frederick, Inc., New York.

The style is simple and unpretentious, and I believe a vast number of persons—especially those who have not had the advantage of what is called higher education—will find it useful. Furthermore, they should find it inspiring; for in its discussion of different branches of culture, various individuals should be incited to pursue studies of their own in this or that particular field. As every foreign language is a challenge to somebody to learn it, so every department of what is called culture should awaken an interest and a desire in the minds of those individuals who have the necessary aptitude.

As the author says, "Unless it stimulates the reader to intellectual curiosity and helps him to a richer cultural experience, through its listings—the book will have no utility whatever." Again: "Knowledge, if it be worth anything, must be absorbed into living and being."

Many persons, when assigned by a committee of the club to which they belong to prepare a paper on some subject, will find Chapter III helpful; it is called "The Preparation of Club Papers and Addresses." Indeed, up to page 45, the volume is a kind of first aid for those who are deficient in learning and public speaking; and who do not know how to behave in the society of cultivated people or in public places.

After these preliminary hints to polite conversation and good manners, the author gets right down to business. The part called what you should know about literature is divided into Greek, Roman, Italian, Spanish and Portuguese, German, French, English, American, Russian, with lists of reading, and a chapter on mythology.

Drama, music, architecture, dancing, the history of various civilizations, sciences, medicine, have separate chapters; and the book winds up with "A Bundle of Interesting Facts."

The author keeps up her own courage and that of the reader.

Roanoke to Elect G. O. P. Delegates

Sixth District Convention Meets Saturday.

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Roanoke Republicans will meet Friday night in Hustings courtroom to elect 64 delegates and 64 alternates to the Sixth District Republican convention to be held at Hotel Roanoke Saturday afternoon. The convention will nominate a congressional candidate to oppose Clifton A. Woodrum, Democratic incumbent.

At the Friday meeting a new city committee also is to be elected in accordance with the party plan for reorganization every two years. T. X. Parsons is the present chairman.

Democrat Quits Dorchester Race

G.O.P. Adds Candidate for Circuit Court Clerk.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). The Democratic party in Dorchester County lost a candidate, and the Republican party gained one Monday night, the deadline for withdrawals and drafting candidates to fill in vacancies.

Charles N. Spence, of Secretary, who was a candidate for the State Senate in the Democratic primaries, withdrew, leaving three aspirants to that office, Irving B. Jackson and Brice W. Johnson, of Cambridge, and Olin R. Higgins, of Hurlock.

At the same time the Republicans filled the vacancy on their ticket by drafting Ralph Carroll for clerk of the circuit court. Contestants for that office in the Democratic primaries will be J. Fred Dunn, incumbent, and Frederic Hirst.

Oystermen Ready For New Season

Crisfield, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—With the approach of September, tidewater oystermen of the Chesapeake Bay and tributaries are preparing for the harvest of the bivalves.

Boats and tonging gear are being gotten in readiness for the tonging season, which opens on September 1 in the bay waters of the State except those adjoining Somerset County, which will open 15 days later. Dredging season will begin on November 1.

Watermen say there is a much better outlook for the oyster supply this season than for several years.

Edmund W. Williams Is Buried in Virginia

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Funeral services for Edmund Warren Williams, 83, retired Campbell County farmer, were held this afternoon here at the home of his son, L. Hugh Williams. Burial was in Spring Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Williams was a life-long resident of Campbell County and a member of White's Methodist Chapel. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Virginia Williams, a daughter, Miss Matilda Williams, of Campbell County, and one son.

The National Gallery

JAMES CRAWFORD BIGGS, Solicitor General of United States. Amiable, elderly. Lawyers shake when he defends New Deal before the Supreme Court. Former judge, teacher, jurist, he has represented the Government successfully in many important cases. For years an active trial lawyer in North Carolina, he was confirmed in his present office in May, 1933. Member American Law Institute, American Bar Association and Society of Mayflower Descendants, he has been a college trustee, mayor, legislator and judge of the Supreme Court of North Carolina. Cool, calm gaze emanates from his steely eyes. Genial, retiring, he is the typical Southerner. Heavy-set, he played college football. Now reads history and biography.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

First Job in Rebuilding Is to Remove Junk

By Robert Quillen

Government efforts to "freeze out" utility companies illustrate the methods that business adopted to ruin itself.

A certain power company in a small city gives all the service required. But the men who control it made money by watering its stock—that is, they sold small investors five million dollars' worth of shares in a property worth only one million.

Now the company must charge too much for electricity in order to pay dividends on its watered stock.

What happens? There aren't enough consumers to support both plants—even if the company could meet the Government's price. So the company sells out at the Government's figure or goes bankrupt.

In either case the stockholders lose.

Wherever there are two mills to grind one turn of wheat, one of them must stand idle.

And that is the story and curse of American business.

Gen. Johnson says that one factory is equipped to produce all the steel plows America uses. And competitors are able to produce six times as many.

That same condition is found in every line of production.

At one time there were 5,000 factories making radios. A baker's dozen survived and the others went broke. Which means that stockholders or banks took an enormous loss.

What can be done when there are ten factories equipped to supply a demand that is scarcely enough to support one?

They can consolidate, or make ten bites of a cherry and continue part-time operation without profit, or engage in cut-throat competition and let the fittest survive.

In any case, the investors lose.

It isn't a matter of probable loss. The loss is there now. From one-half to four-fifths of our factory equipment is junk. There is nothing for it to do.

And the sooner we face the truth, reorganize the Nation's business and take the inevitable loss, the sooner we shall reach bedrock where all solid foundations begin.

Bail Set for 4 In N. C. Holdup

Quartet Held in $7,500 Each for Robbery at Harbinger.

Norfolk, Aug. 29 (AP).—United States Commissioner Percy S. Stephenson today ordered four men accused of the robbery of the postoffice at Harbinger, N. C., August 18, held in $7,500 bail each for trial in the United States District Court of Eastern North Carolina.

John Crank, alias John Creekmore; Thomas Williams Winslow, Norman Hampton Cooke and Earl Hamlet Winslow are the defendants. Crank was arrested yesterday in connection with the robbery and shooting at the Dendron (Va.) postoffice.

The latter three were taken into custody yesterday after Crank had made a statement admitting he participated in the Harbinger robbery and naming the other three as accomplices.

Crank and Archie Austin, held on conspiracy charges after an unsuccessful effort to rob the Dendron postoffice, faced even more trouble as police attempted to link them with other crimes.

Only survivors among the quartet which engaged in a pistol battle with Norfolk and Federal officers yesterday, they are being linked by police with a number of felonies.

Both of them wounded, Austin seriously, the men made futile efforts to escape after police gunfire had slain E. W. Austin, Archie's brother, and John Bernard from ambush yesterday.

State Police Probing Kearneysville Thefts

Kearneysville, W. Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Fingerprints were taken this morning by State police in an effort to trace unidentified robbers who entered the White store and a night club during the night.

Nothing was taken from the night club, but considerable merchandise was reported missing from the general store.

47 to Receive U. Va. Degrees

Will Be Conferred Friday at Charlottesville Graduation.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—At University of Virginia summer school graduation exercises Friday evening, President John Lloyd Newcomb will confer degrees on 47 men and women.

Dr. Charles G. Maphis, summer quarter dean, has announced that Dr. Charles W. Knudson, of George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., will deliver the graduation address, "Crises and Education." Following the commencement exercises, the university will give a reception to the graduates and their relatives and guests. State school officials and teachers attending the curriculum revision conference also have been invited.

Several States and one foreign country will be represented in the graduating class. Among the applicants, 18 are scheduled to receive master of arts degrees; bachelor of arts, 16; bachelor of science in education, 8; master of science, and bachelor of science in mathematics, 1.

Leland S. Baker, 48, Is Dead at Lynchburg

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.). Leland S. Baker, 48, died here last night. He was a native of Bedford County, but had lived here a number of years.

Mr. Baker is survived by four children: Hazel, Curtis, Pendleton and Peyton Baker, of Lynchburg, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. G. W. Garbee and Mrs. C. R. Tayman, of Lynchburg; Mrs. W. H. Sheffield, of DeWitt; Mrs. S. J. Womack, of Darlington Heights, and W. P. and T. J. Baker, of this city.

Stock Control No Trade Curb, Says Kennedy

Civil Service Will Rule Status of Members on Securities Board.

Comptroller General J. R. McCarl has ruled that all posts on the new Securities and Exchange Commission except the higher positions are subject to Civil Service requirements, Chairman Joseph P. Kennedy of the commission revealed yesterday.

At the same time Kennedy issued regulations requiring exchanges, wishing to continue trading in unlisted securities admitted prior to March 1, 1934, to file applications with the commission giving specific information regarding market conditions.

These applications, he said, must be filed after September 16. The permission, he explained, will expire June 1, 1936, when the commission will make a formal report.

Rule Provides for Trading.

"Unlisted trading on a stock exchange is briefly traffic in stocks admitted without application of the issuer. Briefly, the new regulations provide for their continuation on the same basis until we make our report in 1936," Kennedy said.

The regulations, Kennedy explained, exempts unlisted securities, which are not registered on other exchanges, from reporting details of their corporate conditions as required from other securities under the exchange act.

At the same time Kennedy vigorously denied that the securities act was responsible for the present small volume of trading on stock exchanges. "The securities act has nothing in it which would warrant a recession of trading. There is a very great disinclination, however, to issue securities pending formulation of rules and regulations. We are now working on regulations to curb manipulating practices, including short selling, and we will announce them very soon," Kennedy said.

Explaining the civil service ruling, Kennedy said that members of the commission had interpreted the desire of Congress to put the commission on a purely appointive basis, including lawyers, examiners and officers. He said that some appointments, however, had been held up pending McCarl's ruling.

"We lost. McCarl was so nice about it, however, we could not even fight him about it."

He said that the commission ultimately intended to appoint around 300 employes and that it had approximately $750,000 in appropriations for the first six months of its work.

Unlisted Trading Heavy.

Speaking of unlisted trading, Kennedy estimated that 75 per cent of the traffic of the New York Curb Exchange fell in this category, but he said the amount varied on other exchanges and he would be unable to give a National estimate of the total.

The chairman declared there were no indications that stock exchanges would refuse to register, explaining that they are pressed for time and have not sent in their applications yet.

Kennedy revealed that the question of fixing market requirements on stocks has been studied and the commission had made a report to the Federal Reserve Board for final action before October 1. It has been indicated that the ultimate margin requirement will be between 25 and 45 per cent, depending upon individual stocks. Kennedy, however, refused to discuss the figure.

Miss West Virginia Committee Named

Ruby Miller, Parkersburg, Is Lucky Girl.

A committee to welcome "Miss West Virginia," who is Ruby Miller, of Parkersburg, to Washington Saturday, was announced yesterday by Edward H. Nunnally, president of the West Virginia Society.

The committee will include D. W. Gall, former senator; Col. J. William DeGrange, first president of the society and one of its founders; William B. Catlett, organizer of the first West Virginia Society in Akron, Ohio, and John L. Bateman, secretary of the Washington society for 14 years.

Miss Miller won her title in a recent beauty contest in Akron.

Mrs. S. L. Ferguson Gets State Appointment

Richmond, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Gov. George C. Peery today appointed Mrs. Samuel L. Ferguson to a place on the board of governors of the State Colony for Epileptics and Feeble-Minded, near Lynchburg.

In making the announcement the Governor pointed out that "half the inmates of the institution are women, therefore it seems that a woman on the board should be able to render a special service."

Oyster Planter Loan Parley Meets Today

Baltimore, Aug. 29 (AP).—Swepson Earle, State conservation commissioner, said today H. H. Johnson, chief clerk of the department, would attend a meeting at Newport News, Va., tomorrow relative to securing loans to oyster planters, similar to those made by the Farm Credit Administration for farming purposes.

Earle said he understood a number of Maryland oyster planters, especially from the lower Eastern Shore, planned to attend the meeting.

Pin Is Drilled Hollow.

Toronto, Ont. (AP).—After two years of patient effort, Henry Huss, Meaford, Ont., watchmaker, has succeeded in drilling a hole through a common pin from end to end without damaging it. The hole, made with a fine drill, is just large enough for a hair from a man's head to pass through.

Warner's "See America First" Series of One-Reel Films Wins Capital Favor

Notable Group Previews Four Newman Reels

By Nelson B. Bell.

The first three and the sixth of a proposed total of 13 one-reel film subjects, comprising a "See America First" series of educational releases, created by E. M. Newman, famous travel lecturer, for the Warner Brothers, were previewed by 110 luncheon guests in the Mayflower Hotel yesterday afternoon.

The four pictures screened were "Pilgrim Days," "The Boston Tea Party," "Hail, Columbia" and "Dixie Land." All were received with every evidence of enthusiastic approval by the distinguished group of invited guests, which included members of the President's Cabinet, Army and Navy, leaders in patriotic, high ranking officers of the civic, educational, civic and political circles and representatives of the press.

In sponsoring these interesting and informative short-reel subjects, H. M. Warner, president of Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., is lending the production, distribution and exhibition facilities of his company to a type of screen offering that successfully combines entertainment with education. The "See America First" series is remotely akin to the Yale Chronicles of a few years ago—if a decade is a few years.

Do Not Live in Past.

Unlike most films of an historical nature, these one-reel productions make no attempt to re-create the events in history with which they deal. They do, on the other hand, afford a comprehensive bird's-eye view of the present-day terrains, buildings, statues, monuments and memorials that perpetuate in memory the salient events in American history.

Primarily, as the series title indicates, they provide a vicarious tour of these United States with strong emphasis laid upon those incidents, places and events that have contributed in largest measure to the shaping of the Nation's destiny.

The individual subjects are brief and to the point and differ from the customary "travel picture" in that they fulfill a definite purpose of bringing home to the masses those elements of greatness in the history of these United States of America with which the masses should be familiar. At the same time they suggest enough of the romance, thrill and adventure that have surrounded the development of a new continent to provide an unusual degree of entertainment.

Adroitly Planned Preview.

Yesterday's preview was adroitly planned and executed. From 11:30 a. m. to 12 noon, cocktails and hors d'oeuvres were served during an informal reception for Mr. Newman, John B. Kennedy, who contributes the running narrative of the pictures, and Albert Howson, personal representative of H. M. Warner, unable to be present owing to the sudden death of his mother Monday morning while he was en route to her bedside in California by plane. At 1 o'clock the four reels were screened in the main ballroom of the Mayflower and at 2 a perfectly appointed course luncheon was served at a huge horseshoe banquet table in the Chinese room.

With A. Julian Brylawski, of the local Warner organization, acting as toastmaster, brief addresses were made by Mr. Newman, Mr. Kennedy and Mr. Howson, explanatory of the purposes back of the making of the "See America First" series. Sam Saxe, in charge of production at the Warner Brothers Vitaphone Studio, and Norman Moray, sales manager, were introduced but contented themselves with merely taking bows.

The production and exhibition of the "See America First" films may be said to be merely a continuation of the work in visual instruction in which Harry M. Crandall pioneered here a decade or two ago by the establishment of a Public Service and Educational Department, under the direction of Harriet Hawley Locher, in conjunction with the Crandall Theaters, now the Warner houses in this territory.

This Mr. Albert Howson, who is Harry M. Warner's personal emissary on many occasions, is a former actor who years ago was an associate of Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's Theater, when both were treading the boards. There are hundreds still living who remember that Mr. Meakin came to Washington in 1911 in the capacity of actor, appearing with both the Garrick and Poli stock companies. It was during this previous incarnation that he and Mr. Howson were fellow Thespians. It's a small world, after all, is what I always say!

Mr. Lust Rises to Remark.

Not to be outdone by Col. James J. Lake in the matter of beating the gun by an early reopening of one of his important mid-town picture houses, Sidney Lust announces that his Hippodrome Theater, which stands practically at the corner of Ninth street and New York avenue, will be reopened to the public on Saturday of this week, September 1, one day ahead of the Gayety, which the good Col. Lake has decided to throw open to burlesque's faithful with the customary Sabbath matinee on Sunday, the second.

Since it was closed early in the summer, the Hippodrome has been completely renovated and redecorated, new seats have been installed and new carpets laid. Neon lights also have been added.

Saturday's opening attraction, which will be shown for four days, will be the Fox production of "Baby, Take a Bow," starring Baby Shirley Temple, with James Dunn, Claire Trevor, Alan Dinehart, Ralph Harolde and numerous others of note.

Daphne Pollard, the half-pint British comedienne, featured on this week's stage bill at Loew's Fox, yesterday demonstrated her firm belief in that fatuous axiom of the theater that "the show must go on." Stricken with a violent attack of ptomaine poisoning, or something equally as disturbing, Miss Pollard relinquished third place on the bill to Myrt and Marge, the headliners, and confined her efforts to seven minutes, instead of her customary routine of 15. Her two assistants did not appear at all during these curtailed shows. Last night she was able to resume the presentation of her entire act. These veteran troupers may die but they never surrender!

Frost in Warrenton!

Every year during the horse show at Warrenton, Va., dances are given in the Warrenton High School Auditorium under the managing directorship of Thomas Frost, an enterprising young man who always contrives to have one of the country's famous dance orchestras on hand for the occasion. Last year it was Don Bestor's Orchestra, whose engagement was interfered with by a severe storm, and we had to arrange with Myer Davis to send down a substitute band to follow through on a second night to salvage some of Mr. Frost's potential loss.

Dances will be given this year on two nights, Monday, September 3, and Tuesday, the fourth. Willard Alexander and his popular orchestra will play the first date, and on Tuesday night Vincent Lopez and his famous orchestra, recently heard as a top-line attraction on the stage at Loew's Fox Theater, will supply the music.

Among the numerous artists comprising the Lopez organization are Frances Hunt, vocalist; Johnny Morris and Lou Bring, novelty songsters; Fred Lowry, whistler, and Stanley Worth and Nick Personni, vocal duo.

Horse show in the daytime and these dances at night will probably insure the presence of a large number of Washingtonians in Warrenton over the Labor Day holiday—an eventuation by wihch Mr. Frost will not be annoyed.

The only thing that will annoy Mr. Frost will be a frost at the box-office.

Reverting momentarily to the Warner Brothers' "See America First" series of one-reelers, the well synchronized interpretative musical backgrounds for the pictures are the creations of David Mendoza. Mr. Mendoza's name is one that is indelibly linked in the minds of many as a symbol of splendid music for pictures and over the air. He has done himself proud in his present assignment, making frequent use of mixed voices and vocal soloists as well as various instrumental combinations.

The West Players, directed by Harry S. Weatherby, will present three one-act plays at Walter Reed Hospital during the first week of September. That is by way of being next week.

The plays are "The Woodpile," a tragedy; "Getting Rid of Father," a comedy, and "The Parting," a melodrama.

The casts include Chauncey Davis, Margaret Evans, Beverly Cheshire, Naff Capel, Edward Walsh, Howard Cox and Virginia McKay. These players have appeared before for the entertainment of the Walter Reed patients and are one of the younger groups of amateur actors making a name for themselves in the Capital.

Autopsy Note.

At any rate, the smelly climax of the Benny Bass-Petey Sarron boxfighting, out at Griffith Stadium Monday night, gave Uncle Joe Turner a perfect set-up for a return bout to capacity business.

There are those who believe "Bennah" deliberately "fouled out" when he banged Petey with that unorthodox belt in the sixth round.

Believe it in all Syrianousness, as you might say!

Municipal Cannery Active at Danville

13,000 Quarts of Food in Storage.

Danville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Thirteen thousand quarts of canned vegetables are in storage at the municipal cannery, which is working eight hours a day and giving employment to a score of men and women.

The harvest from the municipal gardens is nearly completed, but many farmers are bringing in produce under the "barter" provision, by which they get 40 per cent of what they bring in, the cannery getting the remaining 60 per cent.

Here Is That New "Continental"

The "Continental," in case you have forgotten, is the new dance created by Dave Gould, Washington dance director, who introduced the "Carioca" to the screen, to lend a sensational touch to "The Gay Divorce," RKO-Radio's film version of the stage piece of the same name. The idea is that two may kiss while dancing. Here are Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire in an abandoned moment of the Terpsichorean novelty, sans the osculatory innovation.

New Oil Code Is Demanded By Employes

(Associated Press.)

Contending that workers in the oil industry were "much worse off" under the oil code than before it was put into operation, the International Association of Oil Field, Gas Well and Refinery Workers yesterday asked that the code be reopened and its labor provisions entirely rewritten.

The workers' proposal was put before Secretary Ickes in a statement by H. C. Fremming, association president. Mr. Ickes was asked to call a public hearing on the labor clauses. Proposals recommended for discussion included:

Putting all branches of the industry on a basic 30-hour instead of 36-hour week with no cut in normal pay schedules.

Raising the common labor rate to 60 cents in all regions instead of the present 45 to 52 cents.

Establishing a labor advisory and enforcement board of five members, independent of the planning and coordination committee of the industry.

Fremming also asked that Amos L. Beaty be removed as chairman of the planning and coordination committee.

Mr. Beaty, who is general counsel of the Phillips Petroleum Corporation, was said by Fremming to be employed by a company guilty of "malicious" conduct through gross infractions of the oil code.

By Philip K. Scheuer
(Sitting in for Edwin Schallert).

Hollywood, Aug. 28.—Miriam Hopkins will, in all probability, be the newest Samuel Goldwyn star. Lacking only final confirmation, the news is that the blonde actress will align herself with that producer under a long-time contract. Goldwyn's only other feminine star is the Russian Anna Sten.

HELEN HAYES.

It is known that the radio studios have been bidding for Miss Hopkins' services. She has been named in connection with the role of Becky Sharp in Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," which John Hay (Jock) Whitney has been seriously considering as his first production in Technicolor, and the Goldwyn affiliation comes as something of a surprise.

Miss Hopkins, it was said, would have received in the neighborhood of $250,000 for a year with the radio forces. William Seiter, who directed her in "The Richest Girl in the World," has been scanning stories with great earnestness for this player. He believes she has a future. Evidence to support his faith is reputed to be contained in this new picture, which will be previewed tonight.

Meanwhile, it appears, Miss Hopkins and Goldwyn have reached an understanding. "Barbary Coast," shelved temporarily during the recent censorship drive, may be revised and employed as her first vehicle. The actress was last seen in "She Loves Me Not," with Bing Crosby.

Boyer May Return To Film Fold.

Charles Boyer, who came to Hollywood midst more or less fanfare, appeared in a single picture, "Caravan," an elaborate musical journey still to be released. Then M. Boyer set out for his native France, muttering in his beard. Boyer reached New York, where he relieved himself of several uncomplimentary opinions about Hollywood. Life in Hollywood went on about as usual.

Meanwhile, Walter Wanger, who had severed his connections with M-G-M, decided that M. Boyer should not go back to France. As a result, the two have been dickering. It is not known what about, but the wiseacres suspect it may be another American attempt for M. Boyer. Wanger's only announced production has been "The President Vanishes." It is considered unlikely, however, that the French actor will portray the President.

Mischievous Miss Merkel Will Be Stern.

Una Merkel has been added to the cast of S. N. Behrman's "Biography," the title of which gets longer every day. It is now to be known as "Biography of a Bachelor Girl." The "Girl" part is an afterthought. As Slade Kinnicott, the high-voiced Miss Merkel will be very serious. She joins a troupe headed by Ann Harding and Robert Montgomery.

Film Pageant In Review.

R. C. Sherriff, author of "Journey's End," is departing at once for England to attend the opening of his new play, "St. Helena." . . . The New York premiere may occur simultaneously, for some reason . . . Sherriff has been at Universal . . . Cora Sue Collins, the child, will play in "Evelyn Prentice," with Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Robert Montgomery and Billie Burke.

Annapolis Merchants In Trades Expbsition

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Thirty Annapolis merchants are participating in the trades exposition, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, which opened tonight for a four-night stand in the gymnasium of St. John's College.

Tonight's attendance indicated records of past years will be surpassed. Gov. Ritchie has indicated he may attend the exposition Friday.

Edith Harlan Of New York Is Married

Granddaughter of Late Justice Harlan Wed Yesterday.

Bride of Beverly Myles; Announcement Comes as Surprise.

A wedding of interest to Washington society took place yesterday afternoon in Capalaigle Church, Murray Bay, Quebec, Canada, when Miss Edith B. Harlan, daughter of Mrs. John Maynard Harlan, of New York, and of the late Mr. Harlan, became the bride of Mr. Beverly R. Myles, also of New York.

The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by the Rev. Dr. Matheson, of the United Church of Canada.

Mrs. Roger A. Derby, of Cedarhurst, Long Island, formerly Miss Elizabeth P. Harlan, was the matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Elizabeth Beer, of New York, and Miss Anne Winslow, of New Haven, Conn.

Mr. Chapin Rogers, son of Mrs. Hamilton Fish, jr., of New York and Washington, was best man.

Wedding Reception.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the summer cottage of Miss Laura Harlan at Murray Bay.

The bride is the granddaughter of the late Justice John Marshall Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, and Mrs. Harlan. She is the niece of Miss Laura Harlan and Miss Ruth Harlan, of Washington. She attended school in New York and was graduated from Vassar College.

Mr. Myles is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Robert C. Myles, and is a brother of Mr. Robert C. Myles, jr., of the New York Stock Exchange. The bridegroom was graduated from Yale University with the class of 1918 and is a member of the Yale and Racquet and Tennis Clubs. He is now a member of the law firm of Delaney & Myles.

News of the wedding will come as a complete surprise to many of the young couple's friends, as no formal announcement of the engagement was made.

Princess Ouroussow to Wed.

Another wedding of interest to Capital society is that of Princess Eugenie Ouroussow and Mr. Dimitri Lehovich, which will take place on September 4 at the Russian Church of Christ the Savior in New York.

Princess Eugenie, who studied painting in the School of Fine and Applied Arts in Paris, is the daughter of Prince Serge Ouroussow, who now makes his home in Paris. He will arrive this week in New York to attend the wedding. He was formerly in the Russian imperial domestic service and Princess Eugenie was born in Rome when he was secretary of the Russian Embassy there.

Princess Eugenie will be attended at the wedding by Princess Alexis Oblensky, and following the ceremony there will be a reception at the residence of Princess Chavchavadaz, formerly Princess Nina of Russia.

Mr. Lehovich, whose father, Gen. V. A. Lehovich, was an officer of the Russian Imperial Guards and Inspector General of the Russian Artillery, studied in the Imperial Alexander Lyceum in Petrograd and is a graduate of Columbia University. He is now in the foreign department of the Manufacturers Trust Co.

Culbertson on Bridge

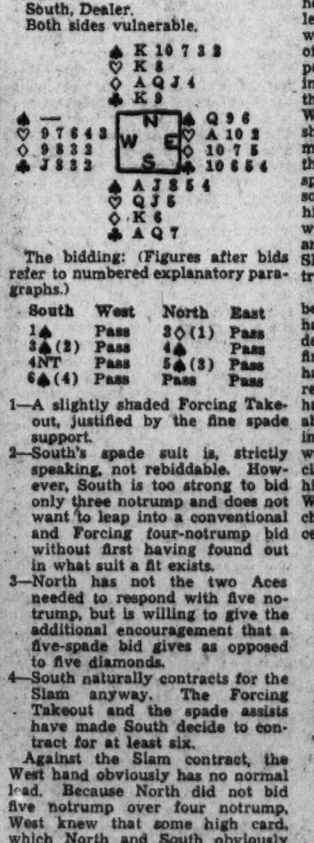
Defensible Prevarication.

People who think the millennium is at hand do not make wills, and a good Bridge player on lead against a Slam contract does not bother much about giving his partner information that will enable him to make the right leads later in the hand, for it is very probable that his partner will have no leads to make. The Declarer is the one who will be making the leads, and he is the one to whom the Opening leader should give information—information that will prepare him to make the wrong ones. Thus in leading against a Slam the criteria which hold in leading against a game or part-score contract should often be discarded in favor of deceiving the Declarer, as they were by the West player in the following hand:

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	3◇(1)	Pass
3♠(2)	Pass	4♠	Pass
4NT	Pass	5♣(3)	Pass
6♠(4)	Pass	Pass	Pass

1—A slightly shaded Forcing Takeout, justified by the fine spade support.
2—South's spade suit is, strictly speaking, not rebiddable. However, South is too strong to bid only three notrump and does not want to leap into a conventional and Forcing four-notrump bid without first having found out in what suit a fit exists.
3—North has not the two Aces needed to respond with five notrump, but is willing to give the additional encouragement that a five-spade bid gives as opposed to five diamonds.
4—South naturally contracts for the Slam anyway. The Forcing Takeout and the spade assists have made South decide to contract for at least six.

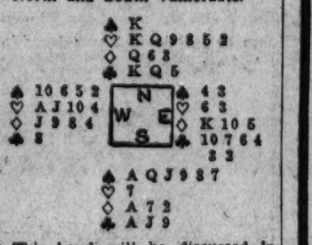
Against the Slam contract, the West hand obviously has no normal lead. Because North did not bid five notrump over four notrump, West knew that some high card, which North and South obviously lacked, must be held by East. The chief hope of defeating the contract lay in his partner's ability to win a spade trick in addition, which possibility showed itself to West because of his own void in spades. Finally deciding that a neutral lead in the heart suit would be the best, West's only thought was possibly to mislead the Declarer as to his distribution. Accordingly, instead of making his sound and normal fourth-best lead of the heart four, West led the nine-spot—the top card of the five-card suit. Most unusual and unconventional, but, as will be seen, it worked.

After East won the first trick with the Ace of hearts, and returned a club, South realized that his contract was safe if he could avoid the loss of a trump trick. He further saw that to postpone drawing trumps could not help him. The only way a trump trick could be lost was, if one of the opponents held three to the Queen, by first leading a high honor from the wrong hand. Having no other way of telling which of the two opponents was most likely to be void in spades, the South player came to the natural decision that since West's Opening lead indicated shortness in hearts, it was slightly more probable that West, rather than East, held three cards in the spade suit. As a result of this reasoning South decided to lay down his spade Ace first. Of course, when West showed out, the North and South cause was lost and the Slam contract had to go down one trick.

Admittedly, with a normal fourth-best lead from West, South would have had to toss a coin mentally to decide which spade honor to play first, and he might just as easily have guessed incorrectly as correctly were this the case. But South, having no reason to suspect the abnormality of West's lead and having no other indication on the hand, was led into making the wrong decision in the spade suit. Only the highest praise can be given to the West player. He turned an even chance into one in which the percentages heavily favored him.

Tomorrow's Hand.

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



This hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Durban's Atmosphere Second to Port Said

Durban, South Africa, presents the most varied picturesque atmosphere of any city outside of Port Said. The town evokes admiration from all visitors for its colorful cosmopolitan throng, and is being featured by the American Express Co. in their summer South African tour as representing every phase of African life.

The shifting picture of the streets shows ricksha "boys" wearing feathered headdresses, symbolic of speed, and widespread horns of oxen, signs of surety; Kaffir girls in beads and blankets, Mohammedans, Parsees, Hindus, Sikhs, and Arabs; East Indian coolie women clad in rags and golden ornaments; veiled and richly garbed women of rank; sturdy Zulus; the ubiquitous white man.

Ships and people of all nations pass through from Japan and India, Australia, Ceylon, the Straits Settlements, Europe and America. Added to this panorama of ships are the natives from every part of Africa, giving the city an international aspect which vies with Port Said.

Women Run Street Cars.

Valparaiso is Spanish for Vale of Paradise. This chief seaport of Chile dates back to 1535. Immediately behind the shore the hills begin to rise, reaching a height of 1,000 feet. The city, containing a quarter of a million people, is built on these hillsides. On clear days, Mount Aconcagua, the highest point on this hemisphere, can be seen, towering above its Andean brothers. In this city women work as conductors on the street cars, which are double deckers, 10 cents being the fare below and 5 cents above.

Here Riches Await You.

Bahia, once the capital of Brazil, is the great cocoa port of that country. The state of the same name produces as much tobacco as does Cuba. It also produced the largest diamond ever found—3,150 carats. Black diamonds (no, not coal) are found here. The sand is so full of minerals that it is worth $100 a ton.

Hennings Return From Maine Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning will return to their Washington home on Friday after spending the summer in the Maine woods. They will be accompanied by their daughters, Miss Barbara Henning and Mrs. Nelson Landon Head and her infant son Richard. Mrs. Head was formerly Miss Elizabeth Henning.

Lieut. Head has been ordered to Schofield Barracks, T. H., for duty and with Mrs. Head and their son will sail from New York the middle of October for the islands.

Bath Brush Emits Suds With Spray

Two-in-One Combination Makes Soap Fountain in Bathtub.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

UNTIL recently a bath spray plus a bath brush has equaled an unknown quantity. But now that a manfacturer has combined the two he has produced a brush spray, or spray brush, the newest thrill of the modern bath.

A rubber hose that fits over any size of faucet is attached to a short metal tube to which is fastened a loop brush. The tube has a small slit in the side through which one slips soap flakes. When the water is turned on it courses over these flakes into a sudsy stream which jets through the brush. Using the tube as a handle, one has a bristly, lathery brush for thorough cleansing measures, and the means for an invigorating massage.

Consider for a moment that large pores in the face, surface blackheads, and pimples on the back may all be checked by stimulation such as is afforded by a good rub down with a bath brush, and a cleansing with soap and water.

For Jungle Top Drinks.

A planter's punch, a mint julep, or, for that matter, any tall drink with a jungle top of mint and fruit, should be served with a glass "straw."

A Connecticut avenue store which has everything that imbibers need, from ornate stoppers to more ornate wine bottles, has a variety of these fascinating "straws," some retailing for 5 cents each. Plain with colored knobs on the end for crushing the juice from fruit slices, and others dark in color with bright knobs. Some, instead of the knob, have a small spoon which is a masher and a cherry-lifter at the same time.

Also, there are glass spikes with knobs on one end, and sharp points on the other. These are fine for shorter drinks such as cocktails and old fashioneds.

Washable Watch Bands.

A Word for Handkerchiefs.

Women have already discovered that there's one gift which never fails to please a man—handkerchiefs. So far, men have yet to discover that the same holds true with women. It's not unusual to see a man stalking the aisles of a store disdaining the purchase of linen handkerchiefs while he selects an atomizer, or a picture frame.

As a matter of fact, few things please either a man or woman more than fine linen handkerchiefs. These are always a mark of simplicity and good taste. A downtown store is offering attractive ones, large and small, and monogrammed or marked with your full name.

The women's handkerchiefs are in white or colors with finely rolled hems or hemstitched borders. The men's are white with hemstitched hems. They sell six for $1.25.

A Paste Does Your Darning.

Away with the needle and thread, your darning egg and your scissors! A patching paste is supplanting them, one and all. It mends and repairs hosiery, lace curtains, shirts, underwear, leather, woolens, water bottles, rubber gloves, shoes, and, in fact, almost everything but the baby's teeth. It has been frequently and successfully used for turning up hems in dresses, shirts and trousers.

After it has been squeezed from the tube and carefully applied in small quantities, forget about it.

Once dry it may be washed, boiled and ironed and will still cleave to its material.

So far this mild little wonder of the world, which sells on the notions counter of a downtown store, remains undiscovered by those who sketch and describe and defy you to believe it or not. One tube—and a tube's enough for a long, long time—is 25 cents.

Christmas Bargain.

A month from now hundreds of shoppers will be Christmas card conscious. They will flock to the stores thinking to put in an early order, but will find prices already up. Instead of "putting off till tomorrow what they might do today" they may find brand new cards selling at a 10 per cent reduction right now in a downtown store. These same cards soon will sell at full price.

Plebeian Bowls, Plus Charm.

Those who like to go "peasant" in a slightly polished way will delight in wooden bowls, with shiny lacquered finish, offered in several colors, complete with wooden spoons, selling at less than a dollar.

Dolls for Dressing Tables.

Bigger Berets Bob Up Among Fashion's Favorites for Fall

Second Look Is Needed to Prove They Belong to Basque and Breton Families, but Shoppers Find Large Models Dressy.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—When you compare what the Basques and the Bretons call a beret with what we call one this fall, it's pretty hard to realize that the former were the original progenitors of this 1934 hat. For the Basque beret is a close-fitting, almost skull cap affair. The Breton, while it has a bit more to it than the Basque, is certainly not to be called large.

But just look at the enormous, elaborated affairs popped whimsically over one eye of fall fashion-knowing women. Berets? Oh, never!

Yet the beret influence is there . . . in the soft, flatish crown, in the band that holds them on.

They really are a cross between a beret and a turban . . . fancier than a real beret . . . flatter than a real turban . . . larger than both of them.

They're worn all day long. With tailored street costumes, with dressy daytime costumes, with sports outfits, with formal afternoon or informal dinner dresses. And each type is different.

Feather Adds a Touch.

The sports and tailored beret is the simplest. It's more pancakey than some of the others and its details are quite simple . . . tucks, seams or inserts in the top. Sometimes it has a gay feather perking out much in the manner of the beret in the center sketch.

It's made of felt, fabrics, suede, velveteen or knitted. And lots of women are wearing it not only with their sports clothes but with their tailored street costumes.

The dressy street beret isn't quite so pancakey. Usually it has height at the back, as the one in the sketch at the top. Its details are dressier, as the rippled, upstanding cuff and neat little bows of the one pictured. And this is made of felt, duvetyn or velvet.

Then the very dressy beret . . . larger than either of these. Soft fabrics, such as velvet, metal cloth or duvetyn, are used in it, and it is very drapable. If you don't like it at one angle you can pull it into another. This, too, is apt to have some height at the back.

Berets are in fashion, all right, if they're becoming. And the subject of becoming hats is one which bothers many women.

What kind of a hat should you wear . . . with your type face? A big or little one? A brimmed hat or an unbrimmed? One that tilts forward or turns backward? And so on.

We have a new leaflet which answers all those questions for you . . . in pictures . . . and tells you why. Just pick out your own type face on the chart and you know just what kind of hat to look for. We'll send it to you on receipt of the filled-in coupon and requested inclosures.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

HOME PLAYGROUND equipment is fine if you can afford it. See-saws and swings and horizontal bars provide many hours of entertainment. But the mother who cannot pay the price of the equipment the stores are showing need not do without it.

A pre-school nursery, which has been conducting experiments to discover outdoor toys that will provoke the interest of small children, advises that packing cases make excellent equipment.

The diversity of games that children can devise is unlimited. The cases can be houses or stores, with large stores for chairs and pebbles for wares to sell. With a plank laid across, the boxes become bridges.

A ladder, stretched across two high boxes or the limbs of a tree, is important because the children can hang from it; and while the legs are exercised in the normal course of playing, hanging from a ladder, or "walking" its length by the hands, strengthens the lesser used arm muscles.

Any wood, of course, should be planed down to remove splinters, and "bridges" should be low enough so that the child does not hurt himself if he falls off onto the grass.

With entertaining equipment, the three-to-six-year-old can play happily outdoors all through the autumn.

New Zealand Citizenship Offered to Alien Wives

Wellington, N. Z., Aug. 29 (Spl.). Women without a country, New Zealand women who married and lost their British nationality without gaining citizenship in the country to which their husbands belonged, are now in a position to choose whatever nationality they desire, because of recent legislation to that effect.

They may remain New Zealanders, and thus citizens of the British Empire, if they wish, or in the event the country to whose nationality they aspire makes it difficulty for them.

The Capital Kitchen

By Susan Mills.

FOR FAMILIES that like cheese, and appetites that are lazy, here are a few stimulants. Cheese as a flavoring can do wonders with the most prosaic dishes. The rate at which the family will polish off the following is no wonder at all.

Cheese Surprise.

1 tablespoon butter
1 beaten egg
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon mustard
½ teaspoon paprika
2 cups grated cheese
6 slices bread
6 slices bacon

Add the butter, egg and seasonings to the grated cheese and mix to a paste. Spread thick on bread and put a piece of bacon on top of each. Bake in a moderately hot oven for 5 to 8 minutes. Serve very hot, accompanied by a relish or pickles.

The pieces of bread may be whole slices or cut diagonally in half or in any fancy shape one wishes. Smaller cheese surprises make nice accompaniments for soups, cocktails, and salads in a regular meal.

Noodle Ring.

One pound of noodles; boil, drain and wash with cold water. Place 4 eggs in a bowl, add 1 cup of cream, 1½ tablespoonfuls of Worcestershire sauce, 1 pinch of salt, 1 paprika, 2 tablespoonfuls of catsup. Then beat with egg beater; add ¾ cup of grated American cheese.

Add noodles, put into well buttered ring, set in pan with water in it and bake one hour. The filling may be mushrooms, chicken, sweetbreads, peas, &c., in plenty of cream sauce.

Cauliflower with Cheese Au Gratin.

Boil cauliflower in salted water until tender. Separate into flowerets, and place them stem downward into ramekins. Melt three tablespoonfuls of butter, and cook in it three tablespoonfuls of flour, half a teaspoonful of salt, and a dash of paprika. Add a cupful and a half of milk, and stir until the sauce boils. Stir a cupful of fine cracker crumbs into a third of a cupful of melted butter; sprinkle these over the cauliflower and sauce, and set the ramekins in oven to brown the crumbs. Serve in the ramekins.

Cheese Balls.

1½ cupfuls grated American cheese.
2 tablespoonfuls flour.
½ teaspoonful salt.
3 egg whites.
Few grains cayenne.
Cracker dust.

Mix cheese with flour and seasonings, beat the egg whites stiff, and combine with the first mixture, shaping the whole into small balls. Roll in cracker dust and fry in deep fat hot enough to brown a bit of bread in 40 seconds. Drain well on paper and serve hot.

Peach Ice Cream Dessert.

Quart vanilla ice cream
3 cups sliced peaches
2-3 cups sugar

Mix and chill peaches and sugar. Arrange cream in cups. Top with peaches, garnish with mint leaves and serve immediately.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Compliments of "The Strange Animal"

When Mr. Man found only two barbecued pigs where he had just left three, he thought that one of them had fallen through the iron rods into the pit, and he grabbed his turning stick and looked down into the pit, but even with the light from those red coals he couldn't see any pig. He was a lot upset, and scratched his head almost as hard as Uncle Joe does when he is awfully puzzled. Then he got his lantern and began looking for tracks, and he didn't have any trouble about finding plenty of them. There were two rows of them—one row coming from the creek and the other going back, and they were the tracks of that "strange animal!"

Mr. Man was certainly put out.

Here he had invited everybody in the neighborhood to his corn-shucking and barbecue supper, and now somebody had stolen one-third of his supper. He was afraid to go out of sight of the pit again, for this same man or animal might come and get another pig; so he took one pig under each arm and carried them to his meat table at the smoke-house where he could cut them up and get them ready for the table. They were so hot that they nearly burned his shirt off, and so he ran like a rabbit to the place where he could drop them. When he told Mrs. Man that somebody had stolen one of the pigs, and he was afraid there wouldn't be enough for the crowd, it didn't worry her at all.

"Oh, well," she said, "I think there will be plenty of meat to go around. I thought that some of the crowd might not like barbecue, and so I roasted a turkey, and he is 'most as big as a pig, so nobody will have to go home hungry."

And now the neighbors were coming in, and Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy had come, too, "to help out the white folks with their doings," as Uncle Joe said. And Uncle Joe was a real help in keeping the big fire going, bringing water to the corn shuckers and running around generally. Everybody had a good time, and unless you have ever been to a corn-shucking you don't half know what a frolic it is. Everybody whoops and hollers and sings just as loud as he wants to, and sometimes they have contests to see which side will shuck the most corn, and the winners get a prize.

They certainly did have a good time, and the smell of that barbecue and roast turkey that Mrs. Man and Aunt Judy were fixing for supper made them all hurry to get thru. When they had finished the shucking, and were all gathered around the big table, they were not half so noisy as they had been, for that good supper kept their mouths too full to do much talking. When they had nearly finished the supper and were drinking the last of the coffee, there came fluttering over Mr. Man's head a piece of paper with a little stick tied to it, so the wind wouldn't blow it away. It fell on the table right in front of him, and when he picked it up he saw that it was a note with his name on it. He certainly didn't know what to make of it, but it looked like something that he ought to read, and so he unfolded it and read:

"The strange animal sends his compliments to Mr. Man, and thanks him for the delicious barbecued pig. We are all enjoying it very much."

"Ah-hah," Mr. Man said, "I knew the rascal was a man. I'll take this note to town tomorrow and put the sheriff after him."

HONEYMOON MOUNTAIN

by Frances Shelley Wees

Deborah's grandfather tied up her fortune so that she could not make the mistake her mother did and elope with a stranger. By the will she must marry the son of Courtney Graham, whom her mother jilted. But the youth is not the man his father was; he wants only Deborah's money. To prevent the marriage, and disaster to Deborah, a wealthy young man named Bryn marries her; the two of them agree to let her grandmother believe that Bryn is actually Stuart Graham. The young couple, married on the Coast, go to live on grandmother's lonely mountain ranch. Bryn solves a ticklish situation by sending for servants and modernizes the place.

THEY took the cow through the gates. The boy hung back. "What's the matter?" Bryn inquired.

The boy shook his head. "I don't think I care much if I go to the house," he said. "I can go out this way."

"What's the matter with the house?"

The boy dug a toe into the ground. "Well, the old lady," he muttered. "I ain't never seen her, and neither has Mom. Mom says she ain't right in her head. Maybe she's dangerous."

Bryn laughed. "Scared of me?"

"No. You're all right."

"So's the old lady. I'll tell you what's the matter with her, son," Bryn said, and thought it over. "Did you ever hear of anybody with a broken heart?"

"Ma has magazines that tell about them. But I thought it was girls."

"Not always. That's what's the matter with Mrs. Larned, as nearly as anybody can tell it. And as far as that goes, you probably won't see her, anyway, although you'd be crazy about her if you did. She looks like the grandmothers in fairy stories. So you're all right."

Joe hitched up his overalls. "All right," he muttered, and followed.

In the kitchen Bryn introduced Joe to Gary. "Joe's going to milk for us," he explained. . . . What's he supposed to do with the milk, Gary?"

When Joe was sure of his instructions, he went off, running, his first week's pay clutched in his hand. "He's a bright little tyke," Bryn muttered.

Gary was not thinking of the boy. "Well," he said slowly, taking a long breath, "we've got a cow." "I must say, you got a way of getting things done. And . . . I'd like to thank you for that tobacco, sir."

"I suppose the electric light situation is next," Bryn said, unheeding. "Well, I think I can fix that myself. Several years of engineering ought to prove of some value. Lead on, Gary."

In the small square house where the dynamo stood greasy and unresponsive, Bryn detached a pair of overalls from a peg on the wall and climbed into them. "Now," he said, "if you'll go and prepare dinner, and leave me alone in my glory, I'll see what's to be done, Gary."

"Deborah Isn't Happy."

But Gary stared at Bryn with troubled eyes. "It's Miss Deborah," he said abruptly. "She isn't happy."

"Have you any suggestions?" Bryn asked gravely. "Anything to oblige. That's my motto."

"I was wondering if you could . . . that is, well, girls are queer. If you could stay away from her, maybe, and not pay any attention to her. Then she'd feel safer."

"Indeed?" Bryn remarked politely. "So she doesn't feel safe with me?"

"She hasn't really said so, you know," Gary hastened to assure him. "But she's afraid every minute you're going to pull the ground out from under her feet, if you know what I mean."

"Afraid I don't."

"Well . . . she never had anybody but the old folks and me. She doesn't know how to take people as they come. It's all going too fast for her, and she doesn't see where it's going to end."

"Where do you think it's going to end, Gary?" There was no answer.

Gary was frowning. He sighed, but did not speak, then went back to the house.

There was, as Bryn had suspected, nothing seriously wrong with the engine of the electric plant. Before the motor was started he decided, it would be wise to inspect the connections at the house. He removed the greasy overalls and went directly across to the brook to wash some of the grease from his hands. Once there, in the cool green shadows under the trees, he walked toward the foot-bridge below. His ears caught a sound from across the stream, farther down. He stopped.

There was, on the other side of the brook, a little green glade sloping down to the water. On the thick soft short grass, Deborah was sitting with the puppy in her lap.

"Hold still," Deborah was saying softly. "How can I comb you properly and make your hair shine if you won't hold still?"

The puppy put her cold black nose up pleadingly. But Deborah was adamant. "No," she said firmly. "Not until I'm through. And don't you dare bark, in case somebody comes to see where we are."

Her head was bent. She was engrossed in her handiwork. Bryn drew back a little farther to make sure he could not be seen, and watched the picture. Deborah was wearing a dress of some filmsy brown stuff today.

"There," she said at last, and put down the comb. "You look sweet. Now, tell me. Do you love me?"

The puppy barked sharply.

Bryn Takes a Fall.

He went absently into the kitchen and got a drink. Gary was shelling peas. All morning, as Bryn knew, he and Deborah had spent making strawberry jam.

Gary gazed at him frowningly. "Was it hot in the engine house?" he asked.

"Yes, very hot."

"You must've got it to run, then, did you? I didn't hear it."

"Run?" Bryn repeated. "Ah . . . no. No." He took another drink. He looked at his hands. He picked up the soap and turned on the water. He washed his hands carefully. Gary watched him, puzzled.

"Ho-hum," Bryn said at last and dried them. "Where's there a ladder?" he inquired.

"Out on the edge of the orchard," Gary told him. "But you better be careful of it. It isn't as good as it might be."

Bryn went out to the orchard, lifted the ladder lying half-hidden in the grass, carried it back and propped it up against the wall of the house, beneath the place where the wires entered. He slapped his pocket to make sure of his pliers and tape, and then, trying each rung cautiously, went up the ladder.

As he reached the top he turned half-round and was just in time to see Deborah emerge from her retreat. He did not look at her, but went busily to work, whistling blithely.

There was a sudden ominous cracking which Bryn scarcely heard; the rung upon which he was standing collapsed into splinters, and he fell neatly through. He heard Deborah scream; the puppy barked furiously, and then he dropped into oblivion.

He awoke, a few moments later, with something cold dashing across his forehead, and the sound of Deborah's voice saying in a whisper, "More, Gary, get more, quick!" The sound of footsteps. Bryn lay motionless, collecting himself. He knew he was not hurt. The grass was thick, here, and he had broken his fall; his head had probably been whacked just hard enough to put him out for a minute or two. He did not open his eyes. Deborah was beside him. She put her hand on his forehead, lifted the wet hair back from his brow. He could hear her breathing, deep and quick. He wondered if he dared put up his hand and touch hers. . . .

"Please Don't Die."

She bent over him. "Don't die," she whispered like a breath. "Don't die, please don't die."

He moved his head faintly and lifted his hand. He would find hers . . . with his wedding ring on it . . . he would hold it firmly, and tell her . . . her little white hand . . . he groped for it.

Something soft and light fell on his cheek, a delicate gentle touch. He caught his breath and held it. He threw off his pretence of weakness, put his hand up quickly, opened his eyes, his heart thumping, and found himself clutching with both hands the puppy, nosing him in an anxiety of curiosity. Deborah was gone.

He locked his hands around his knees, sitting there on the grass. She had said "Don't die . . . don't die." At least she cared so much. Still, a death was a very troublesome and inconvenient thing, and that, Bryn told himself bitterly, was probably what she had been thinking of.

He got up and strolled grimly around the corner, to meet Gary, wild-eyed, approaching with a brimming dipper of water.

"You aren't hurt, sir?" Gary gasped breathlessly.

"Not a scratch," Bryn replied. "I should have tested the ladder more carefully."

"Well, that is good," Gary said with heartfelt emotion. "I got a terrible fright. And Miss Deborah was coming to the house and saw you fall. She——" he stopped.

"She what?" Bryn asked calmly.

"She's crying."

"Sorry. Do you suppose I ought to apologize?"

Gary glanced up. He frowned. Then, without answering, he went back to the preparations for dinner.

Evening came on again; dinner was served in the dining room, brighter now with a host of tall tapers. Grandmother had tucked a piece of lace into the collar of her gray satin dress and pinned a rosebud at the point of the collar. Deborah was pale and quiet. Bryn paid no more attention to her than courtesy demanded. When dinner was over Grandmother wanted to go for a little stroll.

It was a glorious night. The moon had already risen. The sky was deep blue, and sparkling with stars. The air was warm. Grandmother leaned on Bryn's arm; Deborah was on her other side.

Perfect Night for Love.

They came back to the front porch at last. Grandmother did not seem to notice their awkward silences. She withdrew from between them and tucked Deborah's arm in Bryn's.

"There, my darlings," she said, with the ghost of a laugh. "Walk together down the path beside the brook. It is a perfect night for lovers. I am going in now. Good night!" and before Deborah's hand could stop her, or Bryn's words could form themselves, she was gone.

"Very nice night," Bryn said formally.

"Yes," Deborah agreed after a moment.

"Do you wish to go in?"

"She will be listening."

"Well, the brook path is as good as any to walk on. Shall we go?"

She glanced up at him in the moonlight, but his face was cool and unmoved. They went slowly down along the brook. Deborah walked, head bent, saying nothing; waiting for him to talk, Bryn decided. He locked his lips together.

She was very small. Her head scarcely came to his shoulder. She was as slim as a flower stem.

They were almost at the end of the path. He had not spoken. She lifted her head. "I'm . . . I'm sorry you fell and hurt yourself," she said in that delicious low voice with the tiny break.

"I didn't hurt myself," Bryn said calmly. "Sorry to cause a commotion."

They reached the end of the path. Bryn turned. Deborah hesitated, but, after a second, turned beside him. "It was . . . kind of you to remember tobacco for Gary," she said. "I didn't realize why he wasn't smoking."

Bryn did not reply. He strolled along beside her, his head bent.

Almost back at the house, she spoke again. Her voice held a hint of desperation. "It is a lovely night, isn't it?" she said.

"I think it's a little chilly," Bryn replied. "Do you suppose your grandmother thinks we've been out long enough now?"

She stopped and looked up at him. Her face was distinct in the clear silvery light. Her eyes were dark and wonderful, her lips soft, her shoulders slim and tenderly young. He looked down at the fine arched line of her brows, the little round chin, the straight white little nose; his eye fell upon the soft hollow at the base of her throat and came back again to her eyes, mute, wondering. And, as he watched, steady and unmoving, she turned away with a little droop in her shoulders, and left him.

Later she stood against the stone railing of the balcony, surveying the changes taking place in her little world, and was thoroughly miserable. Everyone seemed to be in a conspiracy against her. Day by day, slowly but inexorably, all that reminded her of the old peaceful happy life was being removed, and nobody seemed to realize or care that she was being left alone in a vacuum. Even Grandmother didn't care. Grandmother was very happy; her cheeks grew pinker every day, her appetite had improved, she never appeared in the morning with the old dark heavy circles under her eyes, which had betrayed so many sleepless nights. Grandmother, of course, thought that Deborah was happy too. She didn't begin to realize how empty life was now and how lost and forlorn Deborah was beginning to feel. It hadn't occurred to her that this dream of hers which had come true had never been Deborah's dream.

Deborah leaned over the balcony, plucked a tiny pink moss-rose from its vine and tapped it softly against her lips. She sighed.

In her dream of her knight she hadn't thought of Grandmother and Gary. Everything was gone. Her childhood, her freedom, even her right to think of herself as young and free. Now there were responsibilities, heavy ones; she was surrounded by them, crushed by them.

His Own Life to Lead.

Below her, only a few days ago had been heavy tangled grass and unkempt hedges. Now the men were working at it and were almost through. Grandmother loved to sit on the veranda at the front of the house and watch the rose bushes emerge from their green swathings. Gary and Bryn had taken a couch out to the veranda for her.

But Grandmother had everything to make her happy now. Her dreams had come true, and she could look ahead and live in them. For Deborah there was nothing save, day after day, a growing dread of that terrible time coming at the end of the year, when Grandmother would have to learn that this man she was growing so fond of, did not, after all, mean anything to Deborah. He was, Deborah was forced to admit to herself, perfect to Grandmother. He acted as if he loved her. He was very quick at seeing what people wanted, as he had been about Gary's tobacco.

Yes, he was making Grandmother happy, but that was frightening. Because, at the end of the year. . . .

And one couldn't dream of making a bargain with him to continue the play acting until . . . until Grandmother didn't need any one any longer. That would be years and years, Deborah hoped. And he had his own life to live, his own career to carve out, his own . . . well, his own girl to marry.

Deborah fell to wondering what his own girl was like. She would be beautiful, of course, and probably tall and queenly, instead of little and childish.

Deborah suddenly crossed the floor into the bedroom, and flung open the door of the dress rack. Her dresses hung there, limp on their hangers.

There was the flowered silk she wore for dinner, made out of an old one of Grandmother's. The silk was very good, stiff and heavy. Once she had thought it very beautiful, but now that she had seen the wonderful clothes in the shop windows in San Francisco, it looked babyish and silly.

To Be Continued.

How to Keep Well

Hodgkin's Disease.

IN 1832 Thomas Hodgkin of Guy's Hospital, London, described a disease characterized by progressive enlargement of the lymph nodes in various parts of the body With later investigation the term Hodgkin's disease has given way to the name lymph adenoma because of the typical lymph gland tumors associated with the disease.

Lymph nodes or glands form an important part of the lymph system of the body. They are composed of a special kind of tissue and serve normally as filtering stations along the lymph channels. They quickly enlarge and become tender, sometimes painful, whenever infected material is drained into the lymph system. A common example is the enlarged gland that may be felt at the lower border of the jaw when a molar is infected.

At this time there are two views relative to the nature of Hodgkin's disease: First, that it is a malignant growth, particularly affecting the lymph tissue; second, that it is an inflammation presumably due to some microorganism. Its slowly progressive, but fatal, character lends color to the malignant theory. Against this view is the fact that the lymph nodes do not disclose the typical structure that characterizes malignant disease, but rather a progressive type of inflammation.

The search for causative bacteria has been hard and long, but so far without definite results. By some it has been pointed out that Hodgkin's disease and tuberculosis are frequently closely associated.

Recently M. H. Gordon injected into an ear vein of a rabbit gland cells from a case of Hodgkin's disease. Within a few days the animal showed signs of inflammation of the coverings of the brain and to a certain extent, of the brain itself. This would seem to point strongly toward the infectious nature of the disease. Enlarged lymph glands occurring in other diseases, some of which closely resmble Hodgkin's, when treated in the same manner and injected into rabbits, did not produce typical symptoms.

Up to date no satisfactory treatment has been found, although the work of Gordon will no doubt lead to an effort to find a vaccine or antitoxin. Present day treatment consists in the use of X-ray or radium, by means of which the enlarged lymph nodes are greatly reduced in size and many distressing symptons relieved. Preparations of arsenic have been used in some cases with good effect. The disease does not run a rapid course. Under careful management the lives of those afflicted may be prolonged for a number of years.

What Today Means

"Virgo."

IF AUGUST 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 2:45 to 4:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:45 to 10:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 10:45 p. m. until midnight.

August 30 might show unusual signs of activity which may result in very satisfactory business. The possibility of obtaining money, if sought, is very favorable. In the vast majority of cases any favors, within reason, which are requested are very likely to be granted.

In social contacts it may be wise to refrain from any personal comments regarding other people, as your remarks might be repeated and a strained friendly relationship result. The road that lovers will travel on this date may be full of pitfalls. It will be wise to be guarded in your remarks and careful your actions are above reproach.

If a woman and August 30 is your birthday, you may make tremendous headway in gaining popularity if you do not insist on giving or receiving minute details regarding trivial matters. Having a very independent spirit and disliking orders from others, any form of partnership or position where others would direct your movements might prove distasteful to you.

If a man and August 30 is your birth anniversary, accuracy of detail is probably a pet obsession which might prove an affliction to both family and friends if you inflict them with it. You possess a splendid mind, a great deal of ingenuity as well as energy and should prove a big money maker.

Louella Cable Never Studied Art But Has No Peer Picturing Fish

Scientific Portraits for Federal Bureau Win High Praise.

By Elizabeth Young.

LOUELLA CABLE is very fond of fish, but she wouldn't eat one for anything. Why? She herself doesn't quite know why. She says neither sentiment nor finicky appetite is accountable—it's just one of those things.

Miss Cable draws fish for the Bureau of Fisheries of the United States Department of Commerce—clean, delicate, exact drawings that have biologists and scientists rubbing their hands with delight at the perfection of her delineations.

She's one of the first women in Government service to have held the title of juior aquatic bologist, to which she was appointed in 1927 by Dr. Samuel F. Hildebrand, senior ichthyologist of the bureau, in whose office she may be found any day peering entranced through a microscope at some fish specimen.

She was absorbed in contemplation of what appeared to be a black speck floating in water when we entered her basement retreat the other morning. It was a preserved specimen of a 6-day-old Spanish mackerel, caught 6 miles south of Cape Lockhart in August of 1927, she corrected us gently.

Would we like to look? We would—and did. Sure enough, it was a fish, although even the microscope failed to yield any significant details to biologically uninformed eyes. It looked like an infinitesimally small wash drawing, with a projecting lump of coal for an eye.

Yet when Miss Cable shall have reduced her analysis of that Spanish mackerel's anatomical structure to an India ink drawing, you may be sure the appropriate number of myromeres—muscle bands to you—finn rays, et cetera, will stand revealed.

Anyone expecting Miss Cable to tell him how good she is in her particular field is due for disappointment. She is a modest, poised, softspoken individual—whose responses to questioning come in murmurs so low one has to lean close to catch the words.

Fortuitous "Accident."

"It's very much of an accident that I'm here at all," she said. "It started with a thesis on 'Food for Bullheads' I wrote in pursuit of my master's degree in biology at the University of South Dakota. Before that, I never had paid particular attention to fish. Since then, I haven't had time for much else.

"Dr. Hildebrand was looking about for a suitable artist for the bureau about that time, and on the strength of my thesis, I was recommended. I got the job."

The Chamberlain, S. D., girl came on to Washington in 1927; was invested with the title of junior aquatic biologist, sent to Beaufort, N. C., where, for four years, she raised fish in Government laboratories, in connection with her work of drawing them from life, and was in the Capital for intervals between spending the past two summers at the Government station at Woods Hole, Mass., where, among other things, she studied the difference in results on fish flesh when frozen quickly and frozen slowly. Incidentally, she says the best results are obtained when fish flesh is frozen quickly at low temperature.

Too Valuable to Lose.

Now, owing to what one Bureau of Fisheries official described as "this economy stuff," Miss Cable has been divorced from her title and her permanent post, although—because of her ability and her inestimable value to scientists with the bureau—she is being held through temporary appointments.

Hear what this official, who preferred to remain anonymous, said of Miss Cable:

"She's the best and the fastest artist the bureau has ever had. And the funny part of it is, she doesn't claim to be an artist. Never studied it, so far as we know. She wants to be a scientist, a biologist. Our scientists swear by her drawings; they'll tell you she's good; she won't. Let me tell you there's a big difference between making a drawing of a fish that looks like a fish, and a drawing that tells a scientist just what family that fish belongs to, and how old he is. It's the latter kind of drawing Miss Cable does.

"She's just a born artist. And her scientific training has taught her what to watch out for when drawing a fish. She realizes, as do few artists, the value of every little point."

PILLAR TO POST

JUDGE Ignacio Guitierrez-Zanora, who holds the world's record in the number of divorces granted, when asked by William Atherton Du Puy, the Washington writer, what was the chief cause of divorce, answered:

"Somebody sitting on the doorstep."

Mr. Du Puy visited all the principal Mexican divorce mills, at Nuevo Larredo, Juarez and El Paso. In these places far more Americans have been divorced than in Reno, and Judge Guitierrez-Zanora called Mr. Du Puy's attention to a record day when he untied 60 couples. (Let it be added hastily that Mr. Du Puy is a happily married man and his interest in Mexican divorce is purely professional).

* * * *

Since his divorce articles have been published he has been deluged with letters from people who want more detailed information about getting divorces in Mexico by mail, and pleading for the names of the Mexican lawyers dealing in divorce. All that seems to be necessary is for both parties to send powers of attorney to two Mexican lawyers who get together and arrange by mutual agreement for the divorce. Collusion is the best possible excuse for divorce in Mexico. And Mexican divorces are just as valid as Reno divorces in many States!

* * * *

One of the lawyers who is making a fortune in the divorce business has his office in a building in El Paso which bears a placard reading:

"Ponce de Leon built a house on this spot."

Traded Wives Fall Out.

Mr. Du Puy found in this lawyer's office on the morning of his visit four modern pilgrims in search of renewed youth and romance. Of the two couples, none appeared to be under 50. They sat nervously on the edge of their chairs, and when the door leading to the lawyer's private office opened, all four made a break to get there first. Afterward the lawyer told Mr. Du Puy all that transpired.

* * * *

They could not wait to be divorced by mail, and so the two couples had flown by plane down from Newark, N. J., where they had been friends and neighbors for many years.

"It is now 9:15," said the lawyer, looking at his watch. "We should be able to get the divorces for you by 11:15." That suited them fine, but then they wanted to know how soon they could be remarried.

"Would 3:15 be alright?" inquired this fast-working lawyer.

* * * *

The whole business was gone through on schedule and at 3 a double wedding was staged, with the participants being the same four middle-aged people, who had been divorced before noon, an out and out "swap." The lawyer was invited to the dinner to celebrate the occasion. Wine was served and one of the brides became demonstrative. The other swapped wife, eyeing her friend caressing her ex-mate, became stupendously jealous and caused such an uproar that the whole wedding party was thrown out of the place.

Women Lose As Chemists

Few Opportunities Open as Men Dominate Profession.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 29.—Women are receiving a setback in one professional field—that of chemistry.

This has been revealed in a survey made recently by Prof. Helen L. Wikoff, of Ohio University. Her report will be presented to the women's division of the American Chemical Society, which meets in Cleveland September 10.

"Unless a woman student has shown more than the average ability, it is foolish to encourage her to make chemistry her life work," says Prof. Wikoff in her report.

Men Preferred.

She quotes one employer as saying he would rather employ a second-rate man than a first-rate woman.

"Since sex is often the decisive factor in the selection of a chemist," she says, "the attention of women chemists should first be directed to the types of positions to which men are less suited or attracted.

"Home economics with its various ramifications, such as nutrition, dietetics, food chemistry and the chemistry of textiles and dyes, is a sphere which is diminated by women."

Opportunity in Research.

She cites library research as "another type of work to which men are not attracted."

Women are welcomed into this field and are usually very enthusiastic about their work," she says. "In fact, this is the only capacity in which women chemists are employed by many of the larger industrial concerns."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: On coming to this city some months ago, I found myself, as a result of several nice letters of introduction, received into a delightful group of young people. I am 24, have a good background, socially and culturally, and had always been popular in my home city.

Naturally, I wanted to make and hold friends here. I was very popular here at first; and, in order to keep myself so, I was especially nice to everyone, women as well as men. I kept out of gossip and quarrels, was careful not to arouse jealousy of other girls; and always courteous and friendly to the men. It worked very well for a while. The girls were extremely cordial; the men very attentive.

But gradually their warmth and interest seems to be cooling. I find myself included less and less in the intimate inner circle of the girls who make up this particular crowd, and invitations from men are now so infrequent that sometimes a fortnight goes by without my having a date. How do you account for this? What is there I have failed to do? What should I do to recapture my waning popularity?

ANEMONE.

Be Less Eager.

DEAR ANEMONE: Think back. Isn't there a possibility you were almost too cloyingly sweet and Pollyannaish; too much of a "yes woman;" not sufficiently true to your own self, with your own interestingly individual likes and dislikes, opinions and philosophies, in your address to this group you quite pardonably wished to conquer?

A good-looking young woman, accomplished in the social graces, sponsored by gilt-edged introductions, inevitably creates a pronounced ripple of interest among men and women alike, as a newcomer to a group. Men take to a personable new feminine face and personality, and women, as a rule, follow—to appraise her potentialities as friend or rival.

While the novelty of her strangeness lasts, she has things pretty much in her favor. Then the ebb-tide sets in and interest turns to new faces, new enterprises, unless she has established herself in the hearts and minds of at least a few—either men or women—as a genuine personality, with some real individuality.

This, perhaps, you failed to do—in your anxiety to be all things to every person in the group. However, it's never too late to do better. I suggest you relax your efforts to be 100 per cent popular, and be content with simply being yourself.

In future meetings with members of this group, dare to express what you really think and feel, providing you do it with graciousness, tact and charm. Seek out those you really like, and place a premium on their good will. Don't bother about the others. Assert yourself as a real, and average, human being.

Nearly everyone prefers the companionship of a warm-hearted unself-conscious girl, pleasantly possessed of the average faults and failings, to that of a conscious paragon. Perhaps the very perfection of your courtesy and consideration has worked against you.

M. H.

Meditation Shoppe Urged For Relaxation-Seekers

By Malvina Lindsay.

RELAXING now tops the list of fashionable pursuits. Thanks to Drs. Pitkin and Jacobson, it has put an arresting hand on the up-and-doers. But that will not be for long. Its followers soon will be going back to Mah Jong.

Indeed, they could scarcely do otherwise. For how, pray, can one relax when the whole feminine world is in conspiracy against it?

* * * *

Says an eminent etiquette authority: "To give a successful tea it is always best to have one less chair than guests." That exemplifies the feminine attitude toward social life. The more discomfort, the more hubbub the better. Certainly if there is any one thing the modern tea needs it is not less chairs, but more—and all of them rockers. But such a special millennium is too much to hope for.

* * * *

Perhaps, though, the place of the relaxer is in the home. But, alas, the home is no longer a buttressed castle. It is a county fair or a union station.

WELL, then, let the relaxer go to church, temple of meditation, where he may perhaps merge into the cosmos and repossess his soul. But here, also too often are hubbub and handshaking and jumping up and down and being appointed on committees.

There remains Nature. Under the trees of the park—but unfortunately a picnic party is ten feet away. Beside the lulling waves of the ocean—but here also are bathing beauties and hot-dog stands.

* * * *

Moreover, at the time the human clock most needs rewinding, the trees and the ocean are too far distant. What the harassed worker needs is a quiet haven where he can stop for a moment and draw a black curtain on a jangling world.

* * * *

More than half a century ago a feminine leader, Jane Croly, known as Jennie June, first newspaper woman of this country, recognized such a need even in the more tranquil world in which she lived. She advocated a downtown temple of rest and worship continuously open to all those who sought quietude and the soothing charms of music. Women of the Nation carried out many of Mrs. Croly's ideas, but they failed to act on this. And perhaps now a commercial world would prefer to buy and sell its peace.

IF SO here is a field for feminine initiative. Women have established beauty parlors, gift stores, tea rooms on every corner. Why not a meditation shoppe? Why not a place where one can buy a couch, darkness and quiet for 15 minutes the same as one buys shampoos, sandwiches or book ends?

* * * *

However, the meditation shoppe no more than the temple of peace will ever come to pass. For despite the urging of scientists and seers, Western people are afraid to relax or to meditate. The first they associate with laziness, the second with ghosts. They are afraid if they close their eyes in the dark, an Indian guide will appear with a message from Uncle Ezekiel.

* * * *

After all, getting away from the crowd may be like the abatement of noise. "Why," asks an Englishman, "do Americans constantly talk about doing away with noise when they really have such a good time making it?"

Why have enough chairs for the tea guests? They can probably talk louder standing.

Lawyer Sees Woman Future U. S. President

A WOMAN will be President within this generation, Miss Lillian Rock, secretary of the National Association of Women Lawyers, said in Chicago recently.

But so far her words have inspired no woman to announce her intention of becoming the first President.

"It is not improbable," said Mrs. James Wolfe, Democratic National committeewoman, when questioned on the subject. "But at present we have no candidates."

Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, Republican National committeewoman, does not think a President should be elected because of his manhood or her womanhood.

"The choice should not be based on the sex of the candidate," she says. "A President should be elected because of individual ability and equipment. I do not think women should be discriminated against if they have the necessary qualifications."

In her address to members of the National Association of Women Lawyers at their annual convention in Chicago, Miss Rock said:

"I expect that within my own time some brilliant woman will make her way from the ballot box to the Presidency. What is to prevent woman from going forth to occupy this exalted post? Indeed, I will be sadly disappointed if, within the next decade, a woman is not made at least Vice President."

College Year Cost Starts at $1,000

Pennsylvania U. Official Sets Minimum.

Philadelphia, Aug. 29 (Spl.). One thousand dollars as a starter for a college year is set as the lowest sum a student should have by George A. Brakeley, administrative vice president of the University of Pennsylvania.

"An entering freshman should have resources of at least $1,000 to insure completion of the first year without undue hardship," he said.

Mr. Brakeley pointed out all universities had suffered cuts in returns from endowments and that economies in part time help funds had been necessary.

Use of Rouge May Tarnish Pale Beauty

Titians and Dark-Eyed Brunettes Can Omit Rosy Cheeks.

By Frances Mangum.

ROSY cheeks have so long been immortalized by poets that the world has come to believe they're signs of beauty. But the world frequently applauds the striking appearance of the woman who dares to contrast a natural white complexion with black hair and red lips.

The world is coming to realize there are two types who do not need rouge, nay, are better off without it.

One is represented by the titian, the woman with burnished gold or copper-colored hair, and either brown, blue, or green eyes. The other is the brunette with black hair, dark eyes, and alabaster skin.

When to Disdain Roses.

Both of these more fully accentuate their coloring and typify a rare beauty if they disdain planting roses on their cheeks. If nature places them there the song has a different tune, for nature, unlike amateur artists whose tools are the rouge box and the lipstick, seldom errs in her color schemes.

But the titian cheapens her already vivid coloring by rouging her cheeks. If her skin is dark—and this is seldom the case—she may by experiment find that a slight, light touch of rouge becomes her best.

If her skin is delicately pale, she can accentuate her coloring by contrast, using a light creamy powder, a deep orange lipstick, and eyeshadow to match her eyes. Her next step is to choose colors and in this let her be guided by her eyes.

Lip Rouge Serves Alone.

The beauty of black hair and smooth white skin may be fully and strikingly brought out if the lips alone are rouged. They should be a startling scarlet, slightly darker for daytime wear than evening. Powder for this type should be carefully chosen to harmonize with the magnolia leaf tone of the skin.

Eye shadow here, too, plays an important part. One of a silvery blue gives a flattering transparency to the lids. Touching the eyelashes lightly with mascara brings out the deep brown or black of the eyes.

W. C. T. U. Young People Meet.

Waynesboro, Pa., Aug. 29 (Spl.). "Building for a Greater Young People's Branch" was the theme of the one-day institute held today by the Franklin County Young People's Branch of the W. C. T. U. here. The Rev. Jacob J. M. Strite, State vice president of the Y. P. B., was in charge.

1. A nuncupative (NUNG-kupay-tive or nung-KEW-pa-tive) will is a verbal one.
2. On either. It is o-AY-sis or O-a-sis.
3. Yes. According to Stanley, the authority on words, "An egotist conceives of himself as being superior to others. An egoist is so interested in himself he doesn't think of others in any connection."
4. Tay-o-FEEL go-TYAY.
5. GAV-el.

"Joan of Arc" Gift Rejected

Impersonation in Bathing Suit Causes Refusal of Dance Fund.

AN IMPERSONATOR of Joan of Arc dressed in a suit of armor marched across the stage at the Beau Arts Ball, held at the Atlantic Beach Club, Long Island, recently, and one of the results of her appearance was the refusal of Sister Mary Bertrand, superintendent of St. Joseph's Hospital at Far Rockaway, to accept a fourth of the proceeds of the ball.

Officials of the beach club, including the secretary, who wrote the frowned-on skit, were humbly apologetic yesterday.

The idea, according to the author, was to present famous women as they would look in modern bathing suits, among them Cleopatra, Pocahontas and Mae West. The presentation of Joan of Arc, he insisted, was "very serious."

"Mme. Recamier" Exalts Herriot

Royal Academy May Take Him as Member.

Mme. Recamier, always an influential lady, is exerting her influence again, this time in the direction of projecting Edouard Herriot, perennial mayor of Lyons and thrice premier, into the Royal Academy.

M. Herriot's "Madame Recamier et Ses Amies" has turned out to be a best seller and the mayor is reported as paying the usual round of visits to academicians preparatory to announcing himself as a candidate for admittance into the ranks of the "Forty Immortals."

In book form Madame Recamier is being distributed liberally about France. Review copies are always sent to leading literary critics. But M. Herriot is a politician, too, which swells the free list to the point where it is said to be breaking all records.

Religious Bodies' Growth Faster Than Population's

In a study including Jews and Christians it was found that religious bodies kept ahead of population increases in enrollment of members during the last century. From 1830 to 1930 the percentage of growth of all religious bodies in the United States was 416 per cent while the population growth was 255 per cent, the survey showed.

The study was made under the auspices of the recently formed National Committee for Religion and Welfare Recovery.

Child's Home Fixes Films' Moral Effect

BLAME HEAPED on movies for lowering moral standards of youth may, in part, properly be directed toward parents and home life, suggests Dr. John Dewey, dean of American educators, writing in the current Rotarian Magazine. "While recent investigations, conducted with scientific care, have shown that many boys and girls have been stimulated in unwholesome ways by the movies," he points out that "the influence of movies upon children is fixed by the general tone and level of the child's surroundings."

"A boy or girl from a cramped environment that provides few outlets," he continues, "reacts very diffrently from one in which the movie is not the main vent for romance, and for acquaintance with conditions very different from those that habitually surround him.

"The luxury of scenes depicted on the screen, the display of adventure and easy sex relations, inoculate a boy or girl living in narrow surroundings with all sorts of new ideas and desires. Their ambitions are directed into channels that contrast vividly with actual conditions of life.

"The things that a boy or a girl from a well-to-do and cultivated home would discount or take simply as a part of the show are for other children ideals to be realized—and without special regard for the means of their attainment.

Grand Larceny Charge Results From Gypsy Magic Rites.

Sixty-seven indictments were returned by the District grand jury yesterday. The charges ran from joy-riding to robbery and assault with intent to kill.

The alleged gypsy magic of Julia Smith, which after being followed by Mrs. Mary E. Tyler, of New York, through a maze of rituals, cost her approximately $2,094, formed the basis of an indictment that charged the Smith woman with grand larceny.

Mrs. Tyler, the grand jurors were told, was informed by the woman that she would shortly obtain sums of money owed her if she followed a prescribed formula. The latter consisted of sleeping on a Bible with a glass of water under her bed, crushing an egg that had been previously wrapped in a handerchief, clipping the corners from paper money and other eerie gestures.

Mrs. Tyler, however, not only did not recover her bills, but lost some $2,000 which she had pinned to her clothing. Paper the size of the currency has mysteriously supplanted the real article.

Harry F. Stinson Indicted.

Another indictment was that in which Harry F. Stinson, 23, is said to have hired a taxicab, telling the driver that he was an officer. During the course of a ride, the jury charged, he picked up a 13-year-old girl at Ninth street and New York avenue, and took her to his room.

Police arrested Stinson at his home August 17. In the room with him was his wife, while the girl was in another room.

Mrs. Dorothy V. Mintzell was charged with bigamy because she allegedly went through a marriage ceremony with Loomis P. Griffith, 1129 New Hampshire avenue northwest, while she was still the wife of John T. Mintzell, who she married in 1925 and by whom she had two children.

Witnesses said the woman was living at Herndon, Va., with her first husband when she was arrested.

Charged With Assault.

A charge of assault with a dangerous weapon was placed against John Gaskins, alias Doc Davis, 32, because of the shooting of Frank O'Brien, 1017 Seventh street northwest, in a lunchroom at Ninth and K streets northwest, July 24. Mona Hayes, 35, of 1420 R street northwest, was acquitted of a charge of being an accessory after the shooting, though police said they traced Gaskins to the R street apartment, where Miss Hayes refused them admittance while Gaskins went through the rear exit.

Evangeline C. Hill, colored, 27, was indicted for murder because of the shooting of Nathaniel H. Galloway, also colored, in the rear yard of an upper Eighth street home last month. A dispute over a craps game led to the shooting.

Dr. James W. Hart was exonerated of a charge of having performed an illegal operation on a 21-year-old girl who subsequently died. The physician denied the charge. He said the girl visited him, but he refused to treat her.

The grand jury also took a hand in the one-man campaign launched by William D. Rollins, colored, to compel obedience to a request for a cigarette, or a dime. Rollins, the jury said, spoke about those matters to Wilson Donaldson, 1419 R street northwest, at Fourteenth and U streets northwest, and when he was met by a double negative he retaliated by striking and choking Donaldson. He was charged with assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to commit robbery.

Others Indicted.

Others indicted were:

Raise in Pay For Probation Staff Sought

Judge Bentley Seeking Professional Status for Officers.

Salaries of Juvenile Court probation officers will be jumped $200 a year to a $2,000 basis under the court reorganization plan, Judge Fay L. Bentley said yesterday.

Judge Bentley hopes to secure a Civil Service classification of "P-1" for her probation officers. This is a professional rating which carries $2,000 as the basic pay, with automatic raises to $2,500. None of the probation officers has, in the past, been classified as professional, their status having been that of non-professional workers.

Fifteen probation officers now employed by the court, will be required to take a Civil Service competitive examination as soon as the commission approves the proposed reorganization and prepares the test. Under the present plan that requires college degrees in social service or economic work, many of the employes will be prevented from taking the examination.

Judge Bentley explained that there were a number of college graduates now on her staff, but she said that their collegiate work was not of the type that would best suit juvenile court work.

Several minor changes in personnel have been made. Mrs. Hector G. Spaulding, wife of Prof. Spaulding, of the George Washington University, has been appointed clerk of the court.

Innocent Convict Is Cleared When 'Double' Admits Crime

Five Months in Prison Served in Mistaken Identity Case.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 29 (AP).—To the guards in Stateville Penitentiary prisoner No. 6285 was just another who cried about getting a "bum rap."

He claimed he was innocent; but so have many others. It wasn't likely, they agreed, that an innocent man would get arrested by mistake, tried by mistake, identified by mistake and convicted.

That's the way things stood this morning when the prisoner, James A. Long, 22, of Chicago, awoke at the gong and pulled on his clothes for another prison day. He had seen five months of them, and since his term was "one to life," he had years of them ahead.

Then an assistant warden came over with word which made No. 6285 sit suddenly on his cot.

"Your double," he said, "has been arrested in Chicago and has confessed the stickups you're in for."

Tonight Chicago authorities set to work to release Long—imprisoned for five months by the strange resemblance he bears to Edwin Brethauer, 27, the "double" who confessed.

The story of injured innonence was pieced together. It was this:

Long, out walking his dog, met George Wilch, 24, and they drank beer in a tavern. Wilch had been in some holdups with Brethauer, and police trailed him by auto license numbers. Both Wilch and Long were arrested as they left the tavern.

Wilch said Long was innocent, but claimed he was, too. At a show-up, the holdup victims identified Wilch easily, and Long just as easily. Long wept in court, but a jury convicted him with Wilch.

"I knew it would happen some day," Long said today, while his attorneys hurried to ask a pardon for him, "but I had almost given up hope."

Only a pardon can free him, since he was tried and convicted, even though he was the wrong man.

Accidents Drop With Repeal

Fear of Highway Danger Increase Refuted, Says ABC Chief.

Traffic accidents have fallen off in the District since the return of liquor, George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, told the Washington Lions Club yesterday.

"This should not be construed as meaning that a man can handle an automobile more carefully when under the influence of liquor,' Offutt declared, "but does tend to refute the prediction and fear of many that the highways would become more dangerous with the end of prohibition."

Citing economic advantages of legalized liquor, the speaker said beverage taxes collected up to July 1 totaled $893,668; the pay roll of persons engaged in selling would be over $3,000,000 this year, and construction industries and equipment concerns have benefited considerably.

The ABC head said that the "unseen bar" should be abolished here, pointing out it makes for insanitary conditions.

Arthur Clarendon Smith presided at the meeting, which was held in the Mayflower Hotel. It was announced that Charles Hillegeist will have charge of the September programs.

"Listen, Stan... while I explain what Old Gold's throat-ease means" says Ollie Hardy to Stan Laurel

"Now, you take this cigarette, see?"

"Who—me?"

"Certainly—you! Now, that's an Old Gold cigarette—understand?"

"Uh huh."

"Be quiet and listen, will you? Now, Old Golds are made from pure tobacco, see? So naturally they not only taste better but they keep the throat free from irritation. Throat-ease is important to anybody!—especially to a celebrated screen artist such as . . . er . . ."

"Who—me?"

"Certainly not! But you will be a happier smoker when your throat gets the thrill of 'smooth as satin' Old Golds."

Mr. Hardy might have put it this way, Mr. Laurel:—No better tobacco grows than is used in Old Gold. And it's pure. (No artificial flavoring.) That's why Old Golds are easy on THROAT and NERVES.

Nats Bow to Browns, 5-4, as Coffman Checks Ninth-Inning Rally

District Golf Field Led by Peacock

Pitt, Dettweiler, Stewart and Yoder Shot Back; Match Play Today.

By Dave Herman.

A POOR start often presages a good finish, and such was true in the case of Roger Peacock, young Indian Spring golf star, who made a gallant comeback to win the medal in the 18-hole qualifying round of the District championship yesterday at Columbia Country Club.

While the defending titleholder, Dick Lunn, of Chevy Chase, was eliminated in a one-hole playoff for the 16th position, Peacock, 1932 champion, posted a 75, five over par, to pace a field of 40 golfers, only 16 of whom qualified for match play which begins this morning.

After starting shakily with 5—6—5 and being 5 over par for the first five holes, young Peacock cut loose with one of his characteristic stretch finishes, shooting the remaining 13 holes in even par.

Although the scoring as a whole was nothing to brag about, Peacock's 39—36—75 was good enough to beat out his four closest pursuers by a stroke. Close on his heels with 76 each, came Harry Pitt, the Manor Moose, a former District titleholder; Billy Dettweiler, 16-year-old Congressional sensation; Levi Yoder, Indian Spring's rising star, and Luther Steward, jr., of Congressional.

Par Has Good Day.

Old Man Par apparently was in no mood to tamper with yesterday—handed the boys an artistic lacing, dealing knockout blows on hole after hole, particularly the thirteenth and seventeenth. The scoring was so high that 32 played off. Tied at these figures were Lunn, Dr. Howard Smith, of Indian Spring, and 15-year-old Billy Shea, of Congressional. It only required one hole to determine the sixteenth qualifier, and Master Shea was the winner. He celebrates his sixteenth birthday today, and his birthday present consists of a qualifying place. The curly-haired kid won the place by reason of playing a spetacular 5-iron shot from the bank of the fifteenth green, getting his par 4. Smith took a 6 and and Lunn picker up after playing his fifth shot.

Lunn's failure to qualify was the day's only real upset. Jimmy Drain, of Washington Golf and Country Club, and M. Parker Nolan, the Indian Spring Adonis, got in with 77's. Tied with 78's were Gene Vinson, hot favorite from Manor; Louis Fuchs and Willis Hurd, of Indian Spring; Maury Nee, of Columbia, and Hickman Greene, of Argyle.

John Shorey, of Kenwood, despite a poor 41 on the back nine, qualified with 79. Frank Roesch, of Washington, former champion, slipped in with 81, and cotton-haired Lunn V. Steele, of Army and Navy, with 80.

Dettweiler Finishes Strong.

Dettweiler made a courageous comeback after going out in 41. He started rifling his pars and birdies, and stood on the seventeenth needing par in to win the medal. Unfortunately, he 3 putted and took a 6 to blast his chances. The only man to level par with a 35 for the first nine, Yoder, went to pieces on the stretch and finished with 41, a 6 on the eleventh inflicting the worst damage. Vinson, medalist in the sectional trials at Five Farms, was only 3 over par for the first nine. Trouble followed trouble and he finished with 40. His 5 on the short thirteenth and 6 on the fourteenth exploded his hopes for the prize.

Although 3-putting the home green, Peacock actually gained his margin of victory by sinking a curling 30-footer for a birdie 3 on the 270-yard seventeenth hole.

Match play, opening this morning at 10 o'clock and continuing this afternoon, finds Peacock opposing Steele in the first round.

Peacock's card:

Par out.....	4	4	4	3	5	4	4	3	4—35
Peacock out..	5	6	5	3	6	4	4	3	3—39
Par in.....	4	4	5	3	4	4	4	3	5—36—70

Hall Victor At Rye Over Stoefen

Coast Star First Seeded Player Beaten; All Sets Deuced.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—Lester Stoefen, the Los Angeles "giant" of the tennis courts, was knocked out of the Eastern Grass Court tournament in the third round as seven other seeded players advanced to the quarter-final round of men's singles play.

Stoefen, seeded behind Frank Shields, yielded to J. Gilbert Hall, the South Orange, N. J., veteran, in three stiff sets. The scores were. 7—5, 7—9, 8—6.

Led by Shields, who conquered Henry Prusoss, of Seattle, 6—4, 6—2, the other seven seeded stars advanced with the loss of only one set. George M. Lott, of Chicago, sixth on the list, barely escaped elimination at the hands of Eugene McCauliff, of Yonkers, N. Y., who yesterday defeated Roderich Menzel, of Czechoslovakia. After leading 5—1 in the final set, McCauliff was unable to hold his pace and Lott won, 5—7, 6—2, 9—7.

Parker Beats Wilde.

Frankie Parker, the Lawrenceville (N. J.) schoolboy, who is seeded third, eliminated the last "foreign" entry, F. H. D. Wilde, of England, 6—2, 6—2.

Completing the quarter-final brackets, Berkeley Bell, of New York; Cliff Sutter, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Jack Tidball, of Hollywood, Calif., and Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, won their third round matches in straight sets.

Baroness Maud Levi, of Minden, Nev., stroked her way into the semi-finals of the women's singles, a round ahead of the field, by defeating Florence Leboutillier, of Weetbury, Long Island, her doubles partner, 6—3, 6—4. Three English girls entered the quarter-final round. Betty Nuthall eliminated Carolin Roberts, of New Rochelle, N. Y., 8—6, 6—3; Katharine Stammers defeated May Hope Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., 6—0, 7—5, and Freda James overwhelmed Mrs. William V. Hester, of Bronxville, 6—1, 6—1.

Geneva, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—The appointment of E. B Wilson, of Columbus, Ohio, as head football coach was announced today by Francis L. Kraus, director of athletics at Hobart College.

Wilson has been director of athletics at Lake Forest Academy at Lake Forest, Ill., for the past four years.

$50,000 Pro Net Bid Refused by Perry

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP).—Frederick J. Perry, of England, the world's leading tennis player, today refused an offer of $50,000 from Bill O'Brien, sports promoter, to turn professional.

O'Brien met Perry as the latter left the court following a doubles match in the Eastern grass courts tennis championships at the Westchester Country Club and made the offer verbally.

O'Brien said Perry gave three reasons for his refusal: First, that he would have to pay nearly half of his earnings in taxes to the British government; second, that he would be ostracized at all the British clubs if he turned professional; third, that he was marrying Mary Lawson, English stage star, soon and would not want to do anything to upset that plan now.

There have been rumors of other offers to Perry, but so far as known this is the first time anyone has definitely talked terms with him.

Perry holds three of the four major tennis titles of the world—the Australian, United States and Wimbledon crowns. He starts defense of his American title at Forest Hills Saturday.

Hut Is Victor In Drive at Marlboro

4 Favorites Winners on Nearby Program; Holland Scores.

By Walter Haight.

HUT, a 4-year-old filly, which is short on name and long on courage, ran a remarkable race yesterday to win the feature event of the second day's racing at nearby Marlboro. Under a perfect ride by the veteran Jockey Quattlebaum, Hut came with a rush in the stretch that caught Rustic Cuba by a nose at the wire as a crowd of 4,000, betting on her and against her, had to admit that they had seen a race horse and a horse race. Sambo G. managed to fill out the money bracket, but he had no part in the do-or-die fight for the major end of the purse.

The feature winner paid $9.50 in the mutuel machines on a day when short prices were the rule. In fact, four favorites stepped home, two of them odds-on choices. Three close finishes marked the program, which had the fans on their feet throughout the afternoon.

Winner Off Last.

To get back to the feature, it was a case of the last shall be first and the first shall be last. Wandering Jim jumped into the lead as the field went away with Hut a conspicuous last. Jockey Quattlebaum evidently knew his horse, for he seemed content to hold that position during the first turn of the course. Benish Way had supplanted Wandering Jim as the pace-setter, and when Rustic Cuba moved up boldly at the far turn it looked as if the race, for betting purposes, was over.

At this stage Quattlebaum gave Hut his head, and she fairly bounded through her field. Rustic Cuba still held what appeared to be a winning lead at the sixteenth pole, but Hut literally ate up the ground between them, and, with Quattlebaum riding like a demon, stuck her nose at the imaginary wire in the nick of time.

Uncle Billy Scores.

Uncle Billy, backed into favoritism, made a show of his field in the opener over the short sprint course, winning by seven lengths from Kharaon and by ten from Madam Fox. Jockey Davis had the mount and made every post a winning one. Uncle Billy was on top by a city block and won eased up despite the fact that he went to the outside fence at the last turn. He paid $3.50.

Jockey Davis, Trainer C. M. Feltner and the favorite players made it two in a row in the second race when Easter Herald, much the best, circled his field and came on to outlast the closing rush of Lampoon. Grace Bunting was third in the field of seven. Easter Herald rewarded with a $4.70 pay-off.

The third straight public choice to score was Mazyniata, owned and operated by A. H. Utterback. Small Change, the pace-setter, was second and Clifton's Agnes was third. Jockey Edwards followed the pace to the far turn and went to the front on the stretch wing to win easily. The winner was a $3.70 proposition.

Holland broke the spell of favorites by taking the fourth race after holding the lead for the 6½ furlongs. Kingbird, the heavily-played favorite, moved up in the stretch but too late to worry the winner. Braw Scot was third in the field of eight. Holland paid off at the rate of $7.40.

Despite the fact that Arab stumbled at the break in the sixth race, he recovered in time to run a splendid race and defeat Merry Miss by two lengths. McDonald H, in front early, was third.

The seventh race found Golden Play winning by half a length from Miss Catalan, which held the same advantage over Do Tell.

Martinsville Horse Show Set Sept. 29

Martinsville, Va., Aug. 29 (Spl.). The Martinsville Horse Show Association definitely determined today to hold its first event on September 29. John R. Smith has been elected president of the organization and a number of committees named to arrange for the event. Dr. G. L. Houchins has been named manager of the show.

Hut Scores in Driving Finish of Marlboro Feature

Hut (No. 2) with Jockey Quattlebaum up, leads Rustic Cuba (on inside) and Sambo G. to the wire in the Mayor Howard Jackson Purse at Upper Marlboro yesterday. Hut trailed the field until the last turn into the stretch.

Rowe Routed In Bid for Record

score in the fifth. The next one came in the fifth, to clear the bases, after Marcum had singled, Cramer doubled and Warstler walked. Higgins' homer accounted for two more tallies in this frame. Marcum drove in another run in the sixth and Rowe finally was removed in the midst of another five-run bombardment in the eighth.

Rowe's defeat—due, he said afterward, simply to the fact he "didn't have it"—was his first since he dropped a decision to the White Sox on June 10. In running up his streak of 16 triumphs, he had whipped every other club in the league, including the Yankees four times.

Today's defeat was his fifth of the season as compared with a total of 20 victories. Besides leaving him in a tie with Johnson, Wood and Grove for the American League record, the setback spoiled his chance to overtake the major league mark of 19, jointly held by Tim Keefe and Rube Marquard.

Tigers Hit Hard in First.

The Tigers had plenty of batting ammunition in the first game, pounding "Sugar" Cain, Roy Mahaffey and Joe Cascarella for 20 hits, including homers by Marvin Owen and Frank Doljack. Besides four hits for Charley Gehringer, Firpo Marberry received credit for the victory, clinched with a six-run drive in the eighth, after Elden Auker had been driven from the box by the A's.

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—A London sportsman said today Jack Dempsey had cabled him he would like to get Jack Peterson, British heavyweight champion, under his management.

Virginia Avenue Wins In Playground Meet

SCORING heavily in each class in a contest which was not decided until the result of the last event was disclosed, the lads from Virginia Avenue Playground yesterday won the city championship of the Municipal Department of Playgrounds, breaking the five-year tenure of Rosedale. The meet was held in Central Stadium, under perfect weather conditions and before a large crowd.

Led by the band of the National Training School for Boys, under the leadership of Bandmaster John D. D'Andelet, the athletes and their directors, numbering more than 2,000, paraded around the track, massing thereafter in front of the reviewing stand, where the "playground oath" was taken on behalf of the entire group by Jack Kent.

Earl Widmyer Wins.

The unlimited unrestricted class events were thrilling in the extreme. Earl Widmyer, Maryland's star, won the 100-meter dash in 12 seconds, but a surprise as rung up in the mile, when Cleveland, of Johnson, beat the more-fancied Shorb, of Garfield, in a close finish after a rather slow race, the winner's time being 5 minutes 40 seconds.

Severe Beating Absorbed by Canzoneri

Dublinsky Hands Former Lightweight King His Worst Defeat.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 29 (AP). Tony Canzoneri's hopes at getting a chance to reclaim the lightweight boxing title he lost to Barney Ross a year ago, were given a decided setback tonight when he received a severe beating from the hands of young Harry Dublinsky, of Chicago, in a 10-round bout at Ebbets Field.

Beaten and battered from corner to corner for the last five rounds, Canzoneri received one of his worst whippings since he left his job of shining shoes in New Orleans to climb to fistic heights in two divisions. At the end of the fight he was bleeding from cuts above his right eye and mouth and was a mighty tired, but game little warrior.

The victory was sweet for Dublinsky, who was decisioned by Canzoneri several years ago. Tonight for four rounds it appeared as if Canzoneri would repeat that triumph and go on to challenge Champion Ross.

Lead Is Lost In Fifth by Whitehill

Break 4-4 Tie; Win in Eighth on Strange's Infield Hit.

Stone Triples in Vain in 9th With One Out but Is Left Stranded.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

C. C. GRIFFITH, Inc., the plumbing firm that is plumbing the depths of the American League, reached the subterranean level of sixth place yesterday, and it is now only a matter of time before the boys strike bottom. The Griffs eased out of fifth place by the simple expedient of losing again to St. Louis, this time by a 5-to-4 score.

The irony of it all is that Johnny Stone, representing the tying run, was left stranded on third in the ninth inning as the two men following him went out in order. But it took a great catch of Dave Harris' liner by Strange, at shortstop, to keep Stone safely anchored at the far corner.

The lady who took advantage of the final ladies' day of the season, saw Dick Coffman stop his former teammates with six paltry hits as the Browns won their fourth victory of their last series this season in Washington. Coffman was in little danger of the Nats' not-so-savage attack excepting the fifth, when the home team took two hits, a walk and an error and molded them into three runs, assuming a temporary 4-to-2 advantage.

St. Louis tied it up at 4-all in the sixth and sho ed over the winning run in the eighth.

Whitehill Fails.

To Earl Whitehill was entrusted the task of keeping Washington a peg above the Brownies as the Nats prepared for their final Western invasion of the season, and the Earl proved unequal to the task. His Washington's first run materialofferings were rapped to outlaying sectors of the park for 13 hits in eight innings and Kid McColl was called in at the start of the ninth to finish up.

ized after a bit of wierd baseball. Susko walked and went to second on Johnny Kerr's sacrifice. Whitehill was safe when Burns dropped Strange's bad throw, Susko holding second. Bluege popped to Strange. Pete scored when Coffman dropped Burns' toss on Stone's roller down the first base line.

St. Louis retaliated in the fifth with two runs on consecutive singles by Melillo, Grube, Strange and Coffman. The Browns missed another one as Strange was flagged down at third on a rely from Schulte to Whitehill to Bluege.

Singles by Burns and Campbell, with Pepper's double tucked in between, gave St. Louis two more runs in the sixth, and the game-winning score came in the eighth as Campbell, Grube and Strange rapped out some more singles. Whitehill also was in trouble in the seventh, when the bases became clogged with

Fake Is Third In $2,500 Feature

Fort Springs in Front Entering Stretch; Entry Is Choice.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 29 (AP).—Hal Price Headley's entry of Fort Springs and Fraidy Cat monopolized the honors in the $2,500 Watch Hill claiming stakes at Narragansett today, finishing one-two in the 6-furlong sprint for 2-year-olds.

Fort Springs, with Earl Steffen in the saddle, came from the off pace to take command at the head of the stretch and finish 1½ lengths in front of his stablemate, which was making her first start since the Arlington Park meeting. Fake, a consistent filly from the Araho Stable, was third, a length back.

The Headley entry was made the odds-on favorite at 70 cents on the dollar and did not cause backers much worry although Fake cut out the pace for the first half-mile. Earl Porter rated Fraidy Cat in second place with Fort Springs close behind. Fraidy Cat dropped back to third at the top of the stretch, but closed strong.

The victory, achieved in 1:12 2-5, was worth $2,265 to the Kentucky sportsman.

Bird Flower Saratoga Victor.

Cards Top Dodgers, 4-1, To Take Final of Series

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—Behind the five-hit pitching of Bill Walker, the St. Louis Cardinals today defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers, 4 to 1, in the rubber contest of a five-game series. Walker was effective in the pinches to nullify six bases on balls he issued.

Delancey's double, the second hit off Johnny Babich, the Dodgers' moundsman, and Walker's single gave the Cardinals a run in the fifth, and when the Dodgers tied the score in the sixth on doubles by Frey and Koenecke, the Cardinals regained the lead in their half on Rothrock's single, a pass to Frisch, and Medwick's double.

Rothrock walked in the seventh, took third on Frisch's single and scored when Jordan fumbled Taylor's throw to the infield. The flock scored another run in the eighth on a double steal.

First race—Disruption closed like the wind here opening day and meets about the same brand of opposition today. Eddie Smith will do the riding, and I expect this combination to bring us a win mutuel. Foxtee ran a nice race Tuesday and will figure in this running. Barn Stormer may awake.

Second race—Shenvalee goes slumming in this sprint, and I see no reason why she should not score. Hasty Queen and Roy Boy, an entry, seem to have a lock on the place award. Baby Rox will be close at the finish.

Third race—Swinlane was out in front winging in his last outing, his first of the Maryland season. Today I look for Davis to keep him going long enough to hold Peacock Alley safe. In Clover could come to life and take it all.

Fourth race—Lady Buck was ridden all over the course here Tuesday. The boy made several moves. A shift in riders today will make a world of a difference. Happy Lope is a speedy front runner and looks like a place proposition. Clifton's Agnes ran a fair race yesterday.

Fifth race—Stylish Mack meets about the same brand of racers he defeated at Cumberland. Carries top weight, but I can't see the impost interfering. Dunora and Black Dreams for the rest. Maxyniata and Benish Way would be dangerous if moved off the also eligible list.

Seventh race—Politen appears to outclass the opposition in the final. I prefer him despite the fact that a little known apprentice is slated to ride. Should Postponement draw a different boy today, we may find him collecting the main award. Quigley couldn't hold him last out, and he was along the outside rail all the way. Post Brigade for the rest.

Wednesday, August 29, 1934.

WEATHER, CLEAR; TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:09. Off at 2:10. Winner, K. N. Gilpin's ch. g. (3), by Bubbling Over—Fairyland. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:25, 0:56, 1:10 3-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight

Two-dollar mutuels paid—UNCLE BILLY, $3.50, $2.80, $2.30; KHARAON, $3.40, $3.10; MADAM FOX, $5.00.

UNCLE BILLY outclassed his field, broke on top and, although running out at turns, won as rider pleased. KHARAON broke slowly, went up fast and was next best. MADAM FOX closed gamely from a slow start. MISS SYMPHONY quit after showing speed for a half-mile.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:40. Off at 2:44. Winner, Mrs. C. M. Feltner's b. g. (4), by Easter Bells—Annunciation. Trained by C. M. Feltner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 1-5, 0:36 4-5, 0:55, 1:09 4-5.

ARAB	115	4	7	5⁵	4¹	2²	1½	Edwards	$1.60

THE GEN	115	7	3	2½	6²	6³	7¹⁰	E. Smith	3.45
BLACK STRIPE	113	5	8	8	8	8	8	Davis	120.05

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ARAB, $5.20, $3.00, $2.60; MERRY MISS, $3.40, $2.60; McDONALD H., $3.10.

ARAB stumbled at break, recovered quickly and, snugly ridden for three-quarters of a mile, took to the outside to win handily. MERRY MISS, off slowly, worked her way up gradually and closed with a rush, but was not good enough. McDONALD H. set a fast pace for three furlongs, but was backing up fast in the stretch. CRASHER stopped badly after showing speed for a half-mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:25. Off at 5:26. Winner, W. S. Sweeney's ch. g. (6), by Golden Guinea—Precipitate. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:26, 0:53 1-5, 1:21, 1:49 4-5, 1:56 4-5.

Horses	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Jockeys	Straight
GOLDEN PLAY	118	8	5	4½	3½	3½	4²	1½	Passero	12.60

PRETTY BOY	114½	5	8	7¹	8	8	8	8	Willard	253.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN PLAY, $7.30, $4.20, $3.90; MISS CATALAN, $6.70, $3.90; DO TELL, $6.90.

GOLDEN PLAY, well up throughout, came to the outside in stretch to win going away. MISS CATALAN forced the early pace, and was no match for the winner. DO TELL broke slowly, worked her way up gradually, and closed with a rush. AELLA showed fine early speed, but quit after going five furlongs.

Seventh race—Politen appears to outclass the opposition in the final. I prefer him despite the fact that a little known apprentice is slated to ride. Should Postponement draw a different boy today, we may find him collecting the main award. Quigley couldn't hold him last out, and he was along the outside rail all the way. Post Brigade for the rest.

Rippy Plays 13 Holes in 2 Under Par to Eliminate Jamison in "Uptown" Golf

Semi-Finals Reached by Champion

McAleavy, Allen and Sharkey Also Win at Rock Creek Course.

CONTINUING his subpar shooting, Claude Rippy, defending champion, eliminated Earl (Lefty) Jamison, 6 and 5, yesterday, to swing into the semifinals up the "Uptown" golf tournament at Rock Creek's course.

Jamison was powerless before Rippy's deadly approaching and putting, and bowed to the transplanted Carolinian on the fourteenth green, at which stage the champion was 2 under par.

Rippy stroked the first nine in 33, 1 under par, to become 3 up on his southpaw rival. Jamison did a 36. He won the tenth with a par 4, and cracked out 3s on the next three holes. Three birdies fell from Rippy's blazing sticks. For the two mathes, he has played 31 holes in 2 under par.

McAleavy Beats Mertie.

Frank McAleavy defeated Bob Mertie, 4 and 3; Buddy Sharkey, 15-year-old star, put out Ben Kong, former Hawaiian champion, 3 and 2, and Herman Allen shaded Neill Turner, 2 and 1. Sharkey was 1 up on Kong at the turn.

In today's matches, Rippy will meet McAleavy and Allen will oppose Sharkey. The finals are scheduled for tomorrow.

Considerable interest has been evinced in the Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer tournament, which officially opens the fall activities for women golfers of the District. The event is scheduled September 5-6 at Chevy Chase, and a field of more than 100 women is expected to compete. Entries, accompanied by $1 entrance fee, will close Monday. They are being received by the tournament sponsor, Mrs. Keefer, and Mrs. Howard Simons, tournament chairman of the District Association.

Mrs. Alma Von Steiner has been the winner for the past two years, but will be hard pressed to repeat. The tournament is 36 holes medal play handicap, 18 each day.

Al Houghton, Kenwood pro, left yesterday for Hershey, Pa., to participate in the $2,500 Hershey championship. Cliff Spencer, Mel Shorey, and Al Treder are other Washington pros expected to play. The tournament will be played over the week-end, and a number of golfdom's most notable pros, including Leo Diegel, Denny Shute, Ed Dudley and Ky Laffoon, will participate.

Mrs. W. P. Sullivan, of Ashland, a., member of the U. S. G. A. committee in charge of arrangements for the international matches between the feminine teams of America and Great Britain, was in town yesterday looking over the Chevy Chase course, scene of the classic September 27 and 28.

Miss Davidson Leads as Queen

Firemen from over 100 cities are selecting their queens to take part in the National Queen Contest of the Firemen's Labor Day parade in Alexandria.

From among the field of queens will be selected a National queen, who will preside over the Monday night program. Miss Cassie Davidson is leading in the contest to select a District representative and is hard pressed for the lead by Margaret Watt, Helena Chresman and Louise May.

The one who is selected queen and the second choice will be given a trip to the Chicago World's Fair. After the Alexandria pageant the queen and her companion will entrain for the World's Fair, where they will be guests of the chief of the Chicago Fire Department.

Wilson, Monroe Top D. C. Shots at Dayton

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 29 (Spl.).—Their sights tuned up on 16-yard targets, Washington, D. C., and Delaware shooters are all ready for the two biggest prizes the trap-shooting world has to offer—the Preliminary Handicap on Thursday and the Grand American Handicap, the premier event of them all, on Friday.

District of Columbia shooters have not fared so well these first three days, when all gunners stand on the 16-yard mark, but the next two days the scatter-gun artists will toe lines ranging from 16 to 25 yards, and it is in those events that even the "dufferest" of the duffers has a chance.

Film Star Maxie Asks All-Star Girl

Blend of West, Colbert, Moore, Garbo Will Do.

Hollywood, Aug. 29 (AP).—Max Baer, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, arrived in the film capital today to make a motion picture, and immediately requested a leading woman who can make love like Mae West, has a figure like Claudette Colbert's, can sing like Grace Moore and can still keep like Garbo.

"You get a woman likt that and I'm satisfied," said Baer.

Dempsey Grooms Galento

Yachting Trials Will Resume Today

Rainbow and Yankee Lay Off for Day as Latter Is Repaired.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29 (AP).—Granted a layday by the New York Yacht Club, Yankee and Rainbow, rivals for the defense of the America's Cup, spent today preparing for resumption of the final trial series tomorrow.

Rainbow, skippered by Harold Vanderbilt, was out under sail for a tuning-up spin.

Yankee of Boston, leading aspirent for the honor, and sailed by the former Secretary of the Navy, Charles Francis Adams, had more important work for her crew. They completed the task of restoring a smashed jumper strut, part of the rigging which supports the top of Yankee's lofty mast. Instead of the single stay and strut, which broke in yesterday's race, when Yankee was leading Rainbow, the Boston boat is now equipped with a double rig, two struts and two stays, as she was in 1930.

The work was begun after the accident, and her crew worked in the rain and wind last night, far aloft in boatswain's chairs, repairing the damage. They had Yankee ready this morning to resume racing, through temporary repairs, but officials of the New York Yacht Club advised that the Boston boat remain at her mooring while the repairs were made permanent.

Endeavour Under Sail.

Endeavour, Tom Sopwith's British challenger, which will meet either Yankee or Rainbow next month in a sailing duel for the most-prized of all blue-water trophies, was out today, as usual. Sopwith is devoting much time and attention to preparing the big blue challenger and training his crew, many of whom are amateurs recruited after labor trouble with his paid hands.

Resumption of the trials will find each of the two surviving candidates with one victory over the other, but Yankee, through her many victories over Rainbow in the earlier series, retains her position as leader in the competition.

Chisox Finally Cop in Yank Stadium

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (AP).—With Ted Lyons shading the youthful Johnny Broaca in a pitchers' duel, the Chicago White Sox won their first game of the year in the stadium as they defeated New York, 3 to 1, in their final contest of the year at the Yankees' ball park. The Yanks won the ten previous games.

Both teams did all of their scoring in the first inning. The Sox mixed timely hits by Al Simmons and Manager Jimmy Dykes with Luke Appling's sacrifice and two bases on balls to score their runs.

Hitchcock Out Of Battle for Polo Berth

10-Goal Star Withdraws From Consideration on Physician's Advice.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (AP).—Tommy Hitchcock personally ended speculation as to his availability for the forthcoming East-West polo matches by withdrawing his name today from the list of candidates under consideration.

The decision of the ten-goal Easteern ace, which may mean his retirement for the balance of the 1934 season, is a consequence of his injury in one of the earlier test matches. He was thrown and suffered a slight concussion. It was the second such injury he had experienced within a year.

Not Ready for Competition.

Hitchcock returned to the saddle this week, after an interval of three weeks, but he is not in condition to resume competition. His physician advised him to confine himself to light exercise for another week.

Since the East-West series is scheduled to start on Saturday, September 8, Hitchcock felt he could no longer be considered a playing possibility and so notified Devereux Milburn, chairman of the Eastern selection committee.

Hitchcock's withdrawal paves the way for the East to nominate the sensational youthful quartet which has been riding together in the last four test matches. This team consists of Mike Phipps, Jimmy Mills, Ebby Gerry and Billy Post, riding in that order. It is a 29-goal combination of former college stars, who have played polo together so long that their team play is developed to a high degree.

Guest Bolsters "Whites."

Winston guest, who had not played Strengthened by the return of since July and who was not considered as a candidate for the eastern team until he declared himself in a few days ago, the "Whites" gave a setback to the hopes of the young "Blue" quartet by holding them to an-8-to-8 tie this evening in the fourth test match.

Another test match will be played at Sands Point Sunday.

Both Deans to Stay, Says Cardinal Owner

St. Louis, Aug. 29 (AP).—Rumors the Cardinals had decided to "split up" the Pitching Deans, Dizzy and Paul, before the 1935 season, were spiked today by President Sam Breadon.

"I will not consider selling or trading either of the Deans," Breadon said. "They both will be with the Cardinals next year."

The specific rumor which Breadon denied was that Paul would be or had been sold, for 1935 delivery, to Brooklyn for $50,000.

Cumberland's Legion Team Bows, 5-4

New Orleans Rallies in 7th to Score Four Runs in Title Series Opener.

CHICAGO, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—A four-run rally in the seventh inning today enabled New Orleans, Kestern champions, to defeat Cumberland, Md., Eastern hitleholders, 5-4, in the opening game of a three-game series for the American Legion junior baseball championship. A crowd of 10,000 attended.

The second game will be played tomorrow at Wrigley Field. If a third game is necessary, it will be played at Comiskey Park Friday.

Heidingsfelder, New Orleans right fielder, drove in the winning run in the seventh, climaxing a four-run rally which pulled the game out of the fire.

New Orleans Rallies.

The two ace pitchers of the rival teams, Jerry (Big Six) Burke, New Orleans, and Ronald Triplett, Cumberland, opposed each other. Burke gave up six hits and Triplett eight. Until the seventh, Triplett had allowed only one hit, but in that frame the Southerners bunched five hits for four runs. Triplett fanned eight, and Burke two.

Gallico

Traces Scarcity of Scotch Caber Throwers to Bootleg Whisky.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29 (Spl.).—You will not believe a word of this, I hardly credit it myself, but in all this vast metropolitan area there is not a Scotchman left able to toss the caber.

The metropolitan association here is staging a set of Scottish games on Labor Day the like of which has not been since Roderick Dhue slew Fingal. The chairman of the committee is a Caledonia chieftain named Jimmy Hooey, former piper to his royal highness the Prince of Wales and Ramsey MacDonald, and the chief admitted reluctantly that Tossing the Caber was not on the program because there was no one around who could hold one, much less throw it.

"The last time we had a caber toss," said the chief, "was three years ago. The caber fell over on two of the boys before they could get it away. The third managed to heave it, but the end came up and hit him in the chin, knocking all his teeth out, and he refused to have anything more to do with it. We got a bill for $87.00 for a set of false teeth from him, and the litigation isn't all settled yet."

How It's Done.

The caber is a large log, about half the size of a telegraph pole, some 16 to 20 feet long and weighing between 75 and 100 pounds. The toss, according to the Britannica, is made after a run, the caber being set up perpendicular with the heavy end up, by assistants on the spot indicated by the tosser, who sets one foot against it, grasps it with both hands and as soon as he feels it properly balanced, gives the word to the assistants to let go their hold.

He then raises the caber and gets both hands beneath the lower end. He then sets off on a run, lets the caber fall from his shoulder, and, as the heavy top end begins to fall forward, heaves up the end he has in his hands with all his strength. If the throw is successful after the heavy end hits the ground the lighter end contiues upward and the caber topples over and falls forward. If the caber falls backward toward the thrower, it is not considered a toss.

Chief Hooey sighed. "It was the poor quality of the Scotch whisky," he said. "You can not heave the caber on bootleg whisky. It will be another five years before there is another generation of caber-heavers brought up on the right kind of whisky in this country. There was Angus MacBirnie, the last time we had the caber throw, who was pinned beneath his caber when it fell over on him and there were none strong enough to lift it off him.

Sell It to Lumber Company.

"We finally had to sell it to a lumber company so they would come and fetch it away before we could get Angus out from under. All he said was 'Bad whuskey. Ye no can toss the caber on such whuskey as they are giving away these days.'"

Tossing the caber, I understand, began around the year 1211, when the English stormed MacGlennaght Fortress on the English border.

Roderick MacPherson, the Scotch captain, stationed ten stalwarts beneath the wall and as fast as the English climbed over and dropped down, the Scotchmen seized them by the legs and threw them back over the wall again. The English got tired first. The Scotch have been tossing the caber ever since.

The Post Sandlotter

THE G. P. O. Federals, winners of the Federal League title, will be one of the youngest teams to compete in the week-day interleague championship series. Fast, heads-up baseball has been characteristic of the play of the Federals all season and if they continue at their present gait it would not be surprising if they made their presence felt in the championship series in no uncertain way. Eddie Lisensky and Paul Lawson, former Eastern High dependables, have distinguished themselves by their consistent performances.

The Clarendon Juniors and Midgets will hold a special joint meeting at the home of Manager H. D. Smith tonight at 8 o'clock. All players from both teams are requested to report promptly. The Junior team would like to arrange a double-header for Labor Day, while the Midgets are also looking for competition. Phone Ray Wheeler at Clarendon 2412.

The strong Georgetown A. C. will journey to Flint Hill, Md., on Sunday for a tilt with the team of that town. Glenn Whitt, star right-hander, will be on the mound for the Georgetown nine, which will be striving for their twenty-fifth victory of the season.

Alexandre Browdy's Half Pints added two more victories to their string when they shut out the Boys Club Senators 9 to 0 and then defeated the Flash Aces in the night-cap by a 9-to-4 count. Jim Quigley pulled the iron man stunt, pitching and winning both games.

C. C. C. nine has canceled its game scheduled for today with the Potomac A. C.

Manager Snitz Nau has called a practice session for the District Association Umpires Team to be held today on the West Ellipse diamond at 5 p. m.

Manager Tony Burrutto, of the Blue Flame Valet nine, is still casting about for a game for Sunday with a strong unlimited team having the use of a diamond. He can be reached at Sterling 8937.

The Burroughs White Sox have a diamond and are seeking a game with a strong unlimited team for Sunday. Call Decatur 1647-J.

Fred Wesley, who held down second base for the Premier Cab nine of the National Capital League of The Post Association, finished up the season with a perfect fielding average. Participating in every game played by the Cabmen in the league, he handled every chance that came his way without a bobble.

Mexicans Meet Ft. Myer Polo Team Today

Visitors in Practice Play at West Potomac Park at 3:30.

THE Mexican Army polo team will play a practice match with the Third Cavalry four from Fort Meyer this afternoon at 3:30, at West Potomac Park. It will be the Mexicans' first public workout since their arrival in the United States as well as the first of a series of practice sessions in which the invaders will take part prior to the first engagement of its 3-game series with the American Army quartet, September 19.

All six of the Mexican squad will see action today, but the line-up used for the greater part of the time in its last matches will be used predominantly. Capt. Juan Gracia, a 5-goal player, will be playing No. 1; Capt. Antonio Nava, 5 goals, No. 2; Capt. Quintin Reyes, 4 goals, No. 3, and Capt. Antonio Perez, 5 goals, back. Capts. Miguel Zabalgoitia, 3 goals and Capt. Nic Chavez, 3 goals, will fill out other practice combinations.

The Mexicans engaged in stick-and-ball work yesterday at Fort Myer and appeared fast rounding into shape. The usual flaws following a brief lay-off were noticeable for the ponies still seemed in need of becoming further acclimated.

The Third Cavalry team will probably include among its numbers, Lieut. Gordon Rogers, Lieut. C. H. Reed, Maj. Jos. Swing and Cadet Howell Estes.

A. G. U. Beaten When 3-All Deadlock Is Broken in Ninth Inning.

IN a nip and tuck game in which the eventual result was always in doubt, the young G. P. O. Federals defeated the A. G. O. nine by the count of 4 to 3. By the victory G. P. O. became champions of the Federal League and earned for themselves the right to compete in the week-day interleague championshp series as representatives of their league.

G. P. O. hopped off to a two run lead in the first and second innings only to have a hard fighting A. G. O. nine come back to tie it up, not once, but twice. Undaunted, G. P. O. scored a run in the final inning to cop the game.

Phillips Hurls Well.

Phillips, Printing Office hurler, pitched good ball until the sixth inning when young Dick Lee was called upon to quell an A. G. O. uprising. No batter was able to get more than one hit while Simon was brilliant in the field.

2,000 to Seek Girl's Track Title Today

Georgetown Team to Defend Playgrounds Crown at Central.

"WE EXPECT at least 2,000 girls to vie for honors in our annual field and track meet tomorrow at Central Stadium," said Miss Maude N. Parker yesterday when interviewed at the boys' playground meet. Miss Parker, director of girls' activities, added that the girls' meet would have the additional attraction of the band from the National Training School for Boys.

Col. Claude D. Jones, superintendent of National Training School, will lead his boys into the stadium today at 9:30 o'clock to enliven the parade formtaion. The girls start their march 10:15 o'clock. Early arrivals will be entertained by several new scores introduced by the popular leader, John d'Andelet.

Commissioner Melvin Hazen was an interested spectator at the playground boys' meet yesterday and enthusiastically accepted the invitation of Miss Sibyl Baker and Miss Parker to attend the functions today.

Georgetown Defending.

Today will be the eleventh annual renewal of the girls' city championship meet. Georgetown Playground was the 1933 champion and is a strong bidder for the title this year.

Miss Parker has announced the following officials: Chief field judge, Abby Flynn; assistants, Katheline Fisher and Ruth Britt; running high jump, Virginia Nielson; throw for distance, Evelyn Sheridan; jump the brook, Grace Davis; Bean-bag target, Etta Weaver, assisted by Katherine Dulin; throw for accuracy, Anna Honanach; potato race, Jeannette Adamson, Elizabeth Jones, Emily Tilton; quoit throw, Marie McAuliffe; recorder, Dorothy Kelso.

Turner Angling For Marshall, George Bout

"Champion B" Offered $2,500 for Sept. 6 Meeting.

EVERETT MARSHALL having rendered himself inertly hors de combat through the medium of a swan dive out of the ring in a recent bout against wrestling champion A—Jeems Londos—de Turner, president of the "Marshall for Champion Club," is making a bold effort to give the blond beauty of the mat a crack at wrestling champion B—Ed (Don) George—at Griffith Stadium September 6.

So bold is Turner's effort to elect his candidate to office, that he is dangling a $2,500 guarantee along with an optional percentage of the gate receipts, before George for the match. Dangling 2,500 potatoes before any one, especially a wrestler, is bolding indeed, in this day and age of bread lines and alphabetical politics, but George is reported quite inured to having lucrative offers dangled before him.

George Is Shy.

It is said that Ray Fabiani, of Philadelphia, has dangled an even more lucrative number of potatoes for the match, and as a result, George is reported demanding a $3,000 guarantee and a larger slice of the gate receipts. That George will eventually capitulate, or that Turner will capitulate, is a 100-1 shot in the opinion of the gambling gentry associated with wrestling who are too smart to wager on the outcome of a bout, but will lay large odds on the signing of a bout.

Bennett-Groves Score Allegany Tennis Upset

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). One surprise marked the play in the Allegany County tennis tournament in progress here, when Ernest Bennett and Gerald Groves eliminated William and Percy Sloan, of Lonaconing, in a three-set match, 9—7, 4—6, 6—3, but in the four singles matches that were played, favorites were returned the winners.

Results in the singles were:

Robert Bane beat Thomas Bushey, 2—6, 6—3, 6—0; George Lottig beat Buddy Finan, 6—0, 6—2; Robert Chandlee beat Graham Ort, 6—4, 6—2, and Russell Ponton beat Robert Elias, of Frostburg, 6—2, 6—1.

Damascus Drops Final Tilt to Union Bridge, 9-3

Union Bridge, Md., Aug. 29 (Spl.). Union Bridge defeated Damascus in the final game of the regular schedule of the northern division of the Tri-County League, 9 to 3. The game was close until the eighth inning, when Union Bridge staked a batting rally that yielded five runs, which clinched the tilt. Damascus put over one run in the first inning and went scoreless the remainder of the game except in the eighth frame, when a rally was cut short with two runs.

Four Auburn Gridders Are Declared Ineligible

Auburn, Ala., Aug. 29 (AP).—A quartet of Alabama Polytechnic Institute football players, including a varsity end and three "promising" men, today were ruled ineligible for play this season by the Auburn faculty.

Coach Jack Meagher announced the ineligibles are Jack Kemp, end in two campaigns; Rupert Scott, sensational 1933 freshman; Duke Patterson, reserve half back last year, and Julius Watson, reserve guard.

Failure to pass the required number of hours in class rooms during the past scholastic year was given as the reason for barring the four.

Stocks Persist In Continuing Losing Trend

Decline Is Accelerated in Final Trading; Sales, 761,530 Shares.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Stocks resumed a slow downward drift today after failing to hold early gains. The decline was accelerated in the last few minutes of trading and final prices were mixed, with moderate losses predominating.

An early upturn was accompanied by an appreciable increase in the volume of trading. When that advance failed to carry through, the market lost friends among the trading element.

Confusion Over News.

Irregular and uncertain movements in commodities and bonds, as well as stocks, pointed to considerable confusion in the efforts of markets to interpret the day's news, especially Secretary Morgenthau's account of the New Deal finances and the apparent swing to the "left" by voters in the California Democratic primary.

A clear-cut response to the news also was lacking in foreign exchanges. The dollar eased against the French franc, but was firm against other European gold currencies. The British pound dropped more than 3 cents.

The stock market seemed to find a mild stimulus in the overnight news, for buying broadened out considerably around the opening and embraced most of the list. Meat packing and local traction issues were outstandingly firm.

On Losing List.

After forenoon gains had been erased, such prominent issues as U. S. Steel, General Motors, Bethlehem, J. I. Case, American Telephone, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, New York Central, Santa Fe, American Can, Western Union, Kennecott Copper and Consolidated Gas finished fractionally to more than a point lower.

Canadian gold shares were strong, with Dome and McIntyre closing more than a point higher. Armour of Illinois preferred, old, sold at a new 1934 top, as did Interborough Rapid Transit.

Turnover increased to 761,530 shares, compared with only 404,220 in the preceding session. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 stocks dipped five-tenths of a point to 73.6, having yielded in three days of reaction more than 2 points of last week's gains.

Peaks in Commodities.

The Moody Index of spot commodity prices touched a new 1934 peak at 156.2 compared with 155.3 yesterday, but there was no uniformity of movement in commodity markets.

Weakness in German and Japanese bonds, along with the sharp decline in the British pound, turned attention to foreign conditions.

Mid-week trade reports deferred hopes for any early season pick-up in business consequence. The Iron Age, estimating current steel operations at 19 per cent of capacity, the lowest since March, 1933, described the current situation in that industry as "discouraging."

The weekly Edison Electric Institute's report on power output showed a sizable decline compared with the preceding week, but an increase of 1.1 per cent compared with 1933.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Recent Government Policies Have Disturbed Business Without Adding to Chances of Success for the New Deal.

By Ralph West Robey.

Within the last few days developments in the field of the Government's relation to business have come so rapidly that it has been difficult to follow them. At least three are of outstanding importance. Any one of them, under more normal circumstances, would have been viewed as of sufficient significance to cause widespread comment and concern. The fact that they have received comparatively slight attention is compelling proof of the disturbed state of the business community at present.

First of these three developments was the order of the President reducing the hours of labor in the cotton garment trade. The order was for a 10 per cent reduction in hours without any change of wages. Its effect is to increase the rate of pay between 10 and 11 per cent.

Second of the developments was denial of the right of a company to move its plant in order to get better working conditions. The New York Regional Labor Board held that a company can not do this. Within the last week this decision has been upheld by a New York court.

FERA Will Continue Policy Of Caring for the Strikers.

Last of the developments was the announcement that striking workers would be taken care of by the Federal Emergency Relief Administration. This is not a new policy, but because of the threatened strikes of unusual magnitude the declaration has attained a new significance. For, try as one may, one can not help but feel it is one thing to take care of the employes of a few scattered small companies and another thing to throw the resources of the FERA back of a strike involving hundreds of thousands of men.

Now in each of these developments, it may be admitted, there has been a certain amount of rationalization back of the action taken by the Government agent. The order in the cotton garment trade, it may be assumed, was given, not because the President wanted to boss this industry, but because he felt something must be done to help this group of employes. In the decision of the labor board, too, it is reasonable to assume, there was no desire to keep business firms from moving from one location to another, but merely a wish to keep organizations from undercutting the NRA. And the FERA in coming to the aid of strikers has no desire, one may take for granted, to foment strikes, but only to prevent starvation and needless suffering.

These Reasons Do Not Offset The Bad Effects of the Action.

Such bits of rationalization, however, do not remove the disturbing qualities of the actions. Just consider what these three developments mean in the aggregate from a point of view of the business owner. He now sees that, as a member of NRA, he, virtually without warning, may have the labor cost going into his product materially increased by order of the President. Secondly, he sees that he is not free to move his plant in an attempt to better his position if the labor board decides that such moving would go contrary to the interest of the group it represents. Finally, he sees that should his employes decide to strike for better conditions—even for conditions which an impartial observer would declare were unwarranted—the Government would add to the strength of the strikers by giving them funds.

Under such conditions it is not easy to make plans for the future. There is neither the certainty of costs, which is essential to quoting prices in advance of manufacture, nor the confidence that leads business men to increase production.

And on the other side there is nothing gained by the Government in creating such uncertainty. Not a one of these policies is essential to the successful operation of the New Deal. They are, rather, the type of policies that immensely increases the possibility of ultimate failure in the attempt of the Administration to make a lasting improvement in the welfare of American labor.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 84.4 Level

Trading Fails to Establish Definite Trend; Sales, $9,342,000.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—There were a few strong and weak spots in today's bond market, but the list, as a whole, closed with no definite trend apparent.

Transfers totaled $9,342,000, par value, against $8,214,000 yesterday, and the Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues was unchanged at 84.4.

Secretary Morgenthau's address denying inflation and his estimates of the New Deal's costs evoked much interest and argument in the financial district. The loans market, however, was not particularly stirred.

Gold "Profit" Statement.

While the Treasury official said it was expected the gold "profit" of some $2,800,000,000 would be used ultimately to cut the National debt, it was not anticipated by banking circles that any such step would be taken in the near future. The Secretary's speech was viewed as timely because of the Government's financing operations during the next several weeks involving more than $1,700,000,000.

Government bonds were quiet and fairly steady with the majority showing gains of 1-32d to 8-32ds of a point. Home Owners Loan 3s, however, were quite active at a loss of 4-32ds.

The rails were extremely narrow, generally, although liens of Denver & Rio Grande pushed up on announcement that July 1, interest on two issues, which had been deferred, would be paid.

Utilities and Industrials.

Most prime investment utilities and industrials moved in a fractional range, but Portland General Electric bonds were given a whirl with the 5s jumping 8 points to 94 and the 4½s advancing 3½ to 45¾.

Studebaker 6s moved up 1⅞ to 43 and Otis Steel 6s gained 1¾ at 69. The majority of steel loans, after their yesterday's flurry, did virtually nothing.

In the foreign section German obligations continued to decline. The Reich 5½s dropped to 27 and the 7s were down 2¼ at 37¼, both record lows. Japanese government loans developed their heaviest tone in a number of months with the 6½s falling 3 points to 86½ and the 5½s losing 1⅝ to 74. The sagging of the Japanese group was attributed partly to selling from London, although no especial reason was given for the British liquidation.

Early Advance Of Curb Halted In Late Dealing

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—A forenoon advance on the curb market today was halted by moderate selling and prices closed somewhat irregular.

Early advances, which ranged from fractions to a point or more, centered principally in metals, packing shares and various specialties. Most of the offerings appeared in the last hour and volume increased during that period.

Lake Shore closed at the best price of the day at 59, up 2⅝ points. Swift & Co. and Swift International canceled early gains, which sent both issues into new high territory for this year. Shares of Puget Sound preferred also fell back after an early extension of their advances yesterday.

American Gas & Electric preferred dropped about 2 points, while Singer Manufacturing pushed ahead as much. Libby, McNeil & Libby rose a fraction in volume dealings. Other firm spots included Flintkote A, Atlantic Coast Fisheries, Columbia Pictures, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams, Hiram Walker, Technicolor, Hollinger Gold, Sunshine Mining and Wright Hargreaves.

London Fails to Find Inflation in U. S. Plan

London, Aug. 29 (AP).—Financial London discussed with interest today the Washington speech last night of Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and could find no signs of inflation in details of the address cabled here.

Financial writers stressed the point that if gold profits are to be used to write off indebtedness that is the "reverse" of inflation.

Ford Plant to Reopen After Vacation Holiday

Detroit, Aug. 29 (AP).—Ford Motor Co. officials said today that the plant, now closed for the usual summer "vacation," would reopen next Tuesday. The seasonal lay-off, they said, is being reduced from the customary two or three weeks to eight days.

Washington Business Angles

By J. R. Brackett.
(Associated Press.)

Present indications are that initial margin requirements under the securities exchange act will run closer to 25 points than to 45.

This is because of the provision in the act which permits extension of credit on the basis of 100 per cent of the market price on July 1, 1933, if that is not greater than 75 per cent of the current market price.

Suppose, for example, a stock is now selling for $100 a share, under the 45-point requirement, the broker could extend $55 in credit. But if that stock was priced at $25 on July 1, the broker could give $75.

An examination of various tabulations of stock prices as of today compared with July 1, 1933, shows that the margin may be extended on the latter basis in most instances.

Had the price of the $100 stock been $75 on July 1, the 45 point requirement would hold since the cash requirement would be $55 under this provision, compared to $75 under the second, or 100 per cent of the July, 1933, price.

If the $25 stock had advanced to $160 the broker would require $40 cash, or 25 per cent of the current market price, since $25, or the lowest price, would be less than 25 per cent of market.

According to the interpretation of one official authority, this situation conceivably could require the raising of the margin requirements as stated in the law.

This, of course, depends on how high prices are on October 1, when margins will be fixed by the Federal Reserve Board.

If they should decline considerably, it might be advisable even to lower the requirements. In all likelihood, however, the 45-25 basis of the law will be followed.

Gossip of New York Markets

By W. R. Huff.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Weakness of the pound sterling and strength of the gold currencies in terms of the dollar confused Wall street today.

It was clear that important financial circles here were inclined to agree with the interpretation in London that Secretary Morgenthau's remarks last night were anything but inflationary, despite the effort of some quarters in Paris to find inflationary implications in the Treasury Secretary's statement that it was proposed to use the profit from gold devaluation, ultimately, to reduce the public debt.

United States Government bonds were a trifle higher. It was recalled that use of profit from gold devaluation to reduce the public debt would be followed in the footsteps of the French treasury, when the franc was devalued in 1928. That step was regarded in France then as of a distinctly "sound money" nature.

The pound dropped in terms of the dollar more than two cents to close at $5.04, and was even weaker against the French franc, yielding approximately 40 centimes in Paris to touch 75.40 francs, a record low by a wide margin.

One theory advanced in usually well-informed quarters in Wall street was that these curious movements reflected buying or French Francs by the U. S. Treasury, to be converted into pounds with which to buy silver in the London market. The French franc rose moderately in terms of the dollar to about the outgoing gold point.

This theory was based on the thought that the Treasury was concerned with offering some support to the pound in relation to the gold currencies. Heretofore, the Treasury has sought pounds directly, and that appeared to react unfavorably on the pound in Paris.

It was suggested that bearishness on the dollar in Paris may have arisen from a report that the Treasury would retire its $525,000,000 of 1½ per cent certificates maturing on September 15, with cash, which would carry a possible implication of an unsatisfactory condition of the market for refunding. Well informed quarters here, however, placed no credence in the report, and felt that the Treasury could easily finance the maturing certificates in the usual way if it desired.

Duke Power Votes Dividend On Common

Butterick Company Reports Net Loss of $33,959 in Six Months.

New York, Aug. 29 (AP).—Directors of the Duke Power Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 75 cents on the common stock, payable October 1, to stock of record September 15. This places the stock on a $3 annual basis against $4 paid previously.

A net loss of $33,959 for the six months ended June 30 was reported by the Butterick Co. against net profit of $49,116, or 27 cents a share, in the first half of last year.

Wool Market.

Boston, Aug. 29 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—Asking prices remain unchanged on Ohio and similar fleece wools. Fine Ohio Delaine wool was quoted at around 30 cents in the grease. Around 31 cents in the grease was being asked for strictly combing 58s, 60s, ¼ blood Ohio fleeces. Strictly combing medium quality bright fleeces were being held at 32 cents for 56s, ¾ blood, and at 30@31 cents for 48s, 50s, ¼ blood. These prices nominal, as there was no trading in these lines and only a few inquiries were being received.

Wheat Values Reverse Trend, Rise Sharply

Speculative Interest Revival Is Responsible for Price Jump.

Chicago, Aug. 29 (AP).—A revival of bullish speculative interest in the grain market today was responsible for sharp advances of prices, although profit-taking sales held the upward trend in check.

At the peak of buying wheat had gained as much as 1¾ cents a bushel and corn 1⅞, but closing prices showed selling on the bulge developed. Wheat registered a net increase of ⅝ to 1⅛ cents for the day, and corn was up ¾ to 1⅛.

The bullish sentiment was shaped largely by a combination of strength in foreign markets, unfavorable crop reports from northern regions of the Canadian wheat belt, where frost has occurred, and some inflation gossip that was bandied about the pits.

Wheat Closes Higher.

Wheat finished at 1.02¾@1.02⅞ for September deliveries, 1.03¾@1.03⅞ for new December, and 1.05¼@1.05⅝ for May. September corn reached 79 cents, December, 80⅜@80¼, and May, 83⅝@83½. Oats showed a net gain of ½ to ⅞. Rye was ⅝ to 1¾ higher, and barley was unchanged to 2¾ up.

Liverpool wheat closed 1⅛ pence higher because of crop damage news from Canada and Australia. Winnipeg was up ¼ to ¼-cent on heavy export buying that was offset only partly by hedging sales in connection with the crop movement.

The official Canadian crop summary confirmed reports of frost damage to wheat in northern Alberta and Saskatchewan. This was particularly disquieting here because it was pointed out the northern territory was the only part of western Canada that has been credited with even a fair crop prospect.

Authoritative advices indicated wheat had been affected both as to quality and quantity.

Inflation Talk.

The inflation talk came in the wake of Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau's speech.

Commission houses were active buyers in the corn pit, stimulated apparently by frost reports from Iowa and Illinois and by strength in hogs. Eastern houses took profits on the upturn.

No. 2 yellow cash corn sold at 3 cents over September, the highest premium on the crop, and this tended to bolster the market. A fresh price gain in hogs also was a factor.

All deliveries of lard and bellies futures sold at new highs for the season, the removal of hedges against shipping sales of lard being a factor.

Apples of Virginia Improve in Quality

Richmond, Aug. 29 (AP).—The apple crop of Virginia this year is small in volume, but good in quality, J. H. Meek, director of the division of markets, said today after a trip to the commercial fruit growing sections of the State.

About 1,680,000 barrels will be gathered, as compared with a five-year average of 2,680,000, he said.

Apple growers are putting out better packs than ever before, he said. On his trip he discussed with growers and other interested persons at meetings at Roanoke, Lovingston, Charlottesville, Staunton and Winchester, changes in Virginia's standards for apples, particularly requirements for Virginia domestic grades and for open packs and bulk apples.

World Tin Consumption Gains in '34

Use of Metal Pushed Up 22 Per Cent; Output Is Increased.

New York, Aug. 29.—World tin consumption for the year ended June, 1934, shows an increase of 22 per cent over the preceding 12 months, although decreases are recorded in recent months, according to the current bulletin of The Hague Statistical Office of the International Tin Research and Development Council.

Tin consumption during the first six months of 1934 is slightly above the same period of 1933, the respective figures being 58,774 tons and 58,394 tons. This is a considerable increase over 1932, when the first six months' consumption was 53,492 tons.

A slight decrease occurred in the second quarter of this year as compared to 1933, and in June of this year consumption was 13 per cent under June, 1933.

Tin plate production of the world during the first six months of 1934 shows an increase of approximately 12 per cent over the same period of 1933. The automobile industry increased substantially in volume, the production in 1934 being 2,243,986 units compared with 1,402,948 in 1933 for the comparative six months' periods under review, resulting in an increased tin consumption of approximately 2,500 tons.

	1933.	1934.
United States	41.459	55.934
United Kingdom	17.704	20.451
Germany	9.035	11.128
France	9.765	9.608
U. S. S. R.	2.909	4.999
Italy	3.500	3.900
British India	2.054	1.980

Daily Oil Yield Is Decreased 41,254 Barrels

Tulsa, Okla., Aug. 29 (AP).—Although Texas crude oil production continued to rise last week, reduction elswhere brought the total United States output down 41,254 barrels from 2,592,891 to 2,551,637 barrels a day, the Oil and Gas Journal says.

The Texas increase was from 1,076,757 to 1,084,307, with east Texas showing an advance from 485,115 to 498,220 barrels.

There was a reduction from 517,240 to 477,050 barrels in Oklahoma, and California production fell from 508,000 to 495,000 daily.

Kansas increased output from 134,530 to 135,040 barrels; Eastern areas, including Michigan, hiked production from 131,024 to 133,274 barrels and the Rocky Mountain region boosted its output from 98,230 to 99,700 barrels.

Japan's Quotas Hit U. S.-British Oils

Tokyo, Aug. 29 (U.P.).—The British-owned Rising Sun Oil Co. and the American Standard Oil Co., protested to the ministry of commerce today against reduction in their prospective semiannual gasoline sales quota in Japan.

It was understood the Standard Oil quota had been cut 10 per cent to a new total of 26,000,000 gallons. The Rising Sun firm was allotted approximately 39,000,000 gallons.

Immediately after the protests, the commerce department conferred with representatives of the navy and war ministries regarding policies governing Japan's plans to assist domestic production. The foreign companies asked whether the government will permit the establishment of a new refinery in Japan under foreign direction.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Ladies, Quiet Please — By Harry J. Tuthill

WELL JO, ANY NEWS FROM WALL ST.? ALL AFTERNOON I HAD THE FEELING THIS WAS THE DAY THAT OIL MAN WOULD GET HERE TO BUY IKE'S LAND.
TESSIE GOT ON HER HIGH-HORSE THIS MORNING WHEN I HARPENED TO SAY SOMETHING IN AN OFFHAND WAY ABOUT THAT FAKE TELEGRAM SHE HAD IKE SEND HERE TO HIMSELF.
REG. U.S. PAT. OFF. 8-30
TROUBLE WITH TESSIE! MY WORD! WELL, I GUESS IT WAS JUST A FEW SNAPPY REMARKS, EH?
RIGHT AFTER BREAKFAST I CALLED UP YOUR BROTHER'S WIFE, SALLY, AND MENTIONED THE TELEGRAM. I SPOKE IN A VERY LOW TONE, BUT TESSIE IS ALL EARS AND SHE HEARD EVERY WORD.
IKE PRACTICALLY INSISTED ON ME TAKING CARE OF HIS MONEY IF HE GETS IT. I WOULDN'T WANT ANY TRIVIAL AFFAIR TO....
HA, YOU WOULDN'T CALL IT TRIVIAL IF YOU HEARD SOME OF THE THINGS SHE TOLD ME ABOUT THE BUNGLES TOO. THINGS I DIDN'T EVEN KNOW.
WELL JO, A FEW WORDS MORE OR LESS DOESN'T HURT ANYBODY. I JUST KNOW EVERYTHING HAS ALL BLOWN OVER BY NOW EH..?
YOU MEAN I SHOULD ADMIT THAT TELEGRAM, THAT MADE YOU GALLOP OVER TO YOUR BROTHER'S HOUSE TO BRING IKE AND TESSIE HERE, WAS NO FAKE? I SHOULD ADMIT THAT TO HER! HE? HA HA!

JOE JINKS, Featuring Dynamite Dunn — Quick Change — By Llanuza

Walt Mason, Himself

The Fiery Furnace.

"Ah, this season is a hummer," said the farmer of the West. "It's the most ferocious summer, it's the worst by every test. Day by day the sun is blazing in a brazen, cloudless sky, and we farmers won't be raising any corn or oats or rye. Everything is burned and wilted, everything is sere and dead, and our bank accounts are tilted so they're showing in the red. Overhead that solar heater keeps the countryside dismayed; to the poorhouse we shall teeter in a long and sad parade. You behold our stricken cattle; they are looking frail and ill, you may hear their dry bones rattle as they struggle down the hill. Down the sunbaked slope they totter, filled with trouble and despair; they are looking for some water and the water isn't there. All the cistern pumps are rusty, all the pumps around the camp, and the river beds are dusty, and the wells not even damp. You behold our valued horses once so full of pep and pride; they are animated corpses, they are merely bone and hide. Every day we see them shrinking, every day they thinner grow, for they had to cut out drinking six or seven weeks ago. Like the cattle they are hunting for a streamlet deep and black, while the weather man is shunting all the rainstorms off the track. So we sit upon our fences and we lean against our gates, driven almost from our senses we denounce the wicked fates. But some night we'll hear it raining from a dark and cloudy sky, and we'll shut off all complaining in the twinkling of an eye. We shall wake up in the morning to behold the water flow, optimistic, gay and scorning all the fears we used to know."

The Federal Diary

(Trade-mark Applied For)

During Morgan Baker's vacation the Federal Diary is being edited by Robert F. Whitney.

For this purpose small free balloons are sent up four times a day and carefully watched with a theodolite—an instrument for measuring their height and the velocity they are carrier laterally by the wind.

On some occasions, if wind conditions are right, the balloon remains within view sufficiently long so that winds up to 14,000 feet can be calculated from the observations.

However, usually the balloon is out of sight at about 10,000 feet. Results are sent out for each 1,000 feet above the ground telling the direction and velocity of the wind.

The complete series of observations on a balloon consume from 15 to 30 minutes, depending on how long its remains visible. About the same time is required for the mathematical calculations which give the final results.

U. S. Employes Compensation Commission Lodge, No. 39, American Federation of Government Employes, has reelected three of its officers to serve for the next year. They are Royal W. Green, president; Miss Marion Caswell, secretary, and Raymond F. Belair, treasurer.

Four new vice presidents were named. They are William G. Ennen, T. S. Wilcher, Jerry E. Gill and Kenneth E. Stone. Clarence Eckert was elected sergeant at arms.

In accepting his reelection as president, Mr. Green thanked the officers and members of the lodge for their cooperation in increasing the group's membership during the past year.

The Civil Service Commission yesterday announced an open competitive examination for the positions of game management agent, $2,300 to $2,900 a year, and deputy game management agent, $1,440 to $1,800.

E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, said last night that Government workers would be benefited by staggered hours except for one factor: "staggered hours simply means longer hours."

To support this he pointed out that workers at the Public Works Administration go to work at 8 a. m. and are supposed to be off at 3:30 p. m. But this does not work out, he said, as many are required to work until 4:30 or later.

"In other words," he said, "staggering results in overtime and the overtime inevitably results in a return to a peak traffic load. Employes want to cooperate, but naturally they don't want to get into a longer hour proposition which will be the inevitable result of hour staggering."

The number of persons on the reemployment list of the Civil Service Commission is 837, as this week began.

U. S. to Seek Rheem's Cash

Tax Claim May Leave Creditors Out, Despite Court Ruling.

A petition asking that payment of dividends to the general creditors of Edmund D. Rheem, onetime executive head of the real estate mortgage firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey, be held up pending a determination of the Government's contention that it has a prior claim to the money was filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Lewis M. Milbourne, deputy collector of internal revenue, filed the papers. He said that Rheem owed the Government approximately $116,409 in back income taxes. A schedule, filed with the petition, listed taxes running back to 1923.

Justice Joseph W. Cox last week signed an order authorizing the trustee in bankruptcy for Rheem to pay his general creditors 57 cents per $100, there being but $30,000 to meet claims running up into the millions.

If the Treasury's petition is granted, the creditors will receive nothing. Rheem is now serving a term at Lorton.

G. O. P. Lays Plans To Oppose Byrd

Crupper Confers With Virginia Leaders.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 29 (AP).—Plans for a vigorous campaign in behalf of former Postmaster L. C. Page, Republican candidte, to oppose Senator Byrd in the November election, were discussed today with Col. Joseph L. Crupper, G. O. P. National committeeman from the State.

During the day Col. Crupper conferred with former Representative Menalcus Lankford, Maj. Clinton L. Wright, clerk of the United States Court; Lester S. Parsons, chairman of the Second District Republican committee; Gerould M. Rumble, city chairman and Second District candidate for the House of Representatives, and Mr. Page.

"We talked over the situation at considerable length," Col. Crupper said, "but no definite campaign plan has been worked out."

Staples to Fight Milk Injunction

Richmond, Aug. 29 (AP).—Attorney General A. P. Staples and his assistant, Maj. Edwin H. Gibson, will appear in Judge A. D. Dabney's court in Charlottesville tomorrow to argue against the granting of an injunction restraining the State milk commission from exercising its authority in that area.

The application has been filed by four Charlottesville attorneys representing independent milk producers in that area. They oppese on increase in price, one of the steps in the regulation of the dairy industry in that city, as proposed by the milk commission and its local Charlottesville board.

Two Brothers Killed In Crash of Airplane

Bonifay, Fla., Aug. 29 (AP).—Two brothers, Paul Lindsay, 32, and Harold B. Lindsay, 25, of Panama City, Fla., were killed when their airplane crashed during a squall near here late yesterday.

The brothers were returning from a business trip. The plane fell on the farm of W. B. Driver. Driver said the brothers apparently were having engine trouble.

Radio Waves and Ripples

By George M. Adams, Jr.

BILL COYLE, WMAL announcer who has distinguished himself in one thing after another since he came to N. B. C. last October, will emerge in a new role September 20, when he starts a football prognosticating series under local commercial sponsorship.

Dramatic highlights of local and National games, predictions, pregame dope with last-minute chatter about line-ups, and a full roster of local and National scores will be handled by this one-man stick of dynamite known as Billy Coyle.

Bill's sponsors have their own ideas about the handling of the series, to be heard from WMAL Thursdays and Saturdays at 6:30 p. m., but a lad who has put Secretary Morgenthau, Tuscarora Indians, Army generals, and various other things of that sort on the air can be trusted to handle his own program.

Bill played half back on the football team at Trinity College in Hartford, Conn.; he has conducted his "Sporting Vista" with a different sponsor for over three months and he has more energy, pep, enthusiasm and "go" to the square inch than any dozen announcers from here to the coast despite the fact he is but 23. So this should be a swell local spot.

Incidentally, rumor has it that N. B. C. will broadcast local college football games this season. G. W., C. U. and the U. of Md., for instance. More on this later.

SOMETHING approaching the nature of a tussle, a contest, mark you! . . . has been touched off by the mere presence of a corsetted obelisk.

Strife, competition, and a breathless public should attend the announcement that Ted Kimball, WMAL's carrot-topped announcer, has decided to wait until the scaffolding around the Washington Monument has reached the top—some 555 feet and a few spare inches. Then, with the sanction of N. B. C. and the cheers of the multitude in his red ears, he will broadcast the chattering of his own teeth.

"I'd like to challenge Bob Trout to a race to the top," he said yesterday. "The first one who gets there saying, 'Hello Momma, hello Poppa, great broadcast!' "

Informed of this, Mr. Trout, who is contemplating a cruise to the West Indies on September 13, said: "What! I'll challenge him to a race up and down the Monument blindfolded!"

Bob is expected back from his cruise about September 26. If the Monument is sufficiently corsetted by that time he and Ted may fight it out.

JUST as the Treasury's genial begoggled Secretary, hemmed in by three network microphones, started his broadcast, the clock in his office bonged out eight disheartening notes.

Over in a corner stood Ted Ostenkamp, WOL's boilermaker, guarding an ABS mike . . . Billy Coyle, N. B. C.'s clarion tone artist and Bob Trout, C. B. S.'s Monument observer, were opposite.

Billy's voice, full-throated and powerful, cut the air like a knife. Ted's was soft like Bing Crosby's. Bob's was soft with that faint feathery quality that makes "WJSV, Alexandria, Va.," sound like Venice. Speaking close to their mikes, there was no babble or crosscurrent of sounds.

After the Secretary's voice had gone to some 129 stations (total of three networks), he was told the broadcast was one of the most successful of its kind. Smiling, he mopped his shining brow . . . wondering why no one thought to muffle the clock.

THE crisp, arid voice of former President Hoover will be heard for the first time on the air since he left the White House when he speaks over an N. B. C. network Wednesday, September 5, at a Community Chest luncheon in Los Angeles.

Breaking an approximate two years' silence, Mr. Hoover will touch off no political dynamite, but will dwell on California community welfare plans. On the same spot, broadcast at 4 p. m., will be walrus-faced Irvin S. Cobb, the fat humorist.

THOUGH deprived of "communiques" by officers at the War Department yesterday, "war" is imminent and Harris B. Hull, war correspondent for The Post, will discuss the need for "communiques" and general battle strategy with Brig. Gen. Alfred T. Smith, chief of Military Intelligence, tonight at 9:45 p. m. over WMAL. Fifteen minutes after he finishes with the general, Harris will do his Postilion broadcast.

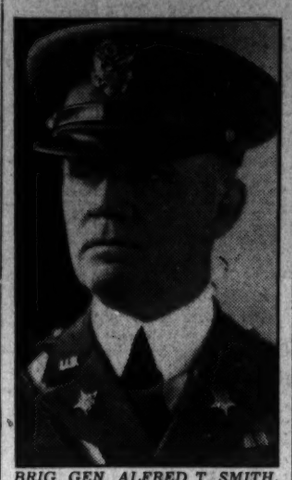
Here's a good criticism we heard of Hull recently. "Whether you like him or not," said the person, "he compels you to listen or shut him off."

Whitecaps.

WRC—"Stars in the Summer Sky," talk by Miss Helen Stohlman, under auspices of D. C. public schools, 1:30 p. m.; Arturo Toscanini, conducting symphonic music during Salzburg Festival in short wave broadcast from Austria, 2:15 p. m.; Milton Douglass, barytone, singing "Panama," "Moon About Town," "The Changing of the Guard," and "Chloe," 3:30 p. m.; Danny Malone, Irish tenor, 6:30 p. m.; Lynwood "Schoolboy" Rowe, American League pitcher, with Rudy Vallee, 7 p. m.

WMAL—Saint-Saens' Benediction Nuptials played by Archer Gibson, organist, Echoes of the Palisades, 9:30 p. m.; Brig Gen. Alfred T. Smith, Chief of Military Intelligence, interviewed by Harris B. Hull, The Postilion, 9:45 p. m.; Milwaukee Lyric Glee Club singing Schubert's "Omnipotence" and "The Soldiers Chorus" from "Faust" with the Milwaukee Philharmonic Orchestra, 11 p. m.

WJSV—New York baseball contest, 2 p. m.; stirring tale of a girl dude rancher's battle with a terrifying outlaw, "Bar X Days and Nights," 8 p. m.; Thelma Todd, erstwhile Bay State school marm now a movie star, with "Hollywood" spot, 9 p. m.; Chester C. Davis, Agricultural Administrator, speaking on "The AAA Inventory and Outlook," 9:45 p. m.



BRIG. GEN. ALFRED T. SMITH, Chief of Military Intelligence, who will be interviewed tonight over WMAL by Harris B. Hull, the Postilion. Hull, soon to leave for New Jersey, where war games are now under way, will discuss with Gen. Smith aspects of the maneuvers. First of three N. B. C. network programs on the "war," listeners will hear Hull at 9:45.

Couch's Resignation Is Accepted by RFC

The resignation of Harvey Couch, of Arkansas, as a member of the directorate of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was accepted when Mr. Couch attended his final board meeting yesterday. He left later for his home in Pine Bluff, Ark.

Chairman Jesse Jones and other members of the board eulogized the retiring director in voting to accept his resignation.

McNaught Syndicate, Inc., N. Y. 8-30-34

Apple orchards spread throughout the Midwest in pioneer days largely through the efforts of one man—a man who made it his mission in life to go about distributing apple seeds to settlers. It made little difference to him whether his "customers" paid him for the seeds; he was ready to accept anything, often nothing, for his wares.

He came to be known as Johnny Appleseed, although his real name was Jonathan Chapman. He was friend alike to white men and Indians, and among the latter was considered a great medicine man because of herbs he gave the natives.

Although he tramped and canoed through the wild country for 40 years he never carried a gun. He dressed in typical frontier style, except that he never wore shoes or boots, always going barefooted despite the danger of snakes.

His was a job well done, for even today in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa are apple orchards which were started decades ago through the efforts of Johnny Appleseed.

When hot water is poured into a thick glass, it heats the inside of the glass while the outside is still cool. The heat expands the inside of the glass, causing an internal stress which often causes the glass to crack. A thin glass stands hot water better because it heats through very quickly, and expansion is uniform throughout.
